The agreement was reached shortly after midnight and arrangements were immediately made to have it drawn up and signed. This was slow work, however, and it was after 2 o'clock when the conferees separated. The democrats gained nearly every point they contended for and the republican representatives, Lieutenant Governor John Marshall, General Dan Lindsey and Attorney David Fairleigh, gave assurances that the agreement would be accepted by Governor Taylor to-

The agreement provides that in order to leave no question as to the title of William Goebel and J. C. W. Beckham to the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, respectively, the general assembly shall pass a resolution in joint assembly validating the acts on that subject, since the legislature has been prevented by troops from holding its regular sessions at Frankfort. A Thief's Cleverness.

We do not remember to have seen for a long time a more curious case of a thief's cleverness than that which was recorded at Clerkenwell. Solomon Buffler, who, with a companion, was convicted of burglary in a jeweler's shop, managed to conceal two diamond rings in spite of the most thorough search by the police, and contrived to pass one of them away to his wife when he was in the cells, "putting it into her mouth by means of his tongue when kissing her." The other he kept under his tongue all the time he was under arrest, and it would probably never have been found at all if his companion had not exposed him in court, and so induced the judge to order a careful inspection of his mouth.
