President Taft Has Faith

In a Proper Revision of the Tariff.

The president has all along advocated free iron ore, and the House bill makes it free. The Finance Committee made the duty 25 cents a ton, and it was supposed that, of course, the Democrats would join with the progressive Republicans to defeat the committee's amendment, but, on the contrary, a majority of the minority voted for the duty of 25 cents, and from their expressions would have urged an even higher duty had they been in control of the situation.
In the case of lumber it was generally supposed that the Democrats would stand with progressive Republicans and support the amendment offered by Senator McCumber, a member of the Finance Committee, who sought to make lumber free. Instead, a majority of the Democrats voted against the McCumber amendment and will doubtless support the Finance Committee amendment putting on a duty of $1.50 a thousand feet and would maintain the Dingley duty of $2 were they able to control the situation.
Senator Bacon who is outspoken in his advocacy of "tariff, for revenue only," has proposed a greatly increased duty on long staple cotton and will doubtless command the support of a majority of the Democrats when the proposition is reached. In the case of the sugar schedules several Democrats voted to maintain the Dutch color standard and against decreasing the differential. Senator McEmery spoke against any reduction of the duties.
When the agricultural schedules were reached most of the progressive Republicans voted for increased duties on agricultural products, and it is confidently expected that Democrats and progressive Republicans alike will endeavor to retain the duty on hides and even to put it as high as in the Dingley law.
In a word, it has become obvious that were the organization in the Senate overthrown, the majority, composed of Democrats for the most part with a few progressive Republicans, would play ducks and drakes with the tariff bills that they would maintain or even increase the duties on those products of certain Eastern States mercilessly.
In the estimation of the president, they would make a thoroughly inconsistent tariff bill, which the House would refuse absolutely to accept, and the result would be a session prolonged throughout the summer and an ultimate result which would satisfy no one.
On the other hand, President Taft believes that in dealing with a well organized and responsible majority he can present arguments which will prevail when the tariff bill reaches the conference stage and that—and this is all-important—such concessions as he secures through the Senate conferees, both personally and as a result of the influence of the House, will be through the power of the Aldrich organization accepted by the Senate. Were the organization to lose control of the Senate, there would in his estimation be no assurance that his work as a conferee would amount to anything as a condition of Democracy and a few Republicans would probably prove unable or unwilling to uphold the conferees.
Not only have the Democrats proven the sincerity of their advocacy of tariff revision downward, but they have exhibited their usual inability to stand together and their customary willingness to subordinate everything to petty political advantage, to devote their energies to disrupting the Republicans and grasping temporary political glory rather than to promoting what they deem a proper revision—one that would be beneficial to the country at large.—Globe Democrat.

A National Apple Show

We Need More Wheat

James J. Hill, chairman of the Great Northern board of directors, visited the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition buildings today. Discussing the recent wheat corner, he said:

"It is a mistake to say James A. Patten cornered the wheat market. Here is merely a case of a man taking advantage of an opportunity. It has been but a few years since it was estimated that the average consumption of wheat per annum in this country was six bushels, but now the experts figure that it is seven bushels and some pounds. The census 1910 will show that we have a population of 90,000,000 which will mean that will require for our own use 630,000,000 bushels hereafter."

Miss Myrtle Poissal returned home this week from Fairbury where she completed her course in Commercial college in that city.

Mrs. G. W. Fairfield, who has spent some months visiting the family of H. C. McMaken left Tuesday to visit her daughter in Omaha.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dean, of Maryville, Mo., father and mother of Mrs. J. E. Douglas, left for their home yesterday after a week spent in this city.

Miss Bertina Jackson, one of the bright young ladies of this city, left Monday evening for Grand Island, Neb., where she will attend a Commercial college.

We are glad to note that Joseph Fitzgerald, who has been seriously ill for some time, has sufficiently improved to be out for a buggy ride. His many friends hope for his rapid recovery.

In George Washington's Time

There was no talk of adulteration and grocery stores sold only staples—table delicacies were few and far between. Well, this store for one is old fashioned as to its ideas of purity, new style in that it has on hand the best of everything for the table brought from the marts of the world. We would like to name you among our patrons.
