OCTOBER 14, 1909

There is a future, but the average democratic editor never looks beyond the end of his nose, whether because of the glow thereon or the weakness of eyesight, has never been determined.

It is on the sound foundation of accomplished results that the republican party of Nebraska can successfully appeal to the people to support the candidates presented by the party for public service of the highest character.

Leutenant Governor Hopewell is contemplating entering the fight for the republican nomination for governor, the attorney general having decided that the law which makes other state officers ineligible for that office does not apply to lieutenant governor.

And now Peary is going to try to prove that Dr. Cook did not discover the north pole. Be that as it may, the public has discovered in Mr. Peary an undesirable citizen. Somehow the American people have no use for a sorehead, and that is what the north pole controversy has developed.

When Sheriff Quinton fails to account for the funds that have passed through his hands as sheriff of Cass county, than it is time to accuse him of dishonesty and not before. When his report shows that he holds funds belonging to the people and refuses to turn those funds over, that it is time enough to talk business.

A dispatch from Omaha in yesterday's paper states Charles O. Lobeck of that city is getting ready to launch his boom for governor. The friends of Mayor Dahlman are not worried very much over the matter and say "Wait till Jim get started, he'll set a pace that will surely tire Mr. Lobeck and send Shallenberger to the discard."

"Babe" Towne, the husky catcher for the Sioux City base ball club and Tommy Fairweather the popular secretary of the same club have purchased a controlling interest in the Packer team from Fred L. Hutchins, who recently purchased the interests of Ducky Holmes in the club. Towne will act as manager and Fairweather will be president.

If a man was to be investigated every time some fellow got a suspicion that he was getting what he was not entitled to we are afraid there would be lots of people in trouble. Why, we have known members of the legislature to make affidavit that they had earned the salary called for in their voucher, when the facts in the matter were that they had only put in the time.

The "non-partisan" cry which is being sent up by the democratic editors of the state looks pretty good to a fellow if he didn't have a vivid picture in his mind of that last democratic legislature where dozens of bills were introduced for no other reason than to change the laws so that a democratic governor could appoint democrats to the offices which would be made vacant if such bills were made into laws.

The Journal says: "When an officer has gone wrong the people who pay his salary should know it." The Journal is right. When an officer "has gone wrong." When the Journal knows that an officer "has gone wrong," then it is time to publish it to the world, but not before. The Journal has no evidence that any officer has gone wrong. It publishes a statement that one has "gone wrong," on mere suspicion, not evidence.

The dark lantern methods of the Evening Journal in this campaign may bear fruit which a year from now, when its editor again seeks to misrepresent the people, will neither look nice nor smell so sweet.

The good book says: "By their fruits ye shall know them." There is no record back as far as bible times which makes any mention of a democratic party, but one cannot help but think that possibly there was, but in all probability under another name.

The foot ball game between Minnesota and Nebraska at Omaha next Saturday bid fair to be the most largely attended of any game in the history of foot ball at the state university. It is said that already the seats are being taken so fast that it may be hard work to handle the crowd.

So far in the great fight that is on between Tyrus Cobb and Honus Wagner as to which is the greater ball player, is decidedly in favor of the latter. With one man on each team who holds the all-around honors of his respective league, it will be interesting to watch the outcome. Here's hoping Wagner wins the honors, for he is a gentleman at all stages of the game, and the best type of the honest ball player.

John Jerry Stark, republican candidate for county treasurer, has covered considerable of the county in looking over his political fences, and is making friends wherever he goes. We fell safe in saying that there is no man in Cass county better qualified to fill the office of county treasurer than is Mr. Stark. The voters can place the utmost confidence in him, and rest assured that the affairs of his office will be properly attended. We predict his election by a large majority.—Elmwood Leader-Echo.

The Evening Journal does not like the way the republican state committee is conducting headquarters. It even accuses it of using editorials taken from this paper to send out over the state. Chairman Hayward should at once call in the democrats and get their permission to do the things that ought to be done. How easy it is to run a democratic newspaper. All one has to do is to find fault with everything, discover fancied "niggers in the wood pile," condemn what has been done by others who know how to do them and in short grunt and growl to the stock in trade of the average democratic editor.

The tariff has very little to do with the cost of living. Why then is the cost of living high? It is because of the high prices of meat, flour, cattle, hogs, horses, mules, corn, wheat, oats, hay, potatoes, cotton, tobacco, and everything else the farmer produces and sells that we use or consume. Do you ever stop to think what the farmer is producing and selling in these United States today? Over 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn, over 1,000,000,000 of oats, over 750,000,000 bushels of wheat and everything else produced by the farmer in proportion, all valued this year at $8,000,000,000. The farmer is strictly in it to stay. Don't you wish you were a farmer.—Seward Blade.

When the constitutionality of the fake "non-partisan" judiciary act was attacked in the courts the democratic politicians threw a fit and prated about the sacred character of all the acts of the democratic legislature as if they were holy and beyond the review of any earthly tribunal. The tune changed when Judge J. J. Sullivan, their own democratic nominee for the Supreme bench, tackled the corporation tax law passed by the same immaculate bunch of democratic legislators and proceeded to show that it was of no force and effect. The howl about the unimpeachable character of democratic legislation suddenly ceased. A "mighty sight" depends on whose ox is gored.

What has become of the agitation which occupied the valuable columns of certain newspapers for a joint debate between C. O. Wheedon of Lincoln and Senator Burkett. Like most of the agitations sprung by those papers, it "died abornin," and the papers that knew it once will know it no more. When their little god, the Honorable William Jennings Bryan, refused to engage Senator Bailey and another democrat in joint debate on the same question, claiming that it was very unwise and also very foolish for two men of the same political party to debate the tariff question, these papers suddenly subsided. It is very funny how quickly certain papers in Nebraska who sail under republican colors take the advice of the late lamented three time loser.

The Journal criticizes Martin Friedrich, a republican member of the board of county commissioners, because he did not require Sheriff Quinton to file his report at the time it was not filed. Where was the democratic member of the board at that time. Can it be that he was asleep at the switch? He was in just as good a position to know the facts in the case as Mr. Friedrich, but like everybody else he saw nothing to get scared about until the sheriff came up for re-election and the opposition could find nothing else against him that they could spring, they suddenly got cold feet and thought that the sheriff needed investigating. As one looks deeper into this scheme of the Journal to defeat Sheriff Quinton, the firmer becomes the belief that it is all a put up job and a very poorly constructed piece of work.

The republican who helped to put the present democratic county officials in the court house should stop and consider well before he lends his aid again in like manner. Those of them who believe in the honesty of Sheriff Quinton have this to think over. It was your vote which placed those fellows in a position where in their greed for office they are seeking to undermine the honesty and integrity of a man whose past record has been above reproach. By your vote you made it possible for those democrats to gain a foothold which enables them to assail the honesty of a public official, and in their eagerness to ruin his reputation they ruin his character first and then investigate afterwards. Would it not have been better to have investigated the case first and then published the result after the investigation. But, however, that has never been the democratic way.

There will be no rotation of candidates' names on the ballots used at the Nebraska general election November 2. When the last legislature changed the primary election law to provide for the "sliding scale," by shifting the top name to the bottom every so often until the advantage of position should be equalized among all nominees, it neglected to make the same rule apply at general elections. Consequently, the candidates of one party will come first on the official ballot, as heretofore. As the democratic ticket polled the highest vote in the state last year, its nominees will get top place.—Lincoln Evening News.

Another sample of the work of that intelligent democratic legislature last winter. One by one and two by two their acts are being shown to be nothing more or less than boys' play. In fact if a gang of fifteen year old kids could not have put up a more respectable stab at making laws than those fellows did last winter they would have been subject to an interview in the woodshed to the tune of patter goes the shingle.

The general run of people do not seem to think there is very much to get worried about over the candidacy of Mayor Dahlman of Omaha for governor. They say that the county option feeling is so strong throughout the state that there is no doubt whatever but that Shallenberger will win at the primary. This may be true on a straight fight between Shallenberger and Dahlman, but suppose that Berge of Lincoln enters the race, that will divide up the temperance or county option vote in the democratic party between the governor and Berge, and in a three cornered fight in the democratic party Dahlman would stand a good show of getting the nomination. Added to that if ex-Governor Sheldon or some other county option man, who is very popular with republicans should be a candidate in the republican ranks, it is very likely that the liberal element in the republican party would think that a liberal minded governor was of more importance than the rest of the ticket and vote for Dahlman, letting the rest of their ticket go by the board. As Dahlman has a trusted and able lieutenant in every community in the state, under those circumstances, he would be the most likely candidate to win. But whether he could defeat Sheldon, Hayward, or any of the rest of the candidates which might receive the republican nomination, is very doubtful.

The chickens are surely coming home to roost. On account of the state going for Bryan for president last year the democrats will be given first place on the official ballot this fall. Oh it was a great stunt that was pulled off by certain republicans when they voted for Bryan for president. Not only were they responsible for the state being placed in the democratic column, but that action placed the state in a position where the prestige which it had taken years to gain at Washington was lost. Not only that, but it was also responsible for the election of a democratic legislature, the action of which last winter we are all trying to forget but cannot, for its acts like Banquo's ghost will not lay down. Not only that but it was responsible for the defeat of George L. Sheldon for governor and Ernest M. Pollard for congress, two of the best men that Nebraska ever had in their respective positions. It was the casting of democratic votes by republicans that was responsible for the election of a governor who has used every effort to make himself solid for another term by taking a stand for county option, when up to the time he ran for governor he always was found on the other side. Elected by the votes of republicans McGuire goes to Washington a member of the minority and was unable to do anything for his district. What has the state of Nebraska gained in the election of A. C. Shellenberger as governor? What did the state of Nebraska gain by the election of a Bryan set of presidential electors? What did the third and first districts gain by turning down Boyd and Pollard and electing democrats to fill their places? If some of our democratic contemporaries will try and answer we would be pleased to know what that gain was. As yet no one has been able to figure it out. As the days go by the balance tips more and more on the side of loss while the side of gain grows lighter. A few days more and it will be in a perpendicular position. Shall we profit by the experience of the past and regain our ground this fall?

THE CONTRAST.

Three years ago when the campaign was made for the election of a state ticket and a legislature, the republican party of Nebraska went before the people pledging them that the measures which the people has been contending for would be passed. The people took them at their word. A republican legislature was elected and every pledge made the people was carried out. Two years later, the democratic party pledged the people that if they would give them a chance they would pass a set of laws that would be of great benefit to the state. The people took them at their word. What was the result. Hardly a pledge made the people became a law. Many were passed, but in their greed to pass laws which would make more offices and fatter salaries, they jumbled up the bills introduced in such a shape that hardly any of them would bear the light of investigation.

We wish every man and every woman who has an interest in politics, could have been in a position where they could have seen the working of the late legislature. The editor of this paper, on account of poor health, was unable to work during the few months that the legislature was in session, and nearly every day was a beholder of the work done by that session. From its very start it was a scramble for place and power. The pledges made the people were cast aside in an endeavor to oust republicans and put democrats in the jobs. Attempts were made in nearly every case where a bill was offered which would let out a republican and install a democrat, to raise the salary. Men who had promised their constituents that if elected they would do all in their power to pass laws which would be beneficial to the state, spent their time during the first half of the session in pulling strings which they thought would land them in some fat job or intimidating others who were in a position to assist them and would not. Officials who were holding positions of a non-political nature were threatened with a loss of position or a decrease of salary by virtue of bills which would be introduced which would endanger their positions, if they did not assist them in their nefarious work.

So much time was spent in this kind of a campaign that when the session drew to a close bills were hurried through without regard to their standing as to legality and nearly all of them have fallen by the way-side. Members of the legislature openly taunted each other with betrayal of promises, and many times the sessions took on a very lurid aspect.

These are not insinuations. They are facts that can be corroborated by the evidence of hundreds and by members of the legislature themselves if they dare tell the truth.

The best way to judge a man is by his record. What is the record of the democratic party in Nebraska?

A GUARDIAN ANGEL.

The Journal attempts to justify itself in the Quinton controversy by saying: "The Journal has never deceived the people of Cass county in such matters as to Quinton, and they know we are looking after their interests. When an officer goes wrong the people who
