SPOKANE AFTER THE LABOR AGENCIES

Labor Agencies of State of Washington to be Prosecuted.

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 7.—Labor agencies are prohibited from exacting or receiving fees of any kind as compensation for services rendered to laborers in the procurement of employment by the terms of an ordinance submitted to the city council of Spokane by Mayor Nelson S. Pratt. They must look to employers or persons placing orders for labor for remuneration. The penalty provided as punishment for violations is fixed at not more than $200 or six months in jail or both.

The enactment of the ordinance, which has no opposition in the council will give Spokane the distinction of being the first city in the United States to legislate against dishonest agents in this manner, the purpose being to break up their fraudulent practices, against which the laborer has no legal recourse.

Mayor Pratt says in his message to the council that the supreme court of the state of Washington has indicated that employment agencies are subject to regulatory provisions, "and," he adds, "there is no doubt that the ordinance suggested will be sustained by the courts as a proper regulation of their business. The ordinance will give protection to those who need and deserve it most, without taking away the profit of a business conducted on legitimate lines."

"Hundreds of individual cases have been before me during the last six months, and my observation has been such that I know it is the daily practice of many employment agencies to act fraudulently and dishonestly in their dealings with the laboring men who go to them for employment."

The ordinance is based upon a federal statute for the protection of seamen which declares that if any person demands or receives directly or otherwise remuneration from a seaman or any other person seeking employment as a seaman for providing him with employment, he shall for every such offense be deemed guilty of misdemeanor.
