AN EXCITING GAME.

Buddy Taught It to His Grandma and Explained it to His Father.

There is a good old lady living not far from Woodward avenue and the boulevard who looks upon all games of cards as a menace to the soul of man. There is not a playing card in her daughter's home, where she resides, and the person convicted of indulging in solitaire, casino, euchre or any similar pastime forfeits that old lady's esteem and wins in its place her sincere and deep sympathy.

She has a grandson who is not quite as saintly. He is going to high school and has been known to win 28 cents in one afternoon at penny ante freeze out and can raffle a pack without spilling any on the floor. He and his grandmother are great pals, and the other evening his father, who left a great many things behind him when he married, was startled to hear his son exclaim: "I'll see you and raise you three grandma!"

On the family sewing table grandma and the young man were playing an exciting game. They were using a pack of cards designed for a game known as our feathered friends and a dish of beans. On each card was the picture of a different kind of bird.

Presently grandma in an excited tone piped up:

"Now, Buddy, you forgot to ante again."

Father became interested. Grandma stayed up until 9 o'clock, half an hour past her bedtime, and when she reluctantly arose she said:

"Well, Buddy, I have nineteen more beans than you have, and I'll get all of yours away from you tomorrow night."

"My son," said father after grandma had left the room, "what's the game you were playing with grandma?"

"It's called beano," said his son. "You see, these cards are divided into four groups—birds of prey, song birds, game birds and domestic fowls. There are thirteen of each, and they are graded. The eagle, lark, grouse and turkey count the highest. The dealer gives each player five cards, and each one can lay aside as many as he wants and draw as many more. Everybody puts one bean in the middle of the table at the beginning."

"I—er—think I understand," said father. "Let you and I play a little game, so's you can teach me how."

There was a wickedly reminiscent smile on father's face as he pulled the last of Buddy's beans at 10:50.—Detroit News-Tribune.

Punctuation.

In the earliest Latin inscriptions and manuscripts no system of punctuation is followed. The full point (.) was gradually introduced, being placed on the level, middle or top of the letters. In the minuscule manuscripts of the eighth, ninth and following centuries the period, on the line or high, was first used; then the comma and semicolon and the inverted semicolon, whose power was rather stronger than that of the comma. Some say that the Caroline minuscules of the ninth century exhibit the note of interrogation, for which the inverted semicolon, which was gradually dropped, may have furnished the mark. The Greeks use the semicolon as an interrogation point. In English the colon is said to have been introduced about 1485, the comma about 1501 and the semicolon about 1570. In Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia" (1587) all the punctuation points appear, including the note of interrogation, asterisk and parentheses.

Helping the Minister.

A Scotch preacher had in his congregation an old woman who was deaf. In order to hear the sermon each Sunday this old lady would seat herself at the foot of the pulpit stairs. One day the sermon was about Jonah, and the preacher became very rhetorical.

"And when the sailors threw Jonah overboard," he said, "a big fish swallowed him up. Was it a shark that got 'im? Nay, my brethren, it was n'er a shark. Was it a sword-fish that eat him? Nay!"

"It was a whale," whispered the old lady excitedly.

"Hush, Biddie," said the preacher indignantly. "Would ye tak th' word o' God out o' yer ane meenister's mouth?"—Success Magazine.

The Pleasure Was Mutual.

The friends of two American celebrities, one a stutterer and the other somewhat deaf, succeeded after much maneuvering in getting them to meet, and the event aroused considerable unholy glee.

Some time thereafter the stutterer was asked how the interview passed off.

"Oh, w-e w-e g-g-got along f-f-fine-ly," he stammered. "I c-c-couldn't-t-t-talk, and s-s-she c-c-c-couldn't-h-h-hear me."—Lippincott's.
