"I calculate," observed Moreau, carelessly sweeping toward him the buckskin bag, "that I have proved my theory, sub. Yoh tide has not turned, except for the worse. An even bet that yoh lose the best out of the next six hands. We'll make it that number in order to give yoh Randall luck a chance to come in, foh it really seems us if it was very bashful, sub. Do yoh take me? Of co'se yoh are the doctor, sub, as I am the winner."

The bird being plucked, the vulture was no longer scrupulously careful regarding its department, and, in fact, if Mr. Randall had been himself he could not but have noted the contempt and derision in the estimable colonel's voice and eyes.

"Yes, I am the doctor, sub," replied the planter thickly, "and a Randall never quits. Never, sub! I take yoh, and I raise yoh bet. Fifty thousand that I beat yoh foh out of six. That's the way I play, sub. Now, do yoh take me, Colonel Moreau?"

A momentary astonishment flickered in the other's eyes, for it seemed as if the bird had not been picked so cleanly as he had supposed. "I reckoned yoh cleaned out, sub," he said cautiously. "If yoh're serious, of co'se I take yoh."

Mr. Randall, swaying unsteadily, promptly slammed a green morocco wallet on the table. "That and a deed to my plantation, colonel, against yoh winnings and fohy thousand. I am about to show yoh, sub, how a Randall plays poker. I stake everything I own on the fact that yoh leave this table dead broke, sub. Here's to the Randall luck, and to the devil, sub, with everything else!" And, drinking to this admirable sentiment, he raised his glass, drained it at a draft and sent it crashing to the floor.

A lupine twist came to the other's lips as he produced pen, ink and paper. "Yoh just make out that deed now, sub," he said suavely. "My name

"I TRUST THIS IS NOT AN UNTIMELY INTRUSION."

Is Colonel Jacques Gaspard Deschamps Moreau, and very much at yoh service, sub."

He stopped and whirled about, the pen extended in his hand, as the door of the private stateroom opened, giving admittance to a man of perhaps thirty-five, who exuded a certain debonair and rakish atmosphere. At the neck of this gentleman's elaborately frilled shirt there gleamed a huge cameo, and companion stones fastened the cuffs at his wrists.

"Gentlemen, your servant, and my humble apologies," he said, with an elaborate bow. "I trust this is not an untimely intrusion."

CHAPTER II.

"THIS is a private stateroom, sub," interrupted Moreau, glaring at the intruder.

"What—Why, as I live, it is Colonel Moreau—by all the saints, your admirable self, my dear fellow!" heartily exclaimed the younger man, slapping the other on the back. "These lights are so dashed disobliging I didn't recognize you. I have been watching the game for some time through that window," pointing to one on his right, "and you must remember that a stateroom isn't private so long as the curtains aren't drawn. If I had known you were aboard I would have hunted you up long ago, for you know how I love a game, colonel, and hence this ventured intrusion. Have you any objection to making it three cornered?" His bow included Mr. Randall, now blinking at the table.

"Sorry, but quite impossible, sub," replied Moreau shortly. "I am already this gentleman's master foh a matter of ten thousand or so—he has been playing in dam poh luck—and our next wager is for fifty thousand. Too high foh yoh, I calculate?"

"Not at all, I assure you," lightly replied the intruder, smiling into the other's venomous eyes. "Come; if your friend is willing, let me sit in. I really insist upon losing to you, colonel. Won't you introduce me?"

Moreau hesitated, trying to read the other's eyes. Then, apparently satisfied, he turned to the nodding Mr. Randall, saying: "Have yoh any objection, sub, to making it three? My friend, sub, Mr.—er—Mr. Jackson of New Orleans."

"Honored, sub! Honored!" replied the planter, arising and extending a frank hand. "I warn yoh, sub, that the Randall luck has turned and that yoh will surely lose. Stay out, sub; stay out!" he added impressively, patting the other's shoulder. "Foh I am about to make a killing, and I don't want yoh to be among the dead. The colonel and I are old men of the world, sub, but this is no place foh a young man like yoh. I trust yoh will take my advice in the spirit in which it is offered, foh I am a father, sub, and—and I like yoh. By Gad, yoh remind me of a dear friend I once had—the Kirbys, sub, of Plaquemine."

"Come," interrupted Moreau, "let us resume our friendly hostilities. Mr. Randall, foh yoh make yoh landing, sub, in about half an hour."

"I thank you for your advice, sir," said the intruder, with sudden gravity, while gently and unobtrusively he steered Mr. Randall to his seat. "But I am afraid it has come too late, for card games of all kinds are my weakness. Perhaps if I had received it when I was younger— But I see our good colonel is impatient."

"I am," replied Moreau, shuffling the cards, "foh we have only half an hour, and it is to be the best out of six hands. Come, my money is up, as yoh see, sub, and Mr. Randall draws a deed for his plantation as his stakes, so we await yoh pleasure, Mr.—er—Jackson."

"I understand you to say that the stakes were fifty, not twenty thousand?" replied the other, casually glancing at the colonel's roll.

"I calculate my check is good for the balance," replied Moreau, signaling a warning with his eyes—"the National Bank of New Orleans, sub."

"Ah, a very sound institution, for I draw against it myself," observed the younger man. "As, of course, we do not carry such an amount with us," he added, with deference, turning to Mr. Randall, "Colonel Moreau and I must of necessity substitute our checks. We are strangers to you, sir, and—"

"Yoh word, sub, is entirely sufficient," interrupted the planter, waving his hand. "This is a question of honor between us, foh I might draw a deed to a plantation I never owned. I am a man of the world, sub, and I reckon we each can recognize a southern gentleman on sight."

"Yes, in the present company that is not a very difficult matter," gravely responded Mr. Jackson. "Shall we cut for the deal? The four best hands take all. Ah, luck is with me. I take the cards, sir."

"One moment," said Moreau, "as no stakes are up I reckon I'll give my check for the full amount should I lose." Pocketing his roll, he glanced satirically at Mr. Jackson.

If for a presumable amateur who occasionally indulged in a gentleman's game merely for the sake of passing the time Colonel Moreau had exhibited a wonderful aptitude at shuffling and dealing his performance was now completely overshadowed by that of the young intruder, whose lightning deftness was almost uncanny. Talking nonchalantly and brilliantly, he stacked the deck with a beautiful precision, fascinating in the extreme, even while the colonel's watchful and suspicious eyes never for a moment relaxed their vigil. Owing entirely to this marvelous and criminal skill Mr. Jackson won on his own deal and, luck following him, won also on that of Mr. Randall. As each and every one of the colonel's undertakings were highly estimable he naturally held the best hand when, for a moment, the cards were in his power, and it speaks eloquently for Mr. Jackson's large charity of judgment that he refrained from criticism even when acutely aware that the middle aged creole had rather clumsily garnered his third ace from the bottom of the deck. But as youth must be served, especially when possessor of such consummate skill as that owned by Mr. Jackson, the latter handsomely won his fourth showdown with surprising ease, verve and dash.

"Well, that winds her," airily remarked the colonel, arising and stretching his long arms. "One hundred thousand ain't such a bad cleanup, I reckon, but yoh always were lucky, yoh young scamp, and there's no playing against it. Yoh even topped my foh kings. I calculate the Randall luck finished a very poh last. How about yoh theory now, sub?"

The planter did not reply, for it is somewhat difficult for a but newly ruined man to sense the full humor of his condition. In silence he drew toward him the pen and ink, while for a long moment he stared at the white sheet of paper, upon which he was about to give title to all which he owned. He and his children were beggars, total and complete. This was the turning of the tide, his royal homecoming. For a moment he bowed his grizzled head; then, shutting his teeth against all thoughts of the future, seized the quill pen. For a Randall must show the world how it can lose. A Randall must be beaten at nothing—even at playing the fool.

"Yoh name, sub?" he courteously inquired, turning to the young stranger who had proved so fortunate.

"Eugene Kirby, sir."

"What?" exclaimed the planter in a dazed manner. "I thought, sub—"

"Oh, the colonel sometimes calls me Mr. Jackson because he thinks I resemble the general," lightly replied Cameo Kirby as, head between hands, he stared gravely at the table. "Any one will tell you my name is Eugene Kirby—even the Texas tender knows it."

"Ah, the General. I have a boy, sub, whom we affectionately call by that name," replied Mr. Randall irrelevantly, staring at the ceiling. "I have three children, sub. There is Tom and Adele and the General. Their mother is dead, sub. And yoh say yoh name is Eugene Kirby. Very strange, sub. I know the Kirbys of Plaquemine, sub. No relation, I suppose. But yoh pardon, sub."

And, with a hand now steady and firm, he wrote and signed the deed to the Randall plantation and, with a bow, handed it to the gambler whose father he had befriended; the gambler whose reputation was said to be the worst on the river; the son of the man who had been his nearest neighbor and closest friend.

This accomplished, Mr. Randall arose unsteadily and walked to the door, where he turned and for a moment surveyed the smoke fouled room with its litter of empty bottles. And if for a moment a fleeting realization of the very thorough manner in which he had been victimized permeated his throbbing brain no hint of it was depicted in face or bearing.

"Good evening, gentlemen," he said gravely, "and thank yoh for the obligation. Good evening." Head erect, he walked out and very softly closed the door.

Kirby resumed his preoccupied attitude at the table, while Moreau, carelessly lighting a cheroot and pouring himself a drink, sprawled elegantly over an adjacent couch.

"Well, I calculate that's the easiest mark that ever came our way," he observed, with a laugh. "Green as the everlasting hills," quietly pocketing Mr. Randall's wallet, a delicate maneuver which Kirby neglected to note. "I calculate this is the first time yoh and I ever played together, eh? Yoh're a deuce of a hand at the cards, my boy—never saw yoh equal before. I take it, yoh partner, Mr. Larkin Bunce, is not with yoh this trip or yoh wouldn't have so unceremoniously doubled up with me. Or perhaps yoh two have fallen out, eh? If so, sub, I will be happy to make our impromptu partnership permanent."

Kirby swung slowly around and fixedly regarded his magnificent and amiable companion. "Since when have you contemplated such an admirable partnership?" he blandly inquired.

"Ever since I first saw yoh play, Kirby. Come; yoh partner, Bunce, is crude—a blubber faced Yankee, with no manners whatever, sub. But yoh and I are gentlemen and would make the best team on the river. I consider our play tonight the biggest haul in a decade, and I promise yoh moh like it, foh I never go in foh playeune affairs. My fingers are growing a little too stiff foh skillful manipulation, and I frankly own I haven't yoh delicate and admirable finesse. But I have the manner, Kirby, and can rope the cattle for yoh to brand, sub. I'll guarantee yoh the biggest game on the river."

"You will oblige me, sir," replied the other, carefully lighting a cheroot, "by employing the prefix to my name—if ever in the future I am unfortunate enough to have you address me. Permit me to inform you that you are a blank scoundrel, sir! I cannot be too emphatic concerning that statement. Whenever I form a partnership with you I will be more qualified for a front seat in hades than I am at the present moment. Why, yoh low, thieving swamp cat," he cried, losing all self control, "how dare you think I gamble like you—by getting unsuspecting victims drunk and then robbing them? I watched you outrageously cheat Mr. Randall and ply him with liquor in order to cover your characteristically clumsy manipulation of the cards, and if I stepped in tonight and stooped to emulate the type of game which you solely play it was in order to save your victim from complete and total ruin. It is unnecessary to say that when Mr. Randall is capable of estimating what has occurred and is once more himself this deed will be returned to him."

"Now, Kirby, yoh can't play that game on me," cried Moreau, jumping to his feet. "Yoh come in on my kill and then try to do me out of the spoils. That don't go, Kirby. I'm too old a hand. Keep that line of talk for sapheads. The Randall plantation is sold under the hammer, and I get two-thirds or—"

"Or what?" coldly demanded Kirby, carefully pocketing the deed. "You know me, Mr. Moreau, so don't try to pull a derringier. It's considerably safer to wait until my back is turned. I say Mr. Randall himself will destroy this deed and that his plantation will not be sold, and you may believe it or not, just as you like. That ten thousand you virtually stole I cannot, unfortunately, refund; but, believe me, that is the entire extent of your stealings. For once in your life you are going to release a victim before he has been completely sucked dry; for once in your life you are going to be half way decent!"

"Decent?" bellowed the other. "That's a compliment from one of yoh standing!"

"Like yourself, I game for a living, Mr. Moreau," coldly interrupted Kirby; "but, unlike yourself, I endeavor to do so honestly, and I have never yet stooped to the methods which you exclusively employ. Although you are seemingly not aware of the fact, there is a distinct difference between a gambler and a thief. Once I had the privilege of meriting the friendship and esteem of gentlemen like Mr. Randall, and I now warn you to keep your claws off him. If ever in the future I catch you bleeding him as you did this evening you and I will have a different sort of discussion. For your own sake I beg you to remember this."

Before Moreau could reply the sound of a single shot rang out from one of the staterooms and echoed itself over the river. Impulsively Kirby turned to the door, and as he did so Moreau quickly withdrew his hand from the breast of his long frock coat. A tongue of flame leaping from his Derringer shattered the stagnant tobacco fumes, and with the acrid bite of powder in ceeded the landing of the freight, and off somewhere in the darkness a child whimpered shrilly. The boy's nerves were set on edge. Perhaps his father was having a farewell talk with the captain and would come dashing out at the last moment with all his old disregard for time and place. It was time the bell was changing, the signal for backing away, for by now the landing of passengers and freight appeared to be terminated. And still no John Randall. The boy walked along the string-piece until the Texas deck came the more prominently into view, the glow from the open windows of the port staterooms silhouetting the lean visaged pilot, absolute monarch of his realm, who now that an easy stretch of the river had been entered loafed about while his cub took the wheel.

"Hello, on board the Shotwell!" shouted young Randall, looking up at the pilothouse. "Is that you, Mr. Bixby? This is Tom Randall. Do you know if my father is on board? We were expecting him by your boat, sir."

For reply Mr. Bixby, usually the pattern of courtesy, offered a merrily affirmative and turned from the window.

But young Randall had no time to nurse his quick resentment, for now, at last, his father had come ashore, borne on the shoulders of two roustabouts, while the captain and officers stood with bared heads and thankfully left the unwelcome task of explaining the tragedy to the amiable and willing Colonel Moreau.

"THE SCOUNDREL HAS ALREADY PAID FOR IT WITH HIS LIFE."

"My boy," said the latter, now laying a fatherly hand on young Randall's heaving shoulder, "although I am a stranger to yoh, sub, I have ventured to assume temporary control of this terrible affair, foh I am a southern gentleman, as was Mr. Randall, and I feel bound to yoh all by the ties of sympathy and country. I was a witness, sub, to the events which preceded and prompted this outrage, and, although I am aware it is but poh satisfaction, still it is something to know that the scoundrel who was instrumental in causing yoh poh father's death has already paid foh it with his life. My name, sub, is Colonel Moreau, and if I can be of any further service to yoh all in this dark hour of tribulation pray command me, sub. As an old soldier I beg of yoh to meet this calamity with the fortitude of a Christian gentleman," with which admirable and pious adjuration the good colonel furnished his handkerchief and helped himself to a generous pinch of snuff.
