It is rumored that a new paper will soon be launched at Louisville by Lee and George Mayfield. The former was for a number of years publisher of the Courier, now owned by S. A. Morrison. There is room in Louisville but for one good newspaper, and it seems to us that Brother Morrison is filling the bill.

Messrs H. C. and G. H. Cutler, of Comanche county, Oklahoma, came up Tuesday on some court matters, and will remain a week or two. Samuel Barker, who went to England several weeks ago, to look after an estate in which he was interested, returned home this week. He found the property in question was being held by other heirs, who claimed right of possession from the reason that Mr. Barker has been absent from England more than twelve years, the limit prescribed by the laws of that country in matters of that kind. He expects to make another trip to the old country some time in the near future, when a legal process will inaugurate to secure his claim and that which properly belongs to him.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Heil and daughter Mammie, were in the city Saturday afternoon. Mr. Heil reports the roads in a most horrible condition.

Attending the funeral services of an old and respected citizen of Plattsmouth at the Methodist church, not many days since, a thought came to me of what a change had taken place in the Methodist church since the early days of Plattsmouth and the present.

Now we see a large and fine constructed building—the pride of Plattsmouth, built substantially from lumber, finished outside with brick; with large windows of beautifully stained glass, presented to the church by some kind-hearted members as memorial windows. While the outside of the church building presents a handsome appearance, the inside arrangements are simply grand, and is a beautiful sight to behold. Comfortable seats are provided for all who wish to attend services, and polite ushers in attendance. The building is illuminated by electricity, the sanctuary occupied by the minister and the choir is large and handsomely furnished and the singing of the choir, especially the soprano and alto, is up to date, and could not be improved. It was a pleasure to me to listen to their sweet singing. How different did we find the Methodist church service in the very early days of the settlement of Plattsmouth and Cass county.

The membership of the church consisted only of a few families, among them Mr. Sheppard Duke, Mr. B. Spurlock, who was at that time a young man; Mr. Yates, the minister; Mr. Throckmorton, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. White and a few more whose names I do not remember. Mr. B. Spurlock and our old-time friend, Auntie White are living yet.

Sunday services were held by Rev. Yates at the homes of the few members, or in some empty room. With so few members it could not be expected to support a minister. But pay or no pay, Mr. Yates held Sunday service, and during the week he worked at his trade of shoemaking in company with Mr. Throckmorton. They rented a small room on Main street and had all they could do mending boots and shoes. Both of them were good singers. We have listened to their singing time and time again. They generally sang a good old Methodist hymn, which was, "I am glad I am a Methodist; glory hallalujah," and kept time to the singing by hammering at a new sole of a boot or a shoe on an old flat iron. We could hear them singing several blocks away. I imagine I hear them yet.

Of course people were poor at that time and we could not dress in the height of fashion like now days. The minister, Mr. Yates, was no exception. We all wore very plain and cheap clothes and it was nothing uncommon to see Rev. Yates shoulder a sack of flour and carry the same from the steamboat landing to his home; or push a wheelbarrow with a sack of potatoes or corn home. What would the members of the church think of their minister to-day seeing him with a sack of flour on his shoulders or wheeling a sack of potatoes home? Rev. Yates did not think anything of it. But time changes, so do people.

After some time the membership of the church increased, and a store room on Main street rented and services held there. Rev. Yates left Plattsmouth, and Professor Miller, of the Creapolis Seminary, attended to the services here until the old church on the corner of Main and Sixth streets, was built.

CONRAD SCHLATER.

Happily Wedded.

A Victory for the Independents.
The Lincoln City Council on Monday night granted a franchise to the Western Union Independent Telephone company, to run for forty years from the date of its passage. It is required to have its system in operation within eighteen months. This gives the Plattsmouth Telephone company connection with the capital city. The fight was a hot one throughout, some of the interested parties almost coming to blows. This is certainly another great victory for the Independent companies.

Martyrs.
Every nation and every period has its martyrs, heroes who sacrificed their lives for their convictions. They deserve for this moral courage the admiration of all ages, of all men. Great was their suffering, great was their death. Our time has also its martyrs—willing martyrs, because they easily can evade the pains. Men and women suffering from diseases caused by impure blood. You see them every day with their pale face, weak body and mind, unable to work. All such persons suffer willingly, because they know that by using Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine the blood will speedily become pure, rich and warm the nerves and muscles strong again, ready for work. Spring is the best time to purify your blood and Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine is the best blood purifier, composed of pure grape wine and of bitter herbs. It strengthens the stomach, the nerves and the muscles and makes the digestion perfect. It makes the blood new.
