The Plattsmouth Journal

TEDDY insists that Hanna shall corral the delegates and brand all the Maverlicks "T. R."

SENATOR HANNA is going to look at that bobtailed flush good and hard before he stands pat on it.

SENATOR HANNA sees a great future for organized labor. But will labor see a great future for Hanna?

Another novelty beneath the sun—
A wireless telegraph in Washington!
The fact that 'twas invented by a clerk
Suggests the question, "Will it work?"

SENATOR DIETRICH says he will demand a senate investigation. Well, what's he waiting for? Nobody will interfere with the proposition.

Boodle, boodle, boodle.
Was Dietrich's chief delight,
Now he is in Washington,
Trying to make it right.

ONE HUNDRED and sixty-three postmasters who "retired" from office last year were "short" in their accounts to the amount of $23,454. All republicans, of course.

RECENTLY, in Brussels 2,500 young men competed for situations paying but $150 a year. Only 200 got places, yet Belgium has a good stiff tariff, and therefore must be prosperous.

WOULDN'T this cork a grasshopper? President Roosevelt declares that his nomination for the presidency must be a spontaneous act of the republican party. He might add the spontaneous act is liable to be followed by combustion.

BURKETT is endeavoring to start a boom for himself in Washington for United States Senator in Nebraska. As if he would be any improvement over two "wall flowers" already there. For gall, Burkett never saw a moment that he did not retain an over-supply.

GOVERNOR TAFT returning from the Philippines, says "Oh, no; they will not be fit for self-government for years." Did not Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln declare that all men were fit for self-government? And what did Taft himself say three years ago?

THE Fourth Assistant Postmaster General has recommended to congress that the salaries of rural route mail carriers be increased to $750 a year. It is now only $600. If the salaries are increased carriers will not be permitted to haul anything but the mails, nor will they be allowed to solicit subscriptions to magazines or newspapers.

ARRIVING at San Francisco en route for Washington, Governor Taft gave the reporters a very rosy account of the beautiful and peaceful condition of the Philipines. In the very next column we read the news of a battle with Moros in Mindinac in which Lieutenant Fiske was killed and Lieutenant Roberts and some American soldiers were wounded. So the beauty spot depends upon the point of view.

WHEN the first President Harrison died in office, his deputy, John Tyler, was not elected to succeed him; when General Taylor died in office, Millard Fillmore was not elected to succeed him; when Lincoln was slain, Johnson was not elected to succeed him; When Garfield was murdered, Arthur was not elected to succeed him. In fact, none of the promoted vice presidents ever got the presidential nomination. "The meanin' of which observation," as Bunsby said, "lays in the application of it."

ONE-THIRD of all the people in this country are engaged in agricultural pursuits—10,438,000 of them—while all other industries employ only 18,885,000. The total farm area of the United States is 841,000,000 acres—an area larger than England, Scotland, Wales, France, Germany, Austria, Spain, Japan and the Transvaal. Yet farmers are oppressed by the "protective" tariff. Under it our manufacturers are able to sell farm machinery abroad much cheapert han our own farmers can buy it for. This is one of the beauties of a republican administration.

DEMOCRACY is no less than the rule of the majority. Majority makes possible the expression of the popular will in government and administration, conserves the greatest possible freedom of the many, and is the corner stone of the party of the people. The fixed principle that the wish of the minority shall bend to the will of the majority extends throughout all the party's transactions, has to do with its selection of issues and of men, and may be relied upon to govern the party's affairs in the future as in the past. Without majority rule there cannot be even a pretense to the other and subordinate principles of democracy; without majority rule there is nothing. With it the broad structure of the party is inseverable and strong for concerted movement. Democrats may well give heed to some of the essentials. "We hold these truths to be self-evident—that all men are created equal" is no mere platitude, but a principle which the followers of Jefferson must recognize and follow in party transactions to the last detail. Democracy can be nothing less than an expression of equality and equal rights and equal representation. Under the guidance of essential democratic principles to which the people must bind their leaders the party's course will be marked by unison. There must be observance of the majority principle in ascertaining the wishes of the people, in deliberations, in councils, in defining the party's position—in making the fight.

At Their Old Tricks.

Republican papers the country over are already deep in the business of promoting democratic discord. But the significant and promising fact is that in the general and representative democratic press no harshness or discordancy is observed, but a disposition to further a broader spirit of harmony and concession. It will be noticed that the "reading-out" process has been generally stopped, giving way to genuine concern for party interests. There are many gratifying signs of growing co-operation, notwithstanding the desperate efforts of the republican press to have it appear otherwise.

By far the greatest opportunity for the democratic press, however, would seem to lie in directing the thought of democrats back toward the unalterable basic principles upon which disagreement is impossible. From these as a starting point progression may arrive without a difference or disagreement at the momentous issues which actually confront us to-day.

Three issues so far have defined themselves—the related issues of the tariff, the trusts and official corruption. Surely upon these, since the republican party stands in the position of defending the evils of them all, it ought not to be difficult for democrats to unite and to make the greatest fight in the party's history. With union there is small chance of democracy's losing the battle.

For the voter there is but one caution—he should guard against following selfish leadership, and should demand of the politician who assumes to represent him a loyalty to the essential—established democratic principles, and a real and profound desire to win. Democratic human nature is weary of defeat. Give a sound basis of attack and disinterested leadership and the voter will do his part.

A REPUBLICAN speaking of Deitrich the other day, truthfully remarked "that of recent years Nebraska has not been blessed with very able representatives in the United States senate." And yet they talk of elevating Burkett to that position. Ain't that awful?

STARTLING news to Nebraskans comes from far-off Porto Rico. A cable message from San Juan under date of January 27, says: "Alonzo Cruzen, ex-collector of customs of Porto Rico, sailed today for the United States. He says he will return to Nebraska, where it is believed he will open a campaign with the object of succeeding Joseph H. Millard in the United States senate." Why not succeed Dietrich?

ADAM BREDE, of the Hastings Tribune, is responsible for the following very sensible remarks, and are utterances of one the staunchest republicans in Nebraska: "Circumstances are shaping themselves to compel political parties to change their implied and well understood slogan which has come to be 'anything to win' for the more reasonable one 'give us capable men.' The politician must be relegated to the inferior place for which he is generally qualified and not be confounded with the statesman, his nerve, energy and shrewdness notwithstanding. The election to the upper house by popular vote and the waking of a desire to search out statesman and put them where they belong, and take unqualified, office-seeking politicians merely for what they are worth, will clear the horizon and nothing else will."

THAT fearless democrat, Edgar Howard, editor of the Columbus Telegram, speaks the Journal's sentiments regarding the erection of a Rockefeller memorial building, as proposed by the chancellor of the state university, in the following language: "After a marble shaft shall have been raised to the memory of Aaron Burr; when a univesity chapel shall have been dedicated to the devil; when a chair of social purity shall have been endowed by the prostitutes of Omaha and Lincoln; when bronze statues of Captain Kidd and Pat Crowe shall grace the university campus; when all these things have come to pass—it will then be time to talk about permitting the chancellor of our state university to erect a Rockefeller memorial building upon Nebraska soil."

Hello, Mr. Editor, here I am again writing news for the best paper in Cass county.

Weather is cold and snow quite deep, but still we can't complain, so we'll sing a song of happiness, to delight every soul, sausage on the table and the cellar full of coal.

Miss Annie Berger who resides near Elmwood, was visiting at the home of W. H. Holmes, last week. She returned to her home last Friday.

Wendel Heil was a passenger for Omaha last Friday.

John Kaffenberger, a well known lad in this vicinity, has recently purchased a new shot gun. While out hunting the first day, he succeeded in killing three big jack rabbits and several cotton tails, being loaded down with so much game that he could scarcely reach home. The rabbits were spudding along at a great rate but could not get out of the gun's reach. How is this for shooting, boys. Few of them can say as much. Yet the hunter neglected to see the game, that was flying overhead; and stood and smiled at the three big jacks, that before were lying dead.

Query—Why do most people make more fun of old maids than they do of bachelors? Because there are more of them.

Fred Wagner shipped a car load of hogs to South Omaha one day last week.

A farmer in this vicinity who has recently returned from his trip to the wild west, informs us that while coming through Omaha on a crowded street car, a sudden jolt participated him into the lap of one of the passengers. "What kind of a man are you?" exclaimed the woman quite angrily. What his reply was we have not learned, but should have been, "When I got aboard I was a Dutchman, but now I seem to be a Laplander."

Henry Heil was a Plattsmouth visitor last Saturday.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Jardim is reported quite sick with pneumonia.

From the Register.

E. M. Pollard was elected vice president of the State Horticultural Society last week.

Mrs. Everett Carroll has been on the sick list for a few days, but is better at present.

Mr. J. M. Stone came home from Murray Sunday, after spending a week there with his sons, Bruce and Charlie.

Carl Stone took a young lady sleighriding Sunday afternoon, and had the misfortune to break the sleigh. They came home in a borrowed buggy, but they got home all right.

T. G. Hymer went to Murray and won the silver cup which makes him champion of Cass county. It is subject to challenge in 30 days; but the man that gets it will have to do some great shooting.

Claude Johnson returned from the hospital at Omaha Friday evening. He will find it awkward trying to do things without his right hand; but he can consider himself lucky that he escaped from under the cars with his life.

H. G. Strong has given up his rural route, and Bert Purkheiser passed a successful examination for the place, gave a bond, was sworn in, and is making regular trips now. Bert takes hold as though he had been in the business all his life.

Monday morning Eva Boody was dressing a little child, and standing with her back close to the stove. She was so engaged that she did not notice her clothes were afire until they blazed up, covering her with flames almost instantly. Her mother ran to her assistance and smothered the flames, burning her hands quite severely. Eva was found to be badly burned on the back, and quite severely on the limbs, the clothing being almost entirely consumed. Eva will be confined to her bed for some time.
