

10 - STORES - 10

A great many people ask us how we can sell the quality of goods we sell for so little money.

Man after man comes into our store and says, "I have not bought any clothing in Plattsmouth for ten years." However, he invariably leaves our store with a suit and well satisfied. See what will do here for men. We pay no traveling men's expenses—buy direct of the manufacturer, and buying in the enormous quantities we do for cash, can and will, considering quality, save you from 15 to 20 percent on your purchase.

$8.00, $10.00, $12.00 0 $15.00

If we cannot save you money we do not ask your business. Your money lasts if you invest it here.

The Louisville Bridge.

While in Louisville the other day we noticed that nothing had been done in the way of repairing the bridge spanning the Platte river at that place and why, we have not been able to learn. In other sections of the county when high water takes away a bridge the commissioners are generally on the alert to have it replaced. The people of Louisville are not to blame for these floods, and the merchants of that town have lost considerable trade in consequence of the present condition of the bridge. And the Journal can't fathom any reason why the commissioners have not paid some attention to this matter ere this. This bridge has not only been a convenience to those who live in the town, but it is a public highway and much traveling is done over this bridge when in proper shape. The Journal would like to see the commissioners take some action in this matter at the next meeting. Throw aside your prejudices, if you have any, and give this matter proper attention, Louisville is in Cass county and have the same rights as other sections, that should be respected.

Kind Words.

Plattsmouth is to have another daily newspaper. Mr. Bates, publisher of the Journal, next week will begin the publication of the Daily Journal which suspended some two years ago on account of lack of patronage. Mr. Bates will get out a good paper and ought to be encouraged.—Nebraska City News.

To Candidate Pollard.

To Ernst M. Pollard, republican nominee for congress in the First Nebraska district:

Your opponent in the congressional campaign was nominated on a platform which contains this plank:

We congratulate President Roosevelt upon his rejection of the tariff barons' plea that protection should be employed as a guide for extorting unfair prices from the American consumer. We commend him for his order that supplies for the Panama canal will be purchased in other markets if such a course be necessary to avoid the imposition on the part of the special interests so long protected by the republican party.

Mayor Brown, in his Nebraska City speech, pledged himself unequivocally to that platform, and particularly to the plank quoted. He pledged his vote and his earnest efforts to sustain the president's Panama policy.

Your platform, Mr. Pollard, dodged the issue the president has raised. You yourself have thus far preserved a discreet silence upon this issue.

Why not take the people whom you seek to represent into your confidence?

Where do you stand, Mr. Pollard? Are you for the president or against him upon this question?

The New York Commercial for June 21 states that Rogers L. Farnham, a director of the Panama railroad, is already in England, representing the government, purchasing canal supplies. It states that he has completed negotiations for the purchase of a 5,000-ton English ship. Editorial-ly it denounces this course, and predicts that congress, being "strongly protectionist," will "respond promptly" to compel the purchase of all canal supplies in the United States at whatever price the trusts may choose to extort.

The question will undoubtedly come before congress. Where will you stand? Will you be for the president, or will you be for the trusts?—Omaha World-Herald.

THIS IS CERTAINLY VERY DEBATABLE

The Woman Stoned and the Man Taken Back Into Society.

Two years ago, in a little village in southwestern Nebraska, the populace was scandalized by the discovery of unlawful relations between a prominent business man and the wife of another citizen. The husband of the erring woman immediately applied for and was granted a divorce. The wife of the erring man also procured a divorce. The business man kept on at his business. The social leaders frowned upon him for a little while, but later he was taken back into the best of circles, and only yesterday, according to the telegrams to the city newspapers, he was united in marriage with the daughter of one of the leading families in the village where he lives. All the city attended the church wedding, and everybody vied with everybody to honor the man who but two short years ago had been guilty in all eyes of a great crime. But what became of the woman who was his partner in the crime? From the day of her downfall she was an unclean thing in the eyes of society in that little village. All the doors of decency were closed against her. Her foot might not press a threshold over which her partner in crime received a hand of welcome. Shunned by all her companions of the year, regarded as an outcast by those who had been her social mates, with never an outstretched hand to help, nor voice to cheer, she took her little girl of tender years and moved to a distant city, where, neglected and unknown, she earns her bread with the needle. Seems cruel and wrong, doesn't it, that one criminal should be debased and the other exalted.—Edgar Howard, in Columbus Telegram.

"Wanted—A Man."

The world has a standing advertisement over the door of every profession, every occupation and every calling: "Wanted—A man!"

Wanted—a man who is larger than his calling, who considers it a low estimate of his occupation to value it merely as a means of getting a living.

Wanted—a man who sees self-development, education, discipline and drill, character and manhood in his occupation.

A thousand business positions vacant in every city; five thousand men idle in the same city, while a thousand employment agents scour the land for men to fill those same vacant positions and scour in vain, is a sufficient indication of the largeness of the opportunities of the age, and also of the crying need for good men.

Wanted—a man who is well balanced who is not cursed with some defect or weakness which cripple his usefulness and neutralizes his powers.

Wanted—a man who is contented to win his victories in practical every day life.

The whole world is looking for the right kind of a man. Although there are a million out of employment, yet it is almost impossible to find just the right man in almost every department of life. Every profession and every occupation has a standing advertisement all over the world: "Wanted—A man."

Let this reflection spur us on to do our best and make the most of our opportunities.

IS KILLED WHILE AT WORK

Charles Hoskins Swept From an Engine and Fatally Injured.

DIED ON SUNDAY MORNING AT 11:30

Had Been a Faithful Employee of the Burlington for Twenty-four Years.

WAS BELOVED BY ALL WHO KNEW HIM

Charles C. Hoskins, who was injured in the railroad yards at Pacific Junction Saturday evening, died at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning at the Perkins House in this city.

The fatal accident occurred at 7:10 Saturday evening. Mr. Hoskins worked on the night shift. During the earlier part of the night he acted as fireman on the switch engine. Saturday night he met his engine in charge of the night engineer as it was coming along a stretch of track running beside the company's wood pile. As the locomotive reached him he leaped upon the footboard. Hardly had he reached this position when a heavy log, which had been allowed to stick out too far from the pile of wood caught him, sweeping him from the moving engine. He was thrown to the ground, falling upon his back, his right shoulder and neck across the track.

Hearing his cry the engineer applied the air-brakes and came to a stop within a very short space. The injured man was carefully taken from beneath the wheels. It was at once apparent that his injuries were serious. His face was pale as death, but he retained consciousness and talked rationally. He asked at once for his wife. A message was sent for her. A stretcher was quickly secured and the injured man placed upon it.

A train from Kansas City had just pulled in. The engine was quickly pressed into service to bring the injured man to Plattsmouth.

Some delay was occasioned in finding a car in which the stretcher could be placed. A way car was first tried but the door would not admit the stretcher. It was fully an hour after the accident when the injured man was placed in a baggage car and hurried at express speed to Plattsmouth. Mrs. Hoskins, Mrs. Shreve, wife of the yardmaster at Pacific Junction, and a number of his fellow employes accompanied him. He was attended by Dr. L. B. Bacon. Arriving here the stretcher was placed in a light wagon and conveyed to the Perkins House, that being the nearest available place.

Drs. T. P. and J. S. Livingston arrived in a short time and an examination was made. The muscles of the upper part of the arm were severed and the bones in the arm and shoulder crushed. The doctors saw at once that the unfortunate man was beyond their aid. They could only make his last hours as comfortable as possible.

The Knights of Pythias lodge, of which Mr. Hoskins was a member, left a man here to render what service he could. All through the night the injured man lingered, bearing the pain with wonderful fortitude and evidencing the most remarkable vitality. His wife was with him nearly all the time.

Sunday morning the dying man asked for a minister. Rev. J. E. Houghton, pastor of the Methodist church, was summoned and administered the last sacraments. At 11:30 life was extinct.

The body was at once removed to the undertaking establishment of Streight & Streight where it was prepared for burial. It was placed on the 4:30 train and taken to Pacific Junction. The funeral will take tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, and interment made in the Glenwood cemetery.

"Charlie" Hoskins was fifty years of age. He was known by hundreds of people and everyone who knew him was his friend. That was his nature. It was impossible to know Mr. Hoskins without feeling an attachment for him. He took a personal interest in his friends.

He leaves a wife and three sons, viz: Glen, Charlie and Noah. The former two were with him when he died, but Noah, who works in a small town in Kansas, was not able to arrive in time to see his father alive.

The family will feel the sudden loss most keenly, for above all else Mr. Hoskins was domestic in his tastes and when not at work he was always to be found at his home.

Mr. Hoskins had been employed by the Burlington twenty-five years, and twenty-two years of that time he was located at Pacific Junction. For a long time he was foreman at the round house, but during the recent cut down in employes he with others was set back.

The family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

No Secret About It.

It is no secret that for cuts, burns, ulcers, fever sores, sore eyes, boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklin's Arnica Salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O. K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory of Hope, Tex. 25c at F. G. Fricke & Co.'s drugstore.

A VETERAN PLATTSMOUTH PREACHER

Dr. J. T. Baird for Thirty Years Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

RESIGNS POSITION SO LONG OCCUPIED

Gives Way to a Younger Pastor, Upon Whom the Church Has Not Decided.

PREACHES FAREWELL SERMON SUNDAY

Mr. Baird's life in the Christian ministry extends over a period of forty-five years. It has been a noble life filled with good deeds and helpfulness to others. Not only has it been a long life but an eventful one. It was begun when the nation was threatened with destruction and disruption. Much of it was spent in the very vortex of the turmoil and war. Later his life was spent on the frontier, where dangers and discomforts were undergone to bring the gospel to the pioneers.

Rev. Baird received his earlier education in the public schools of Cincinnati, graduating from the high school in 1854.

He then took up his studies in Yale University, graduating from there in 1858. In the fall of the same year he entered the Theological seminary of Princeton University. There he pursued with diligence his studies to fit him to preach the gospel of peace and good will while daily the murmurs and rumblings of discontent grew louder through the land and the cloud of war and violence arose on the horizon.

And so it happened that in the spring of 1861, just when the great rebellion started Rev. Baird graduated from Princeton and was ordained to the ministry.

It was not an advantageous time to enter upon the preaching the gospel nor was the young pastor's first charge in the best location. His church was in Cincinnati, just on the border line between the North and South. It required diplomacy to preach at that time and in such a place. If a pastor preached freedom there were those who would get up and go out expressing their disapproval in no modest terms, and if he prayed for the president some were not ashamed to let their disapproval be known.

Here the young pastor also witnessed some of the events of the war. The rebels would sometimes get up even farther north than Cincinnati and some of them never got back again. Rev. Baird was in Cincinnati when that haughty southern gentleman, General Marmaduke, was marched ignominiously through the streets, a prisoner of war.

In 1864 Rev. Baird was a member of the Christian Commission. This was a body of workers who went with Sherman's army on its historical march to the sea. They held services, attended the sick, distributed tracts and ministered to the dying. In this capacity Rev. Baird saw much of the fighting. He jokingly says that he and General Palmer stood behind the same tree at the battle of Marietta Hill. After leaving the army the commission made their way back to the north as best they could, riding on top of freight cars most of the time.

During these days Rev. Baird had the privilege of hearing many of the greatest orators and statesmen of the day, among them being Wendell Phillips, Henry Ward Beecher and Lyman Beecher.

In 1865 the young minister decided that the west needed him and, leaving behind the comforts of civilization he made his way to the newly opened territory of Nebraska. Coming up on the steamboat, he stopped at Brownville, then a busy flourishing town. Here he took up his labors—working hard and devoting his education and cultured mind to the needs of the pioneers.

Among the members of his little flock in Brownville were a future governor and a United States senator. The former was Gov. Furness and the latter Senator Tipton, the first representative of Nebraska in the national senate.

In 1875 Rev. Baird removed to Plattsmouth, where he has since been located.

The church here at that time was located on Sixth and Main, where the Riley Hotel now stands. In 1890, when Mr. Riley first proposed building the hotel, the congregation had to look about for a new location. The old church was sold and the present handsome edifice erected.

Rev. Baird has been a most faithful pastor here. He seldom took a vacation but was always to be found at his post of duty.

Rev. Baird can truly say in these, his latter days: "I have fought the good fight; I have kept the faith."

Rev. Baird has not definitely decided yet whether he will remain in Plattsmouth or remove to another city. The best wishes of all who know him, go with him wherever he may be located.

Dr. Baird will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday and it will be a sad scene to witness his parting with those who have been so long identified with him in church affairs, when he steps down from the pulpit for perhaps the last time. It will be hard for those who have witnessed the building of the present magnificent church edifice which has grown to its present extensive proportions under his faithful and excellent administration.

Dr. Baird for thirty years pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city has submitted his resignation to the congregation. The congregation has considered the same and decided to accept. Next Sunday, upon the 30th anniversary of his pastorate here, Rev. Baird will preach his farewell sermon.

SWITZER IS HEARD FROM

Famous Ashland Saloon Man Now In Seattle, Wash.

ASHLAND, Neb., June 26.—After many years word has been received from John Switzer who, in the early days, enjoyed great notoriety in eastern Nebraska for his unique methods of meeting the charges of the temperance crusade of 1874 against his saloon in Ashland. In that year the Christian women of the town, in common with women all over the country, organized into praying bands for the purpose of driving the saloons out of business. This was the impulse that called the Women's Christian Temperance union into existence. The frequent and prolonged visits of the good ladies to his saloon nettled John Switzer and on one occasion he routed them by placing quantities of red pepper on the hot stove, the bar and the floor, causing such fits of sneezing that praying was out of the question. After this the band of women entered the place no longer but knelt and prayed in a semicircle before the door. Many of the most prominent women in the place were in the band, and the scene always caused great crowds of spectators to congregate in the street. This aroused Switzer only the more and he finally brought things to a climax by filling a bucket with red paint and spraying it over the kneeling women with a squirt gun. Threatened with arrest and prosecution for breach of the public peace, the saloonkeeper consented to go out of business and leave town if the prosecution was dropped.

The man dropped out of sight for over thirty years and has just been heard from. From Ashland he drifted to Denver where he was unsuccessful and then went to Seattle on foot, arriving with fifteen cents in cash. Here he fled on a homestead, upon which a part of the city was afterward built, and embarked in the real estate business which he still follows. He is now one of the wealthy citizens of Seattle. After leaving Ashland he never again engaged in the saloon business.

Dying of Famine

is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers, of Cearloss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor, in vain. I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at F. G. Fricke & Co.'s drug store, price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.
