That 100 Pound Catfish

The special correspondent of the World-Herald of this morning, speaking of the mammoth catfish caught last Friday says: "A 100-pound catfish is landed in the Missouri river near Plattsmouth, having been caught by A. Childers of that city. Word to that effect was received today by Game Warden Carter, and Superintendent O'Brien of the South Bend hatcheries at once left for Plattsmouth to inspect the monster. The state fish and game department is anxious to obtain a number of extra large specimens of catfish to exhibit at the state fair, and will pay a good price for fish weighing 100 pounds or more. "Lariat" is the best way to keep fish alive in captivity. A stout rope is tied around the fish's body just behind the gills and in front of the large frontal fins. The fish cannot slip through this loop, and is staked out in shallow water."

Bend Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at F. G. Fricke & Co. drug store; price 50c.

Great Enthusiasm for M. W. A. Picnic

The "Royal Woodman" official organ of the Nebraska M. W. A., comes out in its July issue with its main first-page article a big account of the grand picnic to be held here August 2. The following is clipped from the article:

"Never has a Modern Woodmen picnic aroused greater interest in Omaha, South Omaha and vicinity, and at this writing nearly all the camps in the two cities have taken membership in the association. In addition many country camps are expected to join, including all the camps of Cass county, in which Plattsmouth is located."

"Plattsmouth is making elaborate preparations to entertain the visitors. The beautiful city is abundantly able to care for the thousands expected. The picnic grounds are in the heart of the city and are ideal. Cass camp, No. 332, of Plattsmouth, has vowed that this picnic shall be the best ever held in this state, and with this end in view appointed this strong committee, which has been working conjunction with the officers of the Omaha District Logrolling association: Neighbors Mayor Henry R. Gering, D. B. Smith, Dr. E. W. Cook, William Hassler and Fred W. Ebenger. This committee has been hard at work, and when the picnic day arrives will have everything in ship-shape condition."

"The Omaha and South Omaha contingent will go on a special train, which leaves the Burlington station at 8:30 a. m. The railroad officials will have plenty of cars on hand and a feature will be the checking of lunch baskets and hand baggage at the Omaha depot direct to the picnic ground without charge. Round trip tickets are only 75 cents; children 25 cents."

Demand for Empties.

The demand for empty box cars for the grain trade, says the Lincoln Journal, is about as strong with the Burlington now as it ever gets to be. The demand came almost without warning. The railroad people looked for the grain trade to become a considerable item about this time but they did not look for it to come on with the rush that is now being grappled with. The usual supply of box cars for this week has been swelled with 750 empties sent westward by eastern lines and brought to Lincoln in long special trains, known as dragouts. "The Burlington yards are about as full of empties today as they could well be," said a yard man yesterday, "but by tomorrow morning the supply now in the yards will have been moved to the stations awaiting them for loading purposes and a new lot will be in our way. Solid trains of empty cars going westward are meeting solid train loads of new grain on the way to market and the circulation of business just at this time is keeping the Burlington busy."

It is not unusual for Burlington engines to haul eighty and more "empties" west. In railroad parlance these cars are noted as "mts." Loaded cars are known as "loads."

CITY WINS OLD SUIT

Attorneys Notified of Decision of Circuit Court.

THE CASE DISMISSED

Plaintiffs Given Two Months to Ask Rehearing.

Case of New Hampshire Savings Bank and the New Hampshire Banking Co. vs. the City of Plattsmouth Decided for the City—Several Thousand Dollars Were Involved.

This forenoon Jesse L. Root, H. D. Travis and Matthew Gering, attorney for the city in the case of the New Hampshire Savings Bank and the New Hampshire Banking company against the City of Plattsmouth, received a communication from John D. Jordan, clerk of the circuit court of appeals for the Eighth circuit, informing them that on the 24th of this month an opinion written by Judge Pollock in that case had been filed in St. Paul, reversing the decision of Judge Garland, remanding the case to the court at Omaha, with direction to dismiss the application of the Banking company for a deficiency judgment. The plaintiffs will have until September to file application for a rehearing. It is not believed by the attorney that a rehearing will be granted.

The case is one of long standing. It was tried in November 1904, before Judge Garland, of South Dakota, assisted by Judge Munger, and decided in favor of the plaintiff. By this decision the city was required to pay $3,336.35 with interest at 7 per cent from March 1st, 1902, and the costs of the hearing. The city appealed from this decision to the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit. The case was argued before Judges Pollock, Vandever, Sanborn and Hook by Mr. Gering at the June 1905 term of that court.

The case grows out of the city's attempt at municipal ownership. When the city took charge of the plant it was encumbered with $30,000 of bonds. When the first term of the city's losing contract with the light company expired the city continued to remain in possession of the plant, but for some reason the city authorities refused to pay taxes on the property, or to pay the $1800.00 interest on the bonded debt.

Thereupon the New Hampshire Savings Bank and the New Hampshire Banking Company, the owners of the $30,000 bonds commenced an action in the United States Court in Omaha, asking a foreclosure of the deed of trust, and that the city be held by its acts to have purchased the property and that it was liable for the $30,000 bonded debt; asking that the property be sold and the city held for any deficiency.

The city employed Mr. Matthew Gering as special counsel in its interests and he associated with him Mr. Jesse L. Root. They, with Judge H. D. Travis, represented the city when the case was tried in the circuit court and court of appeals, which courts decided against the city. And these same men have fought the case through to the present successful end. The judges of the circuit court of appeals give careful consideration to all cases before deciding them and rarely reverse themselves or enter a second opinion in a case before them. The final orders may not be entered in Omaha till October or November, but the outlook now is that before the close of 1905, every vestige of this claim against the city will be wiped from the records of the courts and the city released from apprehension that it will be called on to put up any more money on account of its first dip into municipal ownership of public utilities.

NOT "IN IT" WITH NEBRASKA

That's What Alpheus Adams Says About California, from Which State He Has Just Returned.

Alpheus Adams, and wife and children, who have been visiting at the home of Oliver Dovey for several days, left Monday afternoon for Lincoln. They have just returned from the Pacific coast, taking in Portland and other points.

Mr. Adams was in the banking business in Eagle before he went west. He disposed of his interests there some time ago and went to the Pacific coast with the intention of settling there. But it didn't take him long to decide that when compared with Nebraska the Pacific coast country is not at all "in it."

The land in Oregon is mountainous and hilly. Much of it would not be considered by Nebraskans to be worth farming. Fields are small, of necessity. When they reap their grain they generally begin at the bottom of a hill and cut round and round it till they reach the top. Mr. Adams says he would not exchange a quarter section of Cass county land for a thousand acres in Oregon.

The cities he considers to be largely of false growth. They are kept up by tourists. They have been built up by eastern speculative capital. The docks, too, are in bad shape. No large ships come up to Portland because the Willamette river has a shifting, shallow channel, a very poor harbor.

Mr. Adams has looked over the field thoroughly and is positive in his opinion that Nebraska is better both in towns and country than the Pacific coast.

Prose to the Farmer.

During a recent trip out in the county the glory and independence of the agriculturist—the lord of the field and farm—were impressed upon the writer, and, marking the manifold reward for his trust in nature, his hard work and his perspiring brow, in the great munificence of this year's crops, we thought, how thankful is he?

The click of the reaper, the hum and smoke of the thrasher, the swish and sweep of the rakes and stackers and the fragrance of their burdens, the scamper and squeal of the copper-colored Durocs and the cheerful salutations of the dusty and sweat-begrimed farmer—these were some of the things that made us long to be one of them—the most independent, and depended upon class on earth. And then we thought of the price of corn, wheat, hogs and cattle, and the wads of long-green after the market-day, of the winter's relaxation from care along beside a barrel of Winesaps and a bunch of ease, peace and contentment, by a big wood-fire—and the mountain of scrub-oak and cottonwood upon which appetites might be sharpened with the occasional use of a sharp axe, of the tranquility, the health of early hours and wholesome food—and, oh, well! Who would not be a farmer in Cass?—E. W.

More Big Fish.

Jake Miller's fishing luck turned this morning. Jake has lines set all along the river from Main street to the mouth of the Platte. This morning, just after sunrise, he was making the rounds taking off a two or three pounder here and there, and figuring rather a meagre profit at 5 cents a pound. Fishing didn't seem like a very remunerative business to Jake, and he probably was suffering from the Monday morning blues, anyway. He had made half the rounds and gabbled up about three small ones when he reached the hook that was holding the day's fortune. He pulled on it and at once a great commotion arose, and the water was churned into foam. Jake knew he had a good one. After a struggle he landed it. At John Hatt's store it weighed 45 pounds.

It was reported that Mr. Miller landed another fish at about 10 o'clock this morning, the estimated weight of which was 85 pounds.

Matt Joy and wife and Joe Peters and wife caught a 50 pound catfish in the Platte near Swallow Hill yesterday afternoon. They brought the big fellow along home with them.

A Mistake in the "Cook."

The item we clipped a few days since from the Nebraska City Tribune to the effect that Mrs. James Cook of Julian had been seriously burned by a gasoline stove, is a mistake insofar as it refers to James Cook, Jr., of Cedar Creek. Our friend Cook at Cedar Creek says he is not married, never was and don't contemplate committing matrimony soon. Mr. Cook passed through the city one day last week en route for Julian, where he formerly lived and where he owns property, to look after some business matters, and not knowing he was an old bachelor, we presumed that the Mrs. Cook burned was his wife. However, the Journal stands corrected.
