MATTER OF MEMORY

President and Massachusetts Men at Issue as to His Views on Reciprocity.

HIS CHARGE AGAINST WHITNEY

Declares the Late Candidate for Bay State Governor Guilty of Willful Misstatement—Bay State Man Replies.

Washington, Nov. 16.—An issue of veracity has arisen in which the president is on one side and other gentlemen on the other, the other gentlemen being citizens of Massachusetts and believes in reciprocity with Canada. Governor Douglas, of Massachusetts, headed a delegation of boot and shoe and leather manufacturers, which called on the president to urge the repeal of the duty on hides. The delegation presented its argument, and the president replied that the matter was one with which congress must deal, and which that body must originate, but that what had been said he would carefully consider.

Warned by a Former Experience.

The feature of the visit, however, was in the charge the president made against a committee which called upon him a year ago, his experience with that committee, he said, forbade him discussing the situation freely and informally. He continued: "When the president of the United States definitely and formally expresses himself for publication on a question of great national importance what he says should not be left to the imperfection of memory, often colored by interest, but should be put beyond the possibility of misunderstanding by careful preparation and commitment to writing. To try to repeat from memory what the president has said when a year has elapsed is to show entire indifference to accuracy, as well as to propriety."

Charge Against Whitney.

"Yet this is precisely what Mr. Whitney did in the Massachusetts campaign that has just closed. He pretended to quote what I had said during the course of the long and informal interview with his committee a year before; no notes of the conversation having been taken at the time. Not only did he misquote the words I used, but by suppressing almost all that I had said, and by giving what he purported to give entirely apart from its context, he absolutely—and as I am constrained to believe—deliberately, misrepresented what had occurred, and he knew well that it was impossible for the president of the United States to enter into a personal discussion about the matter with him."

WHITNEY PUTS IN A DENIAL

Insists on His Allegation and Disavows Any Intentional Misrepresentation.

A dispatch from Boston says that Henry M. Whitney, when he was advised of the president's statement to Governor Douglas, said: "I had no intention to misinterpret the president. I certainly understood him to say at our conference that he favored reciprocity with Canada." After some thought Whitney added: "Andrew G. Webster and J. M. W. Hall, ex-mayor of Cambridge, who were with me on the committee, had the same understanding, I believe. I shall communicate with them immediately in order to verify this beyond a doubt."

The dispatch adds that Whitney later made the following statement: "Andrew G. Webster, J. M. W. Hall and I, consisting of a sub-committee of the Chamber of Commerce committee of 100 on reciprocal trade, visited Washington last winter for a conference with the president touching especially the matter of the Hay-Bond treaty. I, as chairman of the committee, made an argument in favor of the treaty, and in the argument made reference to the advantage of reciprocal treaties with Canada. We understood the president to express himself as not unfavorable to the fullest freedom of trade with Canada."

"While we may have misunderstood the president I do not see how we could have done so. I absolutely deny any 'willful' and 'intentional' misrepresentation of the president's attitude, and I have no recollection of what he refers to as the 'context' which was calculated to modify the views he expressed. The committee above named made substantially this report to the full committee at the time of our return from Washington, and the president's attitude, as we understood it, has been subject for congratulation among our people from the time of our visit to Washington until the present."

"I regret extremely that the president should consider that I have misrepresented his attitude, and especially that he should feel I have intentionally done so, which I aver is not true." Copies of this statement, the dispatch concludes, were sent to Hall and Webster, who accompanied Whitney to the White House, and they both declare that Whitney correctly states, according to their recollection, what the president said.

HARRIMAN VS. HYDE

Two Witnesses in the Insurance Investigation Shown in Direct Contradiction.

RAILROAD MAN SAYS HE DIDN'T

Ex-Equitable Manager Says He Did, and There You Are.

Several Men, Among Them George Gould, Who Wanted to Control the Life Company.

New York, Nov. 16.—E. H. Harriman, chairman of the board of directors of the Union Pacific railroad, ex-member of the board of directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society, and connected with many railroads and financial institutions, the former friend of James Hazen Hyde, against whom the latter charged acts of unbecomingly friendly nature in his testimony, was one of the chief witnesses before the Armstrong committee on insurance investigation. Harriman's testimony was a series of denials of the charges made by Hyde. Contrary to Hyde's statement Harriman said Hyde came to him about a year ago and asked him to use his influence to have him appointed ambassador to France.

E. H. HARRIMAN.

That Union Pacific Deal.

Upon Hyde's testimony relative to the settlement of the Odell suit being read to him Harriman denied that he had suggested to Hyde any danger of a repeal of the charter of the Mercantile Trust company, directly or indirectly, and stated that Hyde came to him and asked him to use his influence with Odell toward a settlement of the suit. Harriman explained that he wanted Hyde's individual signature to the syndicate agreement of the $75,000,000 Union Pacific pool because no syndicate wants a corporation as a member. He justified this because it was difficult to guard confidences when more than one individual represented the same interest.

Where He Did "Not Remember."

Witness also denied that he had requested that the executive committee be not informed of this deal, and when Hyde's testimony on this point was read to him he replied that "he did not remember." Harriman said that early in the Equitable troubles he had defended Hyde from attacks, and had advised him to move the adoption of the Frick report, telling him that he would stand by him through thick and thin.

REAFFIRMED BY HYDE

Recalled He Says His Story About Harriman Is the Truth.

After Harriman had testified Hyde was called again and asked if he heard Harriman testify. He replied that he had. He reaffirmed his previous testimony, and supplied data about several questions concerning which Harriman was uncertain. Hyde was the first witness of the day. He told of four offers for his stock beside that of Ryan, to whom he sold. These offers were made by Frick and Harriman, by George Gould, by Gage E. Tarbell, representing a syndicate, and by George W. Young. These were made verbally, and the largest was made by Young, ex-president of the United States Mortgage and Trust company, who offered $7,000,000. Hyde said he declined all these offers because he did not think it to the best interest of the society to accept any of them.

Ryan made the only offer for the stock after the Frick report. Hyde started to read a statement in reply to the criticism of Superintendent Heards on the safe deposit companies controlled by the Equitable, but it was marked for identification and put in evidence without its reading being finished.

Hyde said in answer to Senator Armstrong that his powers of attorney were destroyed when he returned from Europe always, but that if an obligation should turn up now purporting to have been made while he was abroad the situation would be very embarrassing. Late in the day Hyde threw the room into an uproar by an answer to Assemblyman Rogers, who asked Hyde why Odell was feared when there was no legislature in session and the governor was soon to retire. Hyde replied that some men are more influential and powerful out of office than in.

With this session the examination of both Hyde and Harriman was completed, and the next witness who is awaited with much interest is Odell, who has requested that he be examined.
