Mrs. F. W. Robb suffered very serious injuries Monday evening at the home of W. W. Sikes, where she was making a call. It appears that she stepped upon a loose plank in the walk, which tripped her and she fell with such force that her right arm was broken at the shoulder. A physician was called and found the injury a very serious one from which it will take a long time to recover, on account of her age.

Pirating Foley's Honey and Tar.

Foley & Co., Chicago, originated Honey and Tar as a throat and lung remedy, and on account of the great merit and popularity of Foley's Honey and Tar many imitations are offered for the genuine. These worthless imitations have similar sounding names. Beware of them. The genuine Foley's Honey and Tar is in a yellow package. Ask for it and refuse any substitute. It is the best remedy for coughs and colds. F. G. Fricke & Co.

NEBRASKANS HELD IN RUSSIA

Geo. Schmidt and Wife of McCook, Visit Russia and are Sent to Separate Colonies.

A special from Lincoln reports two prominent Nebraskans, who took a notion to visit their native land as being "in a bad box." It says: "Wealthy, respected and happy, Mr. and Mrs. George Schmidt of McCook decided to visit Russia, the land of their birth. Now the family has been broken up by the Russian police and the authorities refuse to allow them to leave the land of the czar.

"They formerly lived in Lincoln and were married in this city. Monday Marriage License Clerk Abbott received a letter from Rev. Gustav L. Henkleman of McCook, giving the details of the trouble.

"As soon as the two arrived in Russia they were apprehended. Mrs. Schmidt was sent to one colony and the husband to another. The Russians examined their marriage certificate and took it from them.

"Henkleman wanted a copy of the marriage certificate and Abbott furnished it. The minister will take the matter up with the Russian embassy in Washington. Both the prisoners are American citizens. They have several children."

A man who gave the name of John Marshall and who seemed to hail from no place in particular, was arrested Saturday evening on the charge of passing checks of doubtful value. At the Kastner pool hall a check for $10 was cashed, while a check for $5.15 was accepted at the Stroble saloon. Both checks were drawn on the Bank of Dunbar. Communication with the bank revealed that Marshall had deposited a certificate of deposit with them for $70, issued from an Oklahoma bank. The Dunbar bank was holding the certificate until the Oklahoma bank could be heard from. As neither holder of Marshall's checks offered to prosecute the man, he was released this afternoon by the chief of police.

From the Register.

Attorney Snavely of Lincoln spent Sunday in town the guest of Joshua Sutphin. The two gentlemen gave us a pleasant call.

Alas Kellberg is carrying one eye in several languages of bandage. He was working on the section for the M. P. road, and not being an Italian didn't know the tie was rotten. Some more will be said next week.

Not a farmer in this part of the state but that are too busy to talk anything but corn, and the elevators are crowded to their capacity in taking care of the immense crop. We will wager that not one town of twice the inhabitants of Nehawka, handles the amount of grain that this burg does.

Last Monday Mrs. Rena McFadden and children of Del Norte, Colorado, stopped off here to visit with her brother, J. M. Palmer and wife and her sister, Mrs. O. T. Rockwell and family, for a few days. She was on her way from Tuscola, Mich., where she had been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Palmer.

A. L. Tidd, late candidate for county judge on the republican ticket, gave this office a friendly visit last Wednesday forenoon and hasn't a sore spot over the returns of the late election. While defeated by "Stand Pat" republicans, he repeats the fundamental principles of our government "Vox Populi, Vox Dei," and carries no ill feeling over his defeat. This spirit will make more statesmen than parties who vote "the way pap voted."

Pe-ru-na Used in Thousands of Homes.

Gov. Isaac Sharp.

ISAAC SHARP, ex-Governor of Kansas, in a letter from 1227 I St., N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I can earnestly recommend your Pe-ru-na as an excellent tonic. Its reputation as a cure for catarrh is firmly established by my friends, who have been benefited by its use, and the public should know its great curative qualities."—Isaac Sharp.

Mr. James Currie, a prominent merchant of Montreal, Can., writes from 1806 Notre Dame St., as follows:

"I have used your Pe-ru-na for catarrh and find it an excellent remedy for coughs and colds."—James Currie.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Pe-ru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

MORAL LAWS IMMUTABLE

Dr. Parkhurst Makes a Comparison Between Them and Those of Nature.

New York, Nov. 21.—Rev. Dr. Parkhurst told his congregation in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church that he believed in damnation. "The apparent cruelties attributed to God," he said, "are not a circumstance to the cruelties in nature. Natural laws pay no more attention to man than to a dog.

"Saints as well as sinners were burned in the Windsor fire and in the Salem disaster. If God burns up a body He will burn up a soul that gets in the way of his moral laws. The God of love in 1755 destroyed 30,000 persons in the Lisbon earthquake. He does not amend physical laws to save saints.

"If man will not accept God's moral laws then I should say that God would damn him, and I should say further that God ought to damn him."

Grafting Constables to Do Time.

Milwaukee, Nov. 21.—Papers affirming the decision of the municipal court having been received from the supreme court at Madison William Hanley and Joseph Trost, ex-constables at Wauwatosa convicted of malfeasance in office, will be taken to the workhouse at once to serve six months in that institution. The constables arrested a farmer on a petty charge in February, 1903, and released him on payment of $75.

FOOTPRINTS IN THE SNOW

(Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.)

There had been no less than thirty-six thefts and burglaries in the eastern suburb of the city, all evidently by the same hand, and yet the police had not found the culprit.

I know that the police worked hard on this case, and that every seeming clue was carefully followed, and that they let a boy fifteen years old take all the credit away from them was not their fault. I was that boy, and that I solved the mystery was owing to luck. The crimes began about the middle of September, and I gave them no attention until about the 1st of November. Then I happened to be talking with a man who had had his pushcart stolen. This, in fact, was at the beginning of the thefts. He mentioned that the tire of one of the wheels had been wrapped with wire to tighten it.

On the night of the talk another house was robbed. It was only two blocks from my father's house, and I went there, with others. The police refused all information, but during the day I was told by a son of the householder that they had found tracks under a window. It was an open fall, and the ground had not yet frozen. The tracks were those of a boot, and the sole of one had been mended. I went up and down the alley in the rear of the house with this boy, and in the dust we found the impress of what looked to be buggy tires. They were something else, however—they were the impress of the tires of that pushcart. At every revolution one of the wheels left a sort of smudge, and I was justified in believing that it was the tire that did it.

My theory was that all the stolen goods had been taken away in the pushcart, but the case was blocked right there. Where had they been taken? Had I gone to the police with my theory I should have been ridiculed. The detective who can't find a clue himself doesn't want any one else to find one. When I had lain awake a dozen nights trying to figure things out luck helped me. The streets were still dusty. A barn had been broken open and a lot of bedding temporarily stored therein had been taken.

I happened to be passing the place when the discovery was made and the police telephoned for. There were the tracks of the pushcart again. In the dusty road following the cart were boot tracks, and one of them had a patch on the sole. I followed them for a mile straight out into the country before they were lost.

It was easy to figure that if the thief was storing it somewhere and that the country offered a safer place than the city. The idea now was to follow along the road and spot off any likely looking place. I had my mind made up that it would be an old barn out about two miles. I walked out on the road for five miles and found no one but farmers of honest standing. I took two crossroads and followed them for a distance, but with the same result. The thief had gone out that road with the pushcart and the bedding, but where had he brought up? The weather changed, the ground froze, and all at once the crimes ceased.

Then luck came again. I was buying a pair of winter gloves in a store when a farmer called and asked for a pair of mittens for a woman. Some talk followed, and it came out that she was a widow who was living next to him, three miles out of town. He also asked where he could get a pair of rubber boots for her.

I got the idea right then and there that the widow was the criminal. It seemed absurd, but yet the idea clung. A detective would have told me to go home and soak my head, and a reporter would have laughed me out of his room. I chewed over the thing for a week, and then something happened.

I had been sent on an errand directly after breakfast, and I passed a house which had been burglarized the night before. There were quite a number of people about, and the owner was telling them how entrance had been effected and what had been taken. What hunters and farmers call a tracking snow had fallen during the night, and the first thing I looked for was the track of that pushcart.

An alley ran alongside the house, and there they were. There were also prints of rubber boots. The alley gate opened rather hard, and sticking to it were some small threads of blue yarn. The farmer had bought blue mittens for the widow. Taking up the tracks, I followed them for two miles before they were obliterated by travel. I kept on to the house of the widow and found it a small cottage. Between the gate and the road the cart tracks and the footprints were as plain as day.

I had worked the case as far as I could, and I now went to the police. I was sneered at and warned not to meddle with their business. I went to the sufferer by the last robbery, and as he was a man of influence and anxious to get his property back he not only listened, but insisted that something be done. A search warrant was procured, a couple of detectives went out to the widow's farm, and from an outdoor cellar enough stolen property was dragged to fill several stores.

She had been stealing off and on for three years. She had always dressed as a man in her excursions. Until she stole the pushcart she had used a wheelbarrow. Stolen money she had made use of, but not a stolen article had been sold. She had passed for a respectable, hard working woman, and by her keeping the goods on hand her lawyers made out that she was a kleptomaniac and got her a sentence of two years, when she might have otherwise got fifteen.
