FEDERAL DIVORCE HUNT

Women Clerks to Examine Records For Twenty Years. CONGRESS WANTS STATISTICS.

Information Gained by Census Clerks Sent to New York and Every Principal County in the United States Will Be Used in Framing a Uniform Divorce Law.

Twelve of the brightest and most skillful women clerks in the department of commerce and labor of the bureau of the census recently invaded the county courthouse at New York, marshaled by William H. Jarvis, and installed themselves in the surrogate's court. They will hold possession every day for some eight weeks when the room is not needed by the surrogate. In that time they expect to go over the divorce records of New York county for twenty years, says the New York World. Examinations of similar records will be made simultaneously in every principal county of every state in the United States for the purpose of collating information, which will be used in framing a bill for the federal supervision of divorces. Just as there is a federal supervision of bankrupts. Another body of Washington clerks was set to work in Brooklyn on the same task. The unannounced appearance of the young women created a sensation in the courthouse, and there was a general rush of clerks "to look them over." There wasn't much to see except a dozen coiffures bent low over a long table and many taper fingers going deftly over a great mass of papers and a dozen pencils making swift records. When the news spread to the offices of lawyers who have been counsel in divorce proceedings in which the evidence was sealed after the granting of the decree there was a general interrogation as to how far the federal government would go in its researches. The head of the clerical force expressed the opinion that as a matter of courtesy the county would permit the examination of the sealed bundles which no man outside of the referees and the judges had seen. Although Mr. Jarvis made it clear that no names were to be copied in the compilation of the statistics, the mere announcement that the arena of divorce secrets were to be thrown open to twelve women created consternation. The men and women employed in the census bureau are required not only to possess intelligence, but good memory. Every employee is under bond not to reveal information under pain of $500 fine or a term of imprisonment, or both. The twelve women and the eight men brought on from Washington were selected with special reference to their fitness and their loyalty. Most of them are from southern states and are especially jealous of their reputations for being able to keep secrets. Nevertheless the attorneys who have family skeletons locked up were averse to any secrets being distributed among twelve women, even if no names should be placed on record. In the state of New York it is the law that all cases not tried in open court are sealed by direction of the court, and this is strictly enforced either literally or presumably, sometimes the entire record of a case being securely sealed with big red seals and then tied with red tape, with the exception of the decree. Then again it has often been said that divorces have been granted to certain influential persons of social or financial standing in the community that have been secretly put away and guarded so that information of them has never come to light. These will now be made subjects of a thorough search and all the data regarding them will be placed in the public records at Washington. The secrets thus disclosed will not be for publication, but for the use of the government only, no matter how sensational may be the character of the facts revealed. The examiners will make no record of names—except in their memories—but will file answers to the following queries: State or country in which married. Date of marriage. Date of separation. Date of filing petition. Who was libellant—husband or wife? How was notice served—personally or by publication? Was case contested? Was decree granted? Date of decree or judgment. Number of years married. Cause for which divorced. If not direct, was intemperance an indirect cause? Kind of divorce—absolute or limited. Number of children by this union; number affected by decree. Was alimony asked for? Was alimony granted? Occupation of husband; of wife. Residence of libellee. Stuffing For Kansas Pillows. Mrs. Gilyeat, clerk in the state auditor's office, Topeka, Kan., is making a sofa pillow that will represent between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000 in bonds which have been canceled by the state school fund commission during the time Mrs. Gilyeat has been in the auditor's office, says Leslie's Weekly. When bonds are paid or refunded the auditor punches holes in them. These small round pieces of paper Mrs. Gilyeat has saved for her pillow, and she has kept note of the value of the bonds canceled. She now has the clippings from more than $10,000,000 worth of the bonds.

Ayer's Weeping Water. From the Herald. Postmaster G. H. Olive left last Friday for a visit with his parents at Indianola, Iowa. Carl Fischer and son Herman left for Oklahoma, Tuesday, to look at land, and if suited will probably invest in a slice of it. Chas. and Henry Meyers left for Buffalo county, Tuesday morning to look over the country with a view to investing if pleased. Wm. Pool accompanied Peter Olson, Louie Todd and two sons and Judge H. D. Travis to Chase county, Tuesday to look over land.

Word has been received here to the effect that the new switchboard for the Independent exchange has been shipped from the factory direct to this place, and may arrive at any time. Curtis Askew has accepted a position as night agent at the depot here. This is a good position for Curtis, and one which he will fill to the satisfaction of all. Miss Ada Wilson has resigned her position as night operator for the Plattsmouth Telephone Co. Miss Lena Morse has been secured to fill her place. The company is indeed fortunate to secure Miss Morse, and we are sure she will give satisfactory service. The I. O. O. F. lodge of Avoca will hold their third annual picnic in Tefft's grove at Avoca, Wednesday, August 29. The Weeping Water band will furnish the music, and the committee in charge promise a good line of sports to entertain all those who attend. Dr. H. Jensen was unable at the time of leaving last week, to secure anyone to take care of his practice, and on that account says he may return after the meeting of the American Veterinary association and remain until he can secure some one. The doctor has a large practice and feels that it should be taken care of.
