The following appeared in the last issue of the Elmwood Leader-Echo: "A good looking young woman not far from Elmwood is said to be terribly upset in consequence of a mistake she made the other day. Going in a hurry to the Elmwood roller mills after flour, she took up what she supposed was a clean pillow slip from the bureau drawer. She skipped into the mill smiling like a basket of chips and handed the supposed slip to the proprietor who commenced hilling it. The first scoop full went plump through to the floor. When he raised it up to see what was the matter, he discovered two outlets at the bottom heavily fringed. The lady—she lit out without saying a word. The miller laid the article away to await her return, but up to date she has not appeared. This is a huge joke on the miller and the pretty girl, but the miller who puts out a brand of flour called "Golden Gate" says the mistake is easily understood. After recovering from the shock he resurrected the "article," spread it on his flour chest and across the said "article" he recognized his flour brand, Golden Gate, in big green letters, a little worse for the wear but still in a fair state of preservation."

Soap... is something that everyone uses, but know little about. Often one is influenced to buy soap just because it is cheap, not because of its true value as a soap, and the bar that looks big is the seller. Some soaps contain as much as 40 per cent of water—a perfectly milled soap contains less than 10 per cent of water and is perfectly saponified. Thus a soap to be of the highest value to the consumer must be of the highest value in soap quality.

- 1st. To contain nothing to injure the most delicate skin.
- 2nd. It must be perfectly milled.
- 3rd. Contain the lowest percentage of water.
- 4th. Be of the highest percentage of purity and quantity and it contains the quantity.
