James P. Rainey has purchased from W. B. Hargus a fine 160 acres of land south of here, the deal being handled by W. F. Tracy. "Jim" now has a fine home for some worthy young lady, and we fear that if some of them don't land him soon he will order a wife from Sears & Roebuck.

John D. Bramblet, one of our progressive farmers northwest of town, is one who believes in having his home neat and up-to-date, and with that object in view he has commenced the work of laying cement walks about his farm residence, which will add much to the already neat appearance.

Notwithstanding the excessively warm weather, there was almost a bee-hive at the county superintendent's office this morning, with the school ma'ams and masters, taking teachers' examinations. They were working like bees and while they were warm enough, for we heard no complaint of being cold, they seemed to be in a cheerful state of mind. Those to take the examination were: Floy Wortman of South Bend; Jennie Craig of Greenwood; W. M. Thomas, Ellen and Edith Anderson of Louisville; Ursula Harmer of Weeping Water; and Pearl Barker, Anna Leibershal, Blanch Robertson, Florence Dovey and George L. ## WILL MAKE 'EM PAY

New Law Which Rubs Hard on Dead-Beat Class

Deadbeats are having a strenuous time seeking to avoid the payment of old accounts since the new exemption law went into effect. Scores of actions in garnishment have been instigated in the justice courts, and not less than 300 suits on accounts have been started. The litigants hope to get judgments on the delinquent bills and when they are unable to collect, garnishment proceedings will be started. This new law provides that the wages of a working man are garnishable, but attorneys declare that they will be able to knock out the law. According to the new law 90 per cent of a man's wages is exempt, but the local attorneys are of the opinion that in cases where a man is at the head of a family that needs his support his wages are all exempt.

Local merchants of Lincoln, according to the Evening News, have hit upon a good scheme to collect money on old accounts. They send out a statement to the debtor warning him that unless he makes some provision to square his delinquent bill, garnishment proceedings will be started at once. In most cases this brings the delinquent to time. He does not want to have any litigation over the matter, neither does he care to have 10 per cent of his wages held out month after month that the account may be settled. He is told that the court costs will be tacked on, making the sum total of his indebtedness perhaps twice its original size.

Before the end of the month many suits on account will have gone to judgment by default, and by next month the local justices of the peace will be busy with their suits in garnishment. In some instances old judgments will be revived, and an effort will be made to collect the amounts due.

The new exemption act was a part of a scheme on the part of retail merchants of the state to drop out the old law providing that all of a laborer's wages was exempt from garnishment. The retailers made a hard fight and finally succeeded in getting the bill made into a law.

The Doctor Away From Home When Most Needed.

J. W. Hickson, employed with Plattsmouth Water Co., and living on Oak street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, Plattsmouth, says: "My experience with Doan's Kidney Pills warrants me in giving them the strongest kind of recommendation. Off and on for twelve or fourteen years I was subject to attacks of pain in my back and other symptoms which gave evidence of derangements of the kidneys. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at Gering & Co.'s drug store, I used as directed and the benefit derived was so pronounced that I am able to attest to the remarkable value and merit of this remedy. Not only did it give me entire relief from the pain and other irregularities but toned up and invigorated my system generally. I can vouch at all times for the great good to be had from using Doan's Kidney Pills."

They Knew Each Other

T. J. O'Day, editor of the Nehawka Register, had business in the city today and while here was in the office of the county clerk and here met and was introduced to Frank E. Schlater, by deputy clerk D. C. Morgan. When the formalities of the introduction had been completed, Mr. Schlater looked at Mr. O'Day "Why" he said, "I know you" O'Day admitted that the face of Frank did look familiar, and then when he was reminded that they knew each other in the town of Nelegh, some twenty-two years ago saying, "you are Jeff O'Day. I know you." Mr. O'Day's face lightened up when he knew that he had found an old time friend. Frank E. Schlater and T. Jefferson O'Day, met at Nelegh in the year 1836, where Jeff was studying law. They lived there for two years and Frank came away a short time afterwards. O'Day went to Alliance, or rather at that time a place just east of where Alliance now stands was a postoffice known as Grand Lake; a short time afterwards Alliance was platted and Mr. O'Day did the work. A short time afterwards Mr. Schlater went to live about 35 miles south of Alliance on a claim, and was frequently in Alliance, one day to find that O'Day had gone. From this time they lost each other, and not until today in the county clerk's office did they know where each other was. The meeting to them both was like Christmas to the five-year-old, and was indeed joyous.
