WHERE THE MERCHANT FAILS.

An Iowa Farmer Tells Him He Should Advertise, and How.

An lowa farmer contributes to the Des Moines Capitol the following very pertinent suggestion as to why the mail order houses succeed in getting the business of the rural communities away from local merchants:

"If the mail order houses got $1,000

out of this county each month that belongs to the home merchants the fault is with the merchants themselves. The mail order houses advertise and give us prices on everything they offer for sale. They tell us what they have and what they want for it. Of course we get soaked once in awhile and if we do we can try some other house. Most of the home merchants who advertise at all don't quote prices. They neglect to tell us what we want to know-the price. Of course we can go to the store and ask the price of this article, and that, but you know how it is-one doesn't know so well exactly what he wants to buy when he gets in a store as when he is at home. And there is where the mail order houses make their hit. They send us their advertising matter into homes and we read it when we haven't anything else to do and every member of the family who reads their stuff usually finds something that he or some other member of the family wants and many orders are made up and sent out just at such times.

"Right here is where the home merchant falls down. If he talked up his business to us in our homes the same as the mail order houses do the people would be in to see him the next time they came to town and in many cases extra trips would be made to get the things at once that we didn't know we wanted until they were brought to our attention.

"The home merchant can save the expense of getting up a catalogue. We people read the home papers more carefully than we do the catalogue, and if the merchant wants to talk business with us let him put his talk in the home papers, and put it in so that we know he means business. The home merchant likely, nine times out of ten, sells his goods as cheap as the mail order houses, and I believe on many things they are much cheaper. but how are we to know if he doesn't tell us about it.

"A merhant must not think that even his best customers know his goods so well that they can tell what he has without being shown.

"It is none of my business how the papers all the time about us fellows who get a little stuff shipped in once in awhile and never anything said on the other side. There are always two sides of a question, and I have given you mine. If it is worth anything to you you can take it."

BANKERS GETTING WISE.

They See Danger in the Mail-Order System of Business.

It is only lately that bankers of the west have come to a realization that the mail-order system of business has been a serious injury to them, killing off the business of their towns, taking out of circulation money that should help swell the local bank deposits and otherwise interfering with town pro-

The trouble has been with many bankers that they failed to consider the buying-goods-away-from-home evil as anything of particular concern to them. When Farmer Smith would buy a draft for $50 or $100 to send to Chicago, the banker got his ten cents exchange and thought he was that much ahead, while the facts remained that if he could keep the money from being sent from home that $50 of the farmer for the banker might make a dollar or two of profit It was only when the catalogue houses started in to solicit deposits of the people of country towns and farming communities that the bankers took a tumble.

Then again some bankers have such an exalted idea of their position in the town that the goods to be had from the local merchants are not good enough for themselves and families and set a bad example before the people by sending away themselves for what they desire in the way of staples and luxuries Bankers are conserva tive; and are not forward in making suggestions to their patrons as to what they should do with their money. but in this matter it appears sufficient ly important to justify the exercise of what influence the banker can command in behalf of home patronage. It is the business of the town and sur rounding country that affords a profit to the bank. The greater this volume of business can be made the better for the banker and every interest of the town, and the farmers and other laborers as well.

As we predicted in yesterday's letter ening of their courage came the fresh onslaught of the bears pouring grain into all the pits until it looked like an inundation was eminent.

People who had been friendly to all the cereas at the opening tried to take what was offered but soon had their capacity well filled and still there was some to offer. At this writing is looks as though there would still be as much stuff as is necessary to go around and perhaps some to spare. With the return of warm weather which will dispel the fear of an early frost, there is a probability of a still more pronounced decline. But keep your weather eye out for an indication of a gale from the northwest, for with any liability of colder weather these prices may look cheap, for the corn is not out of the way of a offspring in a new school)-And his frost by any means, nor will it be for some days to come.
