Hallowe'en Social.

Last night, at the home of their pastor, Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Zink, was given a Hallowe'en Social by the Endeavor Society of the Christian Church. On account of other arrangements within the limits of the church it was necessary to have it the evening before. Notwithstanding the inclement weather there was a goodly crowd of young and old folks assembled at the appointed time, and each one who came seemed to be bent on having as good time as it was possible within his capacity. Omnipotent ghosts flitted through the lawn and into the lantern-lighted house, where each guest was received by a terrible imp-looking ghost with a most clammy hand-shake, and was motioned up a winding stairway, where other ghosts assisted in the arrangements for the presentation of the guests to the assembled audience. When all had arrived, then each tried his luck in diving for the coveted apple; fortunes were told, games of mirth-provoking get-up were indulged, music dispensed; the program being completed by a beautiful solo by Mae Morgan, which was rendered in the lady's easy and charming manner, and was most thoroughly enjoyed by all. After this very toothsome refreshments were served, and the various guests wended their way homeward in a most happy frame of mind, feeling that it is good to live in full fellowship and friendly esteem.

Mrs. Dr. MacArthur visited friends here this week.

A bright-eyed baby girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hart Wednesday, October 23rd. All concerned are doing nicely.

Mrs. O. H. Eggleston of Elk City, Oklahoma, is visiting friends here this week.

Miss Anna Neitzel is visiting her brother, Robert E., of Waterloo, at present.

Martin & Tool shipped out a car load of apples Wednesday.

Albert Hunt returned Saturday from a business trip to Wisconsin.

Miss Charity Wurts, of Lincoln, visited at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. J. Tool, Sunday.

Mrs. Dietz of Lincoln, visited at the home of J. Goehry over Sunday.

Esco Ridgeway was down from University Place over Sunday.

The dance in the M. W. A. hall Friday evening was well attended. Steinhansen's orchestra from Omaha, furnished some very fine music.

J. J. Gustin received a car load of feeders from South Omaha Friday.

Mrs. Mira McDonald, who has been visiting at the home of F. Wolf, departed for Ashland, Oregon, Wednesday.

Paul Schewe went to South Omaha Friday and purchased a car load of feeders which arrived here Saturday morning.

C. E. Metzger was shaking hands with the residents of this burg Friday. He is a candidate for clerk of the district court and is a very capable young man and qualified to handle the position.

Miss Amy Westlake, a very competent lady clerk, who has been in the employ of Martin & Tool, of this place for the past year, was happily wedded to Mr. J. W. Shank of Lincoln, Saturday, October 26. The bride and groom visited relatives here Sunday and were given a rousing farewell reception before their departure to their home in Lincoln Sunday evening. The Journal joins with their many friends in wishing them success in their matrimonial venture.

Thursday, October 24th was the 48th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Leis, and a number of their friends took advantage of it, and planned a neat little surprise on them. They were taken completely unawares. A few presents were given them and the evening was spent in playing progressive high-five. A pleasant feature was that Mr. and Mrs. Leis tied for first prize—each winning ten out of the eleven games played. The guests all departed at a late hour wishing them good health for at least two years more, when they all expected to be present to assist them in celebrating their fiftieth or golden anniversary.

Mrs. Philip Anders, who has been visiting at the home of her daughter for the past week, departed for her home in Omaha this afternoon on the fast mail.

Mrs. R. H. Sampson and little child departed this morning for Hillsdale, Iowa, where they will visit for some time with the parents of Mrs. Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Anthony.

J. C. Peterson is improving his property on South Fourth street by the building of a new permanent brick walk from the alley to Pearl street, which is a great improvement.

KILLED BY THE CARS LAST NIGHT

Greek Interpreter Meets Death While Attempting to Remove Hand Car From the Main Burlington Railroad Track.

DIED A FEW HOURS AFTERWARD

Game Here With a Gang of Railroad Laborers and Made Many Friends by His Gentlemanly and Affable Manners.

Last evening, a little after 11 o'clock, while going to their bunk car which sets at the termination of the siding, extending from the Burlington station to "Happy Hollow," a gang of Greek laborers who are employed by the Burlington, as an extra gang surfacing and doing section work on the road and in the yards, were overtaken by freight train No. 74 going east, near the Duff Grain Company's elevator, as they were going east on a hand car, and before the car could be removed, struck the same and catching one of the number, the foreman, James Malos, so severely injuring him that he died before morning. While the Greeks are very secretive, from the best information that can be gleaned, they had been down town, and were at the store of John Schiappacassa, and at about 11 o'clock were going to their car for the night. This man, James Malos, was the foreman of the extra gang and has been working for the company here for sometime. He, with the remainder of the gang, waited until No. 1 (the Denver flyer) had passed and thinking as the distance was only short, less than a half mile, that they could make it easily before another train would come along. They therefore placed their hand car on the track and started for their bunk car. They had hardly gotten started when No. 74, the freight for the east, which had been held in the yards for the passage of the Denver flyer, started to pull out of the yards behind them. As there is always engines working in the yards, the sound of the pulling out of the freight behind them did not attract their attention until it had gotten almost upon them, then they jumped and endeavored to get the hand car off the track, and had it off all but one corner, when the train being so close on them that they all got out of the way, but James Malos, the foreman, seeing that the hand car did not clear, jumped across the track and endeavored to push or pull the car entirely clear and stayed too long; the engine of the freight struck the hand car and at the same catching Mr. Malos, rolling him under the hand car, and when it was pushed away, the engine wheels passing over his legs and feet, cutting one leg off above the knee and the other passing over the foot, severing it entirely.

The train was immediately stopped and the comrades of the injured man took him to bunk car, near by, which was used by another gang, and from there, just as soon as notice would be given, a stretcher was brought and he was taken to the office of the company surgeon, where he was worked with during the night, in an attempt to relieve his sufferings, which were intense and to save his life if possible, the latter of which were not possible to do, he dying at 4:45 this morning. B. J. Reynolds, the night yardmaster, endeavored to get a statement from him as to what was the cause of the accident, but he no doubt thinking that he was in some way the cause of the accident, he having charge of the hand car and being the gang foreman, would not answer Mr. Reynolds. This morning after daylight one of the gang found a portion of the foot which was cut off, lying near the scene of the accident, and took it to the company surgeon.

James Malos occupied the position of foreman of the extra gang for some time and was considered a very intelligent and agreeable man, understanding his business, and speaking English fluently.

Coroner B. I. Clements, of Elmwood, who had been notified, came over and empaneled the following jury: W. H. Miller, John S. Hall, Henry M. Craig, L. C. Herger, Wm. Schmidtman and M. S. Briggs, and they then went to the scene of the accident and heard the testimony of the witnesses—the dead man's comrades, who were on the car, together with that of night yardmaster, B. J. Reynolds. The jury returned the following verdict: "We find that James Malos came to his death by being run over by the engine of train No. 74, (a freight) of the Burlington going east, at a point where the siding connects with the main line, south of the Duff Grain Company's elevator, at 11:15 p. m. October 30, 1907. In this we find the Burlington railway nor its employees were in no way to blame."
