

WERE MARRIED AT HIGH NOON

Two of Cass County's Estimable Young People United in the Holy Bonds.

On Wednesday, December 4th, '07, bright and early the many friends of Charles H. Hennings and Miss L. Ethel Barker were on the move to reach the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Barker before 12 (noon) to witness the marriage of these two estimable young people.

The sky was overcast early in the morning and threatened a stormy day, but by 12 o'clock the sun was shining most beautifully. It would be hard to find a more cheerful company anywhere. Everything had worked well. The young people of Cedar Creek were on hand to see how Charley would "stand it." Those who were there know he worked as easily at it as one quite accustomed to the most approved methods and did his part so well the young men inwardly said they intended to do likewise at the first opportunity. Miss Ethel was at her best and was easily the center of attraction. The broad beautiful gold ring was placed on the finger by the groom. At the organ, Miss Lee, a noted music teacher, presided. After the magic words were spoken by Rev. Jas. K. Maxfield of the Louisville M. E. church, making the two one, congratulations were in order and they were of the most hearty character. Then all were invited to the dining-room, where the table groaned beneath its great burden. Such a dinner. My, and such good-natured "folk" taking care of it. There was more than enough for all. Miss Eunice Barker, sister of the bride, and Mr. Nicholas Schaffer attended the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Barker gave additional proof of their love of home, relatives and all their neighbors. Their friends were so much more numerous than their rooms that they could not include others in their invitations. Their hearts are large.

Mr. and Mrs. Hennings will be "at home" in Louisville after March 1st and will be pleased to entertain all their friends.

The following guests were present: A. C. Carey, Mrs. L. A. Carey, S. A. Barker, Mrs. Etta Barker, Mrs. Wm. Wetenkaup, W. H. Barker, Mrs. Belle Barker, Mrs. Vena Lee, J. J. Meisinger, Mrs. Maggie J. Meisinger, Wm. C. Hennings, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Hennings, G. G. Meisinger, Mrs. Alice Meisinger, Rev. James K. Maxfield, Mrs. Gertrude P. Maxfield, G. E. Barker, John E. Hennings, Louis F. Hennings, Geo. L. Hennings, Miss Marion Tritsch, Mike Tritsch, Mrs. Emma M. Tritsch, Miss Myrtle Hennings, Nicholas Schaffer, Miss Eunice Barker, C. C. Hennings, Mrs. Mary Hennings, J. A. Hennings, Mrs. Maggie Hennings, S. L. Barker, Mrs. E. E. Barker, L. B. Barker, S. Walton Barker, Kenneth Barker, Vernon Barker, Keith Barker, Miss Wilma Barker, Mrs. Emma Shaw, Archie Hennings, Herbert Meisinger, H. J. Spence.—Louisville Courier.

Changes Course of Creek.

After a long time and much money spent in grading, the four mile creek was turned into its new channel, thereby reclaiming about 130 acres of the best farming land in Cass county. This grading has been done on the old Miller farm, now owned by Falter & Coates, and has here-to-fore been worthless. The water flowed through the new channel for about five hours, during which time, it cut ten extra inches deeper in the bed of it. At the end of that time the dam which has been constructed to carry the water from the old course showed a small leak and the water was turned to the old course, until the dam could be repaired and reinforced, which was accomplished and again at nine o'clock Monday morning the water was again turned into the new channel, the short time which the water ran in the new course Saturday proved that the proposition was going to be a success.

Checks Don't Go in New York — Yet.

Julius Pepperberg, the man that made Plattsmouth famous as the home of the "Buds," was in Nehawka Monday calling on his friends. We never feel just right unless he calls on us for a little visit. He came to see us and was not worried to any great extent on the currency question, but has been a little inconvenienced by the stringency of currency in New York. The other day he sent his check for $300 to his tobacco brokers to pay the duty on a bale of the imported Sumatra tobacco that he uses for wrappers, and his check was returned with the request that he send gold or currency by express, the cost of which would be $2.15. He thought this a little steep, so he purchased four money orders which will get the money in New York for even $1.00. The letter which he received reported that currency was a premium, but that they expected the situation to clear shortly.—Nebraska Register.

Repairing Oreapolis Elevator.

Mel Armstrong and J. A. Murray, who have been working for the Duff Grain company on the elevator at Louisville, came in last evening and this morning went to Oreapolis, where they expect to put that elevator in good shape. The working of the rats have thrown up dirt, which had interfered with the proper working of the machinery and they are putting it in good shape.

PLATTSMOUTH BOY IN FOREIGN LAND

An Interesting Letter from C. H. Bailey to His Friend, Herman Holschuh

Junin, Argentina, S. A. October 23d, 1907.

Herman Holschuh, Plattsmouth, Nebraska.

DEAR FRIEND: You will have to pardon me for not writing you sooner, as I have been very busy both at work and sight-seeing. Everything has been in a mix-up for me, that is, everything is something new, and the only time that I feel at home is when I am at a machine, for they are the only familiar things I have run up against since leaving Chicago.

Most everything I have enjoyed for it has been interesting. My trip across the ocean to England and from Southampton south to Buenos Aires was fine; the weather was good; we tossed about but very little and I was not sea-sick in the least.

It is impossible for me to write in a letter all I have seen and how it appeared to me, so I will have to cut it short, and wait until I come to Nebraska in the spring.

We stopped at Lisbon, in Portugal; the town of St. Vincent, on the Cape Verde islands, and several towns on the Brazilian coast.

Southampton and Lisbon are old-fashioned towns, compared to our American cities. St. Vincent is the crudest town I have seen. The people are the color of our Indians, and the children go naked. All go barefooted, and none have any more clothes on than they really have to.

But of all the cities I have ever seen Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, puts them all in the shade and makes other cities look like 30 cents when it comes to beautiful buildings. They are not as high as ones in America, not over four stories (some new ones are building higher) but for designed fronts and different colors you bet they are there with the goods. I saw one business building the front of which appeared to be covered with gold leaf.

And the principal streets are just fine. The Avenida Central (Central Avenue) is actually the finest street I was ever on. The center of the street is of asphaltum and the sidewalks are laid of small black and white stones about two and three inches square on the face and laid in such a manner that the walk appears to be wavy. Also, here is where you can see the palms and bamboo to a frazzle, the palms 80 to 100 feet high, the bamboo thick as the hair on a dog. I visited the Botanical Gardens, but had not time enough to see very much of it, though what I did see I enjoyed very much.

We also stopped at Montevideo in Uruguay, but I did not go ashore, for it costs at least $5.00 every time you touch land; my money was running low and for that reason I did not care to see anything more until we reached Buenos Aires.

Buenos Aires is an up-to-date city of 1,100,000 people, with a great many Germans and English. Spanish is the predominant language and of course most of them speak the broken English. I was in Buenos Aires from Sunday, October 6, until the following Thursday night and have been here since, and expect to be here about ten days longer.

The name of this town is spelled Junin, but is pronounced "Hoo-neen," so you can see what I am up against by the time I learn to talk to these people, which I am doing slowly. This city has about 30,000 inhabitants, but I guessed it at 5,000. The buildings are mostly of one story, of brick, cemented on the outside. These people are up-to-date when it comes to business.

The English and Germans have the import trade, practically speaking, with the exception of harvesting machines. The soil here is black and very rich, and as level as a floor as far as I can see. From Buenos Aires to this place is 180 miles and is the same I am told. (I came from Bony in the night). The land here is worth about $70 an acre. Land can be bought of the government in large areas in the western parts very cheap. Will find out all I can and will let you know later on. I no doubt will go to the southern and western parts before the season is over.

Remember me kindly to Fred and Ed. Eigenberger, also Louis Eigenberger, Coon Vallery, Frank Benfer and to all my Plattsmouth friends. With best wishes for your mother, I am
Your friend,
C. H. BAILEY.

MISS AILEEN OLIVE DEAD

Passes Away at St. Joseph Hospital Yesterday.

A few days since, Miss Aileen Olive, daughter of George Olive and wife of Weeping Water, came to Plattsmouth to spend Thanksgiving with relatives, John M. Leyda and family. While here she had an attack of appendicitis and peritonitis, which became very severe, and after consultation with physicians here and their family physician, Dr. Fate, at Weeping Water, who came here, it developed that nothing could be done for her relief, other than an operation. She was taken to St. Joseph hospital in Omaha where an operation was performed, from which she never fully recovered, growing continually worse, until she passed away at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The funeral of the young lady will be held at Weeping Water tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon. The Journal extends sympathy Mr. and Mrs. Olive in this their hour of deep affliction.

YOUNG MAN PASSES AWAY

Gust. F. Rhode, for Many Years Connected With the Evening News, Is Dead.

While it was felt by many of the friends of Gust. Rhode that his condition was such that would not admit of a hope during the last few weeks that he might recover, no one expected that he would be called to answer the dread summons so soon. Yesterday morning, as the end neared, his condition showed less strength, and at the last closed his eyes as though in a gentle sleep and his spirit sped away to its Maker. Of the immediate family, are his wife and three little girls, the eldest of which is only about seven years of age. His aged mother survives him, a sister living in Galesburg, Ill., Mrs. George Redick; three brothers, one at this place, Goddard; one at Lincoln, working for the State Journal, Adolph; and Charles living in Kansas City. The deceased had been working for the Evening News about ten years, the first two he spent at the case, then for a number of years he was reporter, and during the latter part of the summer was both reporter and editor, since the appointment of Mr. Farley as county superintendent, and until Mr. Rhode got so he could not work longer, having entire management of the paper. He was the clerk of the Woodmen of the World, and carried a policy of insurance of $3,500 therein, and one of a $1,000 in the Loyal Mystic Legion. He was also a member and officer of the fire department.

Death of Geo. S. Carnahan.

Special to The Journal: Elmwood, Neb., December 9th, 1907. George S. Carnahan, of Elmwood, was found dead in his bed at the hotel this morning, with evidences which make it a case of suicide, without a doubt. Mr. Carnahan has made Elmwood his home since 1886, coming there from Pennsylvania, where he has one brother and one sister. The unfortunate man was about 53 years of age, and had been working as a farm hand until some eight or ten years ago, since which time he was employed in the elevator formerly owned by Dick Smith. About two years ago he embarked in business for himself, conducting a billiard hall, in which business he was engaged when he took his life.

Mr. Carnahan has been afflicted with a very severe and most troublesome case of hernia, which has many times made life not seem worth the living. Yesterday he went to see Dr. Munger, and saying, while in conversation, that he would just as soon be dead as suffer as he did. Leaving there he went to the Green pharmacy, where he purchased a bottle of carbolic acid, placing it in his pocket, carrying it there all day.

During the day he was around town, just as ever, for he was always jolly and lively, being in temperament an inspiration to one who was afflicted with the blues. In the evening he went to the home of his late employer, Mr. D. Smith, and spent the time until about 10 o'clock with Mr. Smith and family, to whom he was greatly attached. Parting from them his demeanor was as cheerful as ever it had marked his action during the day. Arriving at the hotel he went to his room, and nothing more was heard from him until this morning, when he did not appear for his breakfast. When his room door was forced open he was dead, with an empty bottle, which had contained carbolic acid, telling the tale of how his life had gone out. From evidences in his bed and room he died without a struggle, for the room was in order and the bed scarcely rumpled up.

Federal Control.

Business having been centralized, centralization of control is necessary also, is the cry of those who demand federal charters for corporations engaging in interstate commerce. The excuse is specious, but the reason absurd. The states can take care of the big corporations very easily if the federal courts will let them.

As a matter of fact, it is the managers of the great corporations who are back of the movement for federal incorporation. They want to shelter their companies and their business under the cloak of a national charter because they believe the power of the individual states has been and will be used to their injury. The pretense that supervision "can only be effectively exercised by a sovereign whose jurisdiction is co-extensive with the field of work of the corporations" is constantly contradicted by the complaint that the power of the states is oppressively exercised.

There is a measure of reason in the objection that the corporation doing business in a number of states is inconvenienced, if not actually harassed, by the varying laws it must meet, but that inconvenience is an essential incident to our form of government through federated states. Undoubtedly our federation has its inconveniences, but today, just as much as in the days when our national constitution was adopted, it is wise to endure the inconveniences of our peculiar form of government in order to perform the benefits which its check upon centralized power affords.

What dangers we should invite if the national government took up the control of all the corporations doing an interstate business may be gathered from the program outlined in President Roosevelt's message to congress. He would have them barred from interstate commerce until a federal license is obtained. He would make an official valuation of the property of the railroads, at least, and possibly of all corporations chartered by the United States. He would have the government prevent their engaging in "unhealthy competition," but would grant permission for "reasonable agreements" restricting competition. And these but begin the catalogue.

President Roosevelt told congress that what he seeks in such a supervision of corporations generally as the national government now exercises over national banks. But the things he would have the government do smack even more of down right despotism than anything the comptroller of the currency may do under the authority given him by the national banking law. The thing Mr. Roosevelt seeks is evidently the larger authority the postal department exercises over the newspapers and periodical publishers licensed to transmit mails at the second-class rate.

Such a law as he urges is to be one under which the executive branch of the government would have just such unchecked power as the courts say the postmaster general possesses. They accord him power to do things within the scope of the discretion accorded by law which not even the supreme court of the United States may review. So President Roosevelt would have it in the supervision and control of all business corporations. "Such a law," he said to congress in his message, "to be really effective, must, of course, be administered by an executive body, and not merely by means of lawsuits."

It is not necessary to picture the tremendous power a law of this kind would give the executive branch of the national government. It is a power that has stirred a storm of complaint against the postal department, but that is merely a zephyr beside the whirlwind that would sweep the country when realization of the authority given the secretary of commerce came to the business interests, if such a law as congress is asked to enact should be granted. It is quite safe to say the recommendation will disappear forever in the committee to which it is referred.

When to Go Home.

From the Bluffton, Ind., Banner: When tired out go home. When you want consolation, go home. When you want fun, go home. When you want to show others that you have reformed go home and let your family get acquainted with the fact. When you want to show yourself at your best go home and do the act there. When you feel like being extra liberal go home and practice on your wife and children first. When you want to shine with extra brilliancy go home and light up the whole household. To which would add when you have a bad cold go home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and a quick cure is certain. For sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

A Peculiar Case.

The case of Mrs. Sarah Lynn, who has been seriously ill the past few months, is certainly peculiar in many ways. At times she appears so near death that it seems she can live only a few hours, then she revives and is able to set up and eat at the table, only to again relapse into a stupor that seems to indicate the near approach of death. The report from there last evening was that she was slightly improved, but those conditions cannot be regarded as any assurance that she will recover, as a worse condition may follow at any moment.—Union Ledger.

CUBAN MINISTER TO THE U. S. Recommends Pe-ru-na.

Senor Quesada, Cuban Minister to the United States.

Senor Quesada, Cuban Minister to the United States, is an orator born. In an article in The Outlook for July, 1899, by George Kennan, who heard Quesada speak at the Esteban Theater, Matanzas, Cuba, he said: "I have seen many audiences under the spell of eloquent speech and in the grip of strong emotional excitement; but I have rarely witnessed such a scene as at the close of Quesada's eulogy upon the dead patriot, Marti." In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, written from Washington, D. C., Senor Quesada says:

"Peruna I can recommend as a very good medicine. It is an excellent strengthening tonic, and it is also an efficacious cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."—Gonzalo De Quesada.

In hot countries as well as cold countries catarrh is an omnipresent scourge. Catarrh afflicts the old and the young, the rich and the poor, the lowly and the famous.

Nearly everybody has catarrh at some time in life. It is the general prevalence of catarrhal diseases that has brought Peruna into such fame throughout the world.

Peruna has been used as a catarrh remedy so long that it is regarded everywhere as a standard remedy for catarrh in all forms.

Mr. Theodore Lang, Dalton, Ga., formerly Commander of the G. A. R. of the State of Maryland, writes:

"It is a special pleasure to me to recommend Peruna to all who may be afflicted with that most annoying and dangerous disease, catarrh. I have taken six bottles of Peruna, and I confidently believe my cure is permanent."

ELEVATOR LAW CHALLENGED

Manley Co-operative Grain Company vs. the M. P. Railway Co. In their brief filed in the supreme court today in support of their appeal from the decision of the district court of Cass county, in the case of the state against the Missouri Pacific railroad, involving the levying of a $500 fine on the company because of its refusal to furnish a place on its right-of-way for the erection of an elevator by the Manley Co-operative Grain company, the attorneys for the railroad deny the right of the court to hear the case and attack the constitutionality of the Ramsey elevator law. After the grain company had been refused a site on the right-of-way for the elevator, the building was erected off of the right-of-way and then application was made for a side track to be constructed to the elevator. This request was denied and the elevator company applied to the state railway commission for an order compelling the railroad to construct the sidetrack and the case is pending before that body.

Wants New Train Service.

Traveling Passenger Agent Hughes of the Missouri Pacific was in the city yesterday, in connection with the proposed new train service over the M. P. line, by which it is hoped that a new train will be put on, giving this city a morning passenger to Omaha.

Agent John Clinkinbeard of the Missouri Pacific has been working for some time with this end in view, and Mr. Hughes came yesterday to look over conditions. The proposed service if successfully carried through will give this city a morning passenger to Omaha, leaving here at about 8:30 a. m., and arriving in Omaha at 10:30. Returning the train would reach this city in the evening about 6:30 o'clock. Mr. Hughes has taken the matter up with the officials of the road in St. Louis, and an early decision is hoped for.—Nebraska City Press.
