Nice Looking Couple Rents Hotel and Then Lights Out Between Two Days

The following item is taken from the Weeping Water Republican and goes to show how unscrupulous strangers take mean advantage of newspaper people as well as other folks:

"Last week the Republican announced that the Gibbon hotel had been changed to read the 'Miller house' and that Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Miller were going to conduct the same, and in fact there was going to be something doing. The Republican kindly furnished stationery because they were such an agreeable, fine-looking couple, and honesty shone on Miller's face as plain as a wart on a man's nose. There were others and a few more that thought so. Sunday night the couple concluded they had all the experience they cared for and took the midnight train south. Miller was agent for Hoese, the piano man, and had one or two pianos at the hotel. They left a cheap suit case for the owner of the hotel, Mr. Frank, who has a board bill against them for about $27.00. The suit case may contain some underwear, but Frank doesn't wear that style. He says we can have the stationery back if it will console us any. R. O. McNurlin says $8.40 would square him for cooking according to the printed menus.

DID HE EVER LIVE HERE?

A Rough House Occurs in Weeping Water, and One of the Party from Plattsmouth.

The Weeping Water Republican of this week says: "Last Saturday night five revolver shots disturbed the peaceful quietude of this city. About two months ago from the town of Louisville, moved a family by the name of Kearns, John is the father's name, and Frank is the name of the son who did the shooting. Frank had been in Omaha Saturday and came home, filled with poor whisky and plenty of it. He used his revolver in the house so freely that his father, after having a bullet singe neck, came down to have Nightwatch Ralston arrest him. There was also a rough and tumble fight in the house for the reason that Guy McGill went over to take a young lady by the name of Goldie Mills, to some entertainment, and Kearns objected. McGill, it is said knocked Kearns down, but when two brothers came to Kearns' assistance, and the butt end of the revolver struck McGill on the nose, breaking it, McGill found he was up against it and returned to the doctor's shop for repairs. Nightwatch Ralston went over early Monday morning to arrest Kearns, but the latter had concluded that his health needed a change of climate and departed. It is said John Kearns, the father, has been a resident of Cass county for many years, and that Plattsmouth was his abiding place. The shooting on the street occurred after the first act of the performance at the house, and McGill and Kearns then returned to the house."

MAKES GOOD IN PRISON

While Serving Time Daniel Kohn Begins Aright a New Life Which Makes for Success in Years to Come

It will be remembered by many readers of this paper that while enjoying the confidence of his friend and employer, H. P. Sturm, living near Nehawka, Daniel Kohn, some few years ago, disappeared one night. At the same time a fine team of horses, the pride of his employer, were also missing. As the records show, the hired man was apprehended and after due course of time was convicted and sentenced to a term in the state penitentiary. Why at that time Kohn should have stepped from the path of virtue to commit such a deed, is not easily shown, but like many another man, he sailed along in fine shape until in a fatal moment, a weakness peculiar to human nature came upon him when the temptation was strongest, and he gave way, only to regret the action for all the years to follow.

Kohn, notwithstanding the fact that the strong arm of the law had reached out and with the firm grip of that edict which says "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," held him, made the determination to begin life over again and at once. He did not think it well to wait until he had gotten his liberty again, but began then, and when the end of his sentence comes he will have the length of his time credited to the new life.

During the two or more years of his imprisonment, Daniel has found a way of earning a little money by doing work outside of working hours. From those earnings he has accumulated some money, and by putting in all he could get together, he finally saved something over one hundred dollars. Since he has been at Lincoln, he has frequently written his former employer soliciting a visit from him. When first receiving the communications Mr. Sturm paid little attention to them, but as one followed another each one more insistent than the other, he concluded he would make Daniel a visit. Last week he went to Lincoln and visited the young man in prison, and was surprised to learn that he has saved from extra work enough to pay one hundred dollars on the amount of the value of the horses taken.

He declared his intention to repay the entire loss sustained by his former employer, and upon the departure of the visitor, presented him with a half dozen whisk brooms for the home on the farm, besides some house brooms.

While serving time for his crime, that this man should make a new start in life, speaks well for him, and shows that the spark of manhood has not become extinct by reason of his having given way to temptation. We hope that in this man's coming out a free man he will be stronger than before, and that he may have the fortitude to resist the temptation should it come again.

THAT BLIND-FOLD DRIVE

Demonstrates His Ability as A Mind Reader.

Owing to a pressure of matter to go we have not had an opportunity to consider the hypnotic drive which the wonder Norwood performed last Monday. At the time the drive was to take place Mr. Norwood was blindfolded and watched by a committee of citizens, while Burlington Agent W. L. Pickett, B. A. McElwain, Dr. E. W. Cook and Mayor H. R. Gering, took the team furnished, and after driving for fourteen blocks, hid a pocket knife which had been furnished, and returned and reported, as ready for Mr. Norwood to find same. With the blindfold still on his eyes he jumped into the carriage, grasping the lines gave the horses a cut with the whip and was away. Following the same route as had been traversed before, they fairly flew over the inequality of the grading where A. F. Lampher was thrown from his wagon only a few moments afterwards, severely injuring himself, in perfect safety. While going west on Vine street, near the residence of David Hawksworth, they encountered a drove of cattle, Mr. Norwood reading the minds of the people in the carriage, deftly avoided them by veering to the right. Arriving at the place where the knife was hid, he goes immediately to the place but required two efforts to get it as it was in a crevice in a rock.

OPERATED UPON A SECOND TIME

Johnnie Halmes Compelled To Undergo a Second Operation for Relief

Peter Halmes returned last evening from Lincoln where he has been visiting his son, Johnnie, who is in the hospital at that place. Johnnie had tuberculosis of the bones of his legs, and it became necessary to perform an operation removing a portion of the bones in order to effect a cure. The first operation did not prove sufficient, and another one had to be made. This was done a few days since. The young man is getting along as well as could be expected but the second operation is a severe trial and it prolongs the stay which had to be made in the hospital, which is far from pleasant in the beginning. It is hoped that since the second operation, Johnnie may have a speedy recovery.
