EDWARD MURPHY IS FOUND AT VALLEY

Manley Farmer Said to Have Been Suffering From Temporary Mental Aberration--- Fall May Have Affected Mind.

The Omaha World-Herald of this (Wednesday) morning, contains the following: Edward W. Murphy, the young farmer from near Manley, who disappeared in Omaha a week ago, has been found and restored to his family.

It is a declared case of aberration of mind.

Young Murphy came to himself early Monday evening at Valley. He walked into a hotel there to stay all night, and it so chanced that at that very time some people there were looking at the picture of the missing man in the World-Herald. Murphy asked to look at the paper, saw his own likeness and the notice of a reward offered for information concerning him.

He said nothing. It was too late to get a train away from the town. Mr. Murphy went to his room and went to sleep. Before entering the hotel he had asked a man on the street what town it was.

Early Tuesday morning he took the train, got off at South Omaha and telephoned his wife.

His father-in-law, James Carper, had taken a train from Manley to join Murphy's father, James Murphy, who was already in Omaha, to continue their search. The wife sent a message to Carper, which he received en route, and he met young Murphy at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles Wander, in Omaha.

The father and son and father-in-law returned to Manley last evening.

Young Murphy can give no account of where he has been or what he has done in the past week, saying his mind has been a perfect blank, and he has not the slightest recollection of his wonderings. He kept all of his money, however, and his clothes were not soiled, from which it is inferred that he was at no time shelterless.

Three years ago Murphy had a fall and was seriously injured. Some of his friends thought that on occasions subsequently he talked strangely. To this they attribute the recent total failure of his mind. Once he had come to himself, he appeared to be perfectly rational.

INJURED WHILE COASTING

Little Elmer Buttery Suffers A Hard Shaking Up by a Collision While Coasting

Yesterday afternoon little Elmer Buttery, son of Martin Buttery, was going out with his bob-sled to try the exhilirating pastime of coasting which is being taken advantage of by a large number of the younger population. He had just gotten outside of the yard at his home, where the young people of the neighborhood were sliding, when along came a boy on a sled, going down the hill "lick-a-ty-larrup."

The little fellow on the sled did not get his toes stuck into the snow just right, and his sled became unmanageable in his hands, and like a wild and fraction horse plunged out of the beaten track, striking Elmer on the legs, upsetting him, his sled and the boy who was sliding, all in a bunch. The little boy who was riding was rendered unconscious and it was thought for awhile that one of Elmer's legs was broken. Upon examination it was found the member was not broken, but was very badly bruised. The other boy came around in a short time, but with a very badly bruised nose and face which had come in contact with the Buttery boy's sled at the instant of the collision. Under the circumstances it was fortunate that no more serious damage was done to either party.

VETERINARY LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL

So Declares Judge Travis in a Decision Handed Down Today

In a decision handed down today by Judge H. D. Travis, the law passed by the legislature of a few years since, wherein it was required that an examination be passed and a license be taken out in order that one could advertise as a veterinary surgeon. The Nebraska Veterinary Medical association, through their attorneys, M. D. Carey and J. J. Thomas, brought suit to prevent A. P. Barnes, the president of the Nebraska State Veterinary association, advertising as a veterinary, or anyone else who had not passed an examination before the board appointed by the state, and having obtained a permit. This case was tried before Judge Travis in chambers about ten days since, and today he handed down his decision, giving his opinion that the law is unconstitutional and void. The case will be appealed to the supreme court, where the final passage will be had at as early a moment as possible, that the law may be settled beyond and doubt.

GETS HIS HAND BADLY MASHED

While Loading Old Iron Chas. Edmonds Has His Hand Badly Injured

Chas. Edmonds of Glenwood, a cousin of Oliver Edmonds of this place, while working at the Burlington station here yesterday, loading old iron, which a Glenwood, Iowa, man was shipping from this point, had his right hand badly mashed. In the loading, Mr. Edmonds was arranging a piece of iron in position when his fellow workman, Chas. Regger, thinking that Mr. Edmonds had finished, threw a sewing machine head into the car, just as he reached back to the unruly piece of iron. The flying sewing machine head struck his hand, catching it between the two pieces and mashing it badly.

The three fingers of the right hand suffered the worst injury, the second finger being mashed flat, while the other two were not quite so bad. After having the injury dressed, Mr. Edmonds departed for his home in Glenwood.

He Wants $,1000 Damage.

Some time since a cow got into the field of Theobold Rhin, and he, in endeavoring to drive it out, was treated to a storm of abuse from a little boy, said to belong to George Wittstruck. Mr. Rhin went to see the boy's father about the matter, and after he had stated the case, it is claimed Wittstruck kicked Rhin off his place. For this Mr. Rhin filed a complaint, which lingered some time in court, and was finally withdrawn. Now comes Wittstruck, through his attorney, and brings suit in the district court against Mr. Rhin for $1,000 damages for malicious prosecution. The papers were served today, and the trial promises to divulge some very interesting testimony.
