HE COULD NOT STAND THE SHOCK

Was More Than His Refined and Sensitive Nature Would Stand, So He Left the Show.

A bunch of people came from Elmwood to attend the stockholders meeting of the Plattsmouth Telephone company Monday, after having attended to the business of the meeting, and had their supper at the Riley Hotel, the question of what should be done with the time which intervened until the train should come to take them home which was due at midnight, confronted them. The "Land of Nod" people fairly swarmed the hotel lobby, and with the many winsome faces and willowy forms, they sure were a catching crowd, and to stop at the same hostelry with four or five hours to put in and nothing to do, and not attend the show when the telephone stock had paid full ten per cent, looked and seemed a shame. So the Elmwood crowd all concluded to attend. All went, and getting seats together, were chatting along congratulating themselves upon the pleasantness of dame fortune, when up popped the curtain, and appearing from every portion of the stage was a young lady, dressed, briefly, as regards to the length of the skirts they wore. Archie, from Elmwood looked and a crimson wave overspread his face, and hot waves chased each other over his now florid countenance and he thought of his wife at home if she should know he was in such a place, his eyes fell to the floor, only to raise again, but to rest upon the awfully dressed girls, but for an instant, and to drop again he turned uneasily in his seat, and looking around to see if he was observed. No one noticed, they were too busy, all had their eyes glued on the stage, so our hero stole silently away, and as he passed out of the door, took one last look and returned to the hotel. He thought he would await the crowd, but the time grew long and he went to bed and was soon in the land of slumbers, forgetting chorus girls with short frocks, and knew nothing more until the next morning, where he was regaled by his companions for leaving the show, for they did finally miss him. He says that they were too much for him. The crowd departed for home the next morning on the ten o'clock train, still joshing their friend.

Vincent has been there for a number of years and is well pleased with the locality. He has his ranch well stocked and produces an abundance of all kinds of crops, except corn. The weather in the Big Horn Basin is much milder than in the same latitude elsewhere. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Roetter and their son, will be pleased to know of his prosperity.

HOWARD SPRAGUE LAID AT REST

Died Last Sunday at the Advanced age of 93, Funeral Held at Methodist Church

C. H. Vallery and wife returned this morning from Greenwood, where they were in attendance at the funeral of the latter's father, Howard Sprague, who died last Sunday at the advanced age of 93. The funeral services were held from the Methodist church and conducted by the Methodist minister of that place. Mr. Sprague was making his home with his daughter, Mrs. John Hall, of that place, his wife having preceded him to the other world some years since. Mr. Sprague leaves three daughters—one living in Washington, Sarah—she having married there, and Mrs. Hall with whom he made his home lately, and Mrs. C. A. Vallery of this place. From his home in Iowa, Mr. Sprague made a trip across the plains and mountains to California with pack mule train, and another later in 1861, at which time he crossed the river at this place, locating in Montana, where he lived for a number of years, later coming to live at Greenwood. The deceased leaves three sons—Howard, Frank and William—all of whom live in the state of Washington.

"The Bucks of the Timber."

Mr. Editor:—I wish to call your attention to the good quality of the new lodge, "The Bucks of the Timber." Mark White, one of the members, has been batching for some time on account of the sickness of his mother-in-law, and has not been able to take proper care of the goat belonging to the lodge. Mr. George Smith, the "King Snipe," was seen going in the direction of Mr. White's lately, and it is expected that Mark will advertise for a housekeeper at once.

Mr. White is having all kinds of trouble, while he is looking after the water tank, the tea kettle freezes up, and when he is looking after the tea kettle, the water tank freezes up. There is not any dishwasher for the cats, so he gives them the milk; the dog eats corn with the hogs and Mr. White grabs anything he can find and eats on the run.

George Smith and family called on Fred Patterson and family to see why they are not looking after members in distress, and found they had been having their share of sickness. Louis Kohrell, another member in good standing, has been quite sick and the "King Snipe" is looking after him also.

Johnnie Hatt, of Plattsmouth, says that when the scab comes off of his nose, he wants to join the lodge, he is quite sure he can ride the goat after the experience he has had.

SUPERINTENENT POLLOCK RESIGNS

Position Given to F. C. Weber, Former Superintendent of the Nebraska Light Company, and Former Resident of Omaha.

For a long time it has been evident to T. H. Pollock that he had more work in the management of the Plattsmouth Telephone company than he could do well and look after business which was connected with the Plattsmouth Water company, and at the meetings of the other officers of the telephone company it has been thought advisable that he should be relieved of the position of superintendent of the water company.

Repeatedly has Mr. Pollock suggested to the home office of the company in Boston, the advisability of placing some one else in the position thus allowing him a better opportunity to look after the ever increasing business of the telephone company. The home office of the water company was very reluctant to give up the services of Mr. Pollock as their superintendent and were therefore very slow in securing a man for the place. Although Mr. Pollock has handed in his resignation many weeks ago, the water company has sought to retain him, well knowing the value of his services.

When it finally became apparent to the office at Boston that Mr. Pollock could not be retained, they had their Mr. Bond, who was making a trip through this country and made a visit at this place and on the suggestion of Mr. Pollock and Mr. C. C. Parmele offered the position to C. F. Weber, formerly of the Nebraska Lighting company.

This change will enable Mr. Pollock to get after many details of the business of the telephone company which the attention which he has been compelled to devote to the water company as its superintendent has prevented. The other officers of the water company will be changed from the telephone building to the basement of the Cass County bank, where the offices of the Nebraska Lighting company are now located and will be conducted jointly with that of the Nebraska Lighting company by Mr. Weber. The work shop will be changed as soon as a suitable room can be secured, from the basement of the telephone building, as the room is badly needed by the telephone people for a place to do their work, which is ever increasing as their lines are extending and the number of offices and subscribers becoming greater.

The telephone company is a very forceful demonstration of good management of the business of the company, coupled with the interest that the stockholders and patrons of the system have in its success by reason of the company being a home institution. The water company seems by placing a stranger at its head in the city, and having no one in its welfare other than to make its collections, would be going exactly the opposite direction.

Was Looking for Escaped Prisoners

C. E. Dalton of Glenwood, deputy sheriff of Mills county, Iowa, was a visitor in the city last evening, looking for some escaped prisoners, who broke jail there a few nights since, and who might be here he thought. He found nothing after being here for a short time which would justify him in the belief, and departed for home on the late Burlington train.

BRYAN ON RAILROADS AND STATE

The Federal Government Should Prevent Discrimination Between Places in Different States and Different Persons.

William Jennings Bryan in the February Reader, a monthly publication, says: The railroad question as it now presents itself involves more stringent regulation by both the state and the nation. It is possible and necessary for the state and the nation, each in its own sphere, to extend their control over the railway lines. The state should regulate local rates and local operation; it should prevent discrimination between places within the state and between its own citizens. It should require that the local rates be not only equal between citizens, but equitable to all. The Federal Government, without interfering with the authority of the state, should add a national remedy to the state remedy—not substitute a national remedy for a state remedy. The Federal Government should prevent discrimination between places in different states and persons in different states, and should compel the equal and equitable treatment of all persons interested in interstate shipments. There need be no conflict between the state and the nation in the arrangement; it is no more necessary that Federal regulation should exclude state regulation than it is that state should exclude Federal regulation. Two reforms are imperatively needed at this time. First, the present value of the railroads should be ascertained, and this value ought to be measured, as the value of all other property is measured, viz, by the cost of reproduction. Second, the issue of watered stock and fictitious capitalization should be prevented. These reforms should be undertaken by the Federal Government and by various states. A third reform follows as a matter of course—the reduction of rates, state and interstate, until the railroads yield an income sufficient to insure a reasonable return on the value of the roads, and no more.

When these reforms are secured, passes abolished (where they have not already been), the railroad lobbyists driven from the state and federal capitols, and the Federal courts properly restricted, the prejudice of which railroad managers complain will disappear, and there will be harmony between the railways and the public.
