

CONTESTS FOR CONGRESSMEN

Pitched Battles Will be Fought in Five of the Six Nebraska Districts, and Already There are Several Candidates in the First District.

The Lincoln Star, in speaking of the contests in several congressional districts this year says:

Five pitched battles will be fought for Congressional nominations in five of the six Nebraska districts. The contests will take place at the Republican primary next September. Congressman Kinkaid, so far, has no opposition. All the other Congressmen must fight and fight hard.

In the First district George E. Tobey and "Ned" Brown will be rival candidates against Congressman Pollard. Judge Jensen may also get into the game. This fight will be animated and extremely interesting before the trouble dies out.

They are After Hitchcock.

Republicans in the Second district want to disposses Congressman Hitchcock, a Democrat. The excitement among the Republican factions will be intense with the winner in doubt.

In the Third district the "progressive" have taken the bit in their teeth and bolted. Congressman Boyd belongs to the anti-McCarthy faction. He has been identified closely with a number of the politicians. The "progressives" have demanded that State Senator Wiltse, of Cedar county, enter the contest. He is the author of the clause in the anti-pass law under which the surgeons and lawyers are being prosecuted for holding passes. Union labor leaders have bolted Boyd on account of the Hammond controversy, it is claimed, and they are all behind Wiltse.

Hinshaw in a Fight.

In the Fourth district the contest has already attracted state-wide attention. State Senator C. H. Aldrich has announced his candidacy and has started an energetic canvass. Aldrich led the progressive forces in the Senate at the last session of the legislature and was regarded as the most radical member of that body.

Laboring men, it is claimed, are deserting Hinshaw in large numbers. A circular is being prepared, it is said. The Hammond controversy looms up again and will be an important factor in the fight.

Congressman Norris has a similar fight. At McCook and Hastings and many other towns there are vigorous opponents. He delivered a speech in the House several weeks ago, ridiculing a bill which was designed to prevent lawyer-legislators from receiving fees from corporations during their term in office. His remarks have been compiled and thousands of pamphlets circulated in the Fifth district. E. B. Perry, of Cambridge, and a number of others probably will enter the race. In the Sixth district Congressman Kinkaid is without opposition so far.

AMAZING BLOODLESS CURDS.

As great as were the recent cures in Europe they are greater in America today. The cure of Rupture and other diseases without the knife is now an accomplished fact as can be proven by The German Specialists, of Council Bluffs, Ia.

With special instructions used by no other doctor they can diagnose diseases so accurately that patients are astonished, especially because they do not ask a single question in finding the cause of diseases.

The validity of their claims can be tested by all who write for appointment card. Their ad stating time to cure various diseases appears elsewhere in his paper.

"IDEAL" NEBRASKA SCHOOL TEACHER

Not Poor Pay for the Best Teachers, But Good Pay for Good Teachers and the Best Pay for the Best Teachers

It has been well said that the schools of Nebraska will never be better than the teachers make them. This is the argument that justifies the normal school to train teachers and to give them the "high ideals" demanded for the future.

It is also well to demand sufficient salaries for teachers all over the state. The demand should be renewed from time to time until the rule is not poor pay for the best teachers, but good pay for the best.

Still it is simple justice to recognize that we have already, among teachers who are poorly paid, ideals as high as will ever exist in or out of Nebraska. They exist and operate regardless of salary. They are not to be bought with money. They appear in the lives and the work of men and women to whom teaching is a mission and not a mere means of livelihood. Often they rise superior to the worst disadvantages in giving the best results.

It is so in the present, and if it had not been so in the past we would not know now the value of "ideals" in working out the greatness of a people. From the time of the first log school-houses in the wilderness it was so. The American of the type they educated came from them with an ideal he realized by work for the country as well as for himself which appears now in a hundred lines of increasing greatness for Nebraska and for every state in the Union.

Such types as products of American education are not out of date and they are never likely to become so. Many of the Americans who did the best work of the Nineteenth Century began their own usefulness as school teachers. In fact, the biography of nearly every American of that century who became greatly prominent in any line of service to the public is apt to explain that he fitted himself for his work by beginning it as a teacher. This is especially true in Nebraska history, in the history of other states of the west and south. But always the American ideal of education worked out through typical Americans into results without which the results of the present and future would be impossible.

We will not lose the ideal teacher or the American type in the future because of low salaries or high salaries. We can buy everything perhaps except self-sacrificing disinterestedness. The teacher who has this ideal when it appears through results of the teacher's own higher intelligence, given, not sold, to the entire community.

There has not yet been in history a state or a community in which those who supply the best "food" the mind can demand were paid on the basis of value for value. That basis applies to breadstuffs and provisions, but teachers who are really ideal know that they can never expect adequate payment, for the benefits beyond price their work makes possible for the future they create out of the present.

which could be suggested to appease the hunger or suggest a delicate appetite. The occasion, was one of good fellowship, and enjoyed by the four score or people present.

MASONS' BANQUET LAST EVENING

Raised W. C. Ramsey and Then With Many Speeches Partook of the Good Things to Eat.

Last evening at the meeting of the Masonic order in the city W. C. Ramsey was raised to third degree, and after the fun in that direction had been concluded, something of a different nature was found on the program. A number of addresses were made. One by A. L. Tidd, "The Mason as a Citizen," in which he showed that the obligations which one had to take and live up to be a Mason in spirit and in truth, one has to be a better citizen than would otherwise be required; therefore, the living, according to the teachings of the Masonic fraternity, is in accordance with good citizenship.

Rev. Salsbury, followed with an address "The Mason and Christianity," showing that the teachings of both are along the same lines, that both require the belief in a Supreme Being, and the observance of good and wholesome laws, the practice of which is bound to elevate human character, and bring one nearer to his Creator, the author of his being, and as such, more fraternal to his fellowman. To be a good Mason, one would necessarily be a better christian, while, were he a member of the lodge, to be a christian would make him a better Mason.

J. C. Petersen followed, with "The Lodge as a Fraternity," in which he had to say, that in the keeping of the people together so that the interest of one was the interest of all, as taught in the order, and as we came from the hand of a common parent, the Maker of the Universe we are the children of one Father, and are therefore brothers, and are bound by the relationship we sustain to the one from whom we receive every good and perfect thing, to cherish as brothers our fellowman. A. E. Gass, with his "Sunshine of Masonry" showed the cheerful side of Masonry, as the man with the assurance which the teachings of the order set forth must see the good resulting in the future for the efforts toward the right, and as inevitable as the day follows the night, know that the future has good in store, for every one, and that it is his; just in proportion as he shall make an effort to obtain it. That Masonry, like the Sun, shines forth in the darkest places, making them light on every Mason's face, and in their actions one should see good cheer hope and encouragement. Bro. Ringo, of the Masonic Home, addressed the meeting, on the good of the order and make a number of very beautiful applications of the subject in hand. The tables around which this fraternal order sat, meanwhile were loaded with everything

Will Have Eye Operated Upon

Mrs. James Chalfant was a passenger to Omaha this afternoon where she will have an operation performed upon eye, hoping that the same will become entirely cured. The trouble is from an injury received some years since, causing a growth with a tendency to absorb the tissues of the globe of the eye and is called sarcoma. Mrs. Chalfant will have to undergo an operation for its removal. She has been receiving treatment for some time by use of a X Ray, but with no effect, and the operation is the last resort.

Boy Who Fell Into the Well.

Walter McNeilly, who fell into the well while hunting rabbits, now remembers some of the occurrences relative to the matter. He says he had killed two rabbits and had run another one into a brush pile. Laying his gun down he jumped on the brush in an effort to scare the rabbit out, when he went on through into the well, carrying a portion of the brush with him. He knew nothing for some time, and when removed by the rescuers, three rabbits were found, where he had only killed two, supposedly the third one having run into the brush pile and was killed when it fell into the well, or by Walter falling upon it.

Will Martin, the former night operator at the Burlington station, who went to Waverly, from a scratch on his hand, which became infected, was compelled to lay off since a week ago, and is in the city stopping at the Hotel Riley, receiving treatment from W. P. Renshaw. His hand is about well, and he will be able to report for work again soon.

THIRTY-FIVE AND MUCH SURPRISED

Had He Have Read The Journal Through He Would Have Known They Were Coming

Unthoughtedly, last evening, J. W. Bookmeyer stayed at home in the evening, and as he had received a few callers the night before he was not looking for any last evening. Thinking to take a bath before retiring, he had made preparations for same and was just entering the bathroom for that purpose, when in stepped J. J. Svoboda, jr., and James Skoumal, jr., with no suspicion of an announcement, and for a certainly, once surprised the councilman. The evening was devoted to music and games, of which the festive "high five" held sway, with refreshments, brought by the guests made the occasion one very enjoyable. A number of nice presents were left, as tokens of the respects and friendship for the alderman who had attended to the age of thirty-five. Those who perpetrated this enjoyable evening on an unsuspecting and innocent fellow-citizen were: Messrs. Adams and Mesdames Mat Joy, J. J. Svoboda, Chas. Vitacek, James Skoumal, Frank Janda, jr., George Owens, Joseph Hiber, Frank Slavecek, Jos. Jiran, Mrs. Bookmeyer and Mrs. Henry Donat.

Injured Finger Mending

A. A. Wettencamp was in the city last evening and reports his hand as in a much better condition, the effected tendency having been entirely overcome. The trouble arose over a slight scratch received while butchering. But a short time after the finger became very sore, and had to be lanced, in order to obtain relief. The case of Mr. Mason, which had come from the like caused, added to the concern of Mr. Wettencamp. At the present time injured member is progressing nicely and promises to soon be entirely well again.
