

GREAT CONVENTION AT DENVER

Excitement Promised Delegates---Headquarters for Notables to be in Attendance Already Being in Great Demand

A special from Denver, under date of March 19 says: The city promises to be the scene of highly exciting times when the democratic national convention meets here July 7th. Headquarters are being secured for candidates for the nomination of president and vice president daily and it appears there will be a large number of aspirants for the official plans of the democratic party.

Bryan Speaks

W. J. Bryan is to be in Denver, April 6th to deliver an address. Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota is expected at a later date. Judge Geo. Gray of Wilmington, Delaware, has already secured headquarters here, from which to make a campaign for nomination for president. Sylvester Chanler, lieutenant governor of New York is expected to open headquarters here also within a short time and begin a campaign for the presidential nomination, backed by the voters of the delegation from the Empire state.

Attracts Attention

The nomination for vice president seems to be one that attracts more than ordinary attention. It is doubtful if there will be a single uninstructed state delegation at the convention pledged on the choice of vice president and the selection of a man for that position on the ticket will be thoroughly spirited. A score of aspirants for the place have already visited Denver either in person or by representative and will open headquarters here during the convention.

New Building

The new auditorium in which the convention is to meet has never been used for convention purposes before. The meeting of the democratic convention will be the first gathering ever held within its walls as it has just recently been completed. It seats 12,500, cost $550,000, is cool and airy, and is an ideal place for a convention. Denver has a large hotel district and the convention hall is situated in the midst of it. A few minutes' walk from any hotel in the city is all that is necessary to reach the convention hall and this circumstance alone is regarded as an immense advantage for the comfort of the delegates.

Hotel and restaurant keepers here have pledged themselves in writing to the national democratic committee not to raise hotel rates and the price of meals and lodging will be the same during the convention as when there is no crowd in the city.

Many Notables

It is expected that a large gathering of notable politicians of the democratic persuasion will come to Denver during the convention. Already elaborate suites of rooms in the leading hotels have been reserved for men who are well known leaders of the party. It is expected that nearly all the candidates for president and vice president will make preliminary trips to Denver and deliver addresses here while looking over the ground with a view to outlining their votes in the convention.

OF GREAT INTEREST TO THE CATHOLICS

Father Bradley of St. John's Church Explains the New Law Regarding Marriages in that Church, Effective on and After Easter Sunday

PLATTSMOUTH, NEB., 3-19-'08.

EDITOR JOURNAL:

Your account in last evening's issue of the new legislation regarding marriage in the Catholic church is in main correct, but in two or three important points is liable to give rise to misconceptions.

1st. The pre-nuptial engagement, whether oral or written, is not made more obligatory than heretofore, but it is provided to insure the better against hasty and ill-considered action—that no engagement or promise of marriage shall be recognized as having legal binding force, except it be in writing and duly witnessed. This provision would only be of importance in case of difficulty arising through one party refusing to fulfill his or her part. Verbal engagements have, of course, the same force in conscience as they ever had.

2d. The general law of the church forbidding the marriage of Catholics with non-Catholics remains absolutely unchanged. Dispensations from the general law may be obtained as before, where reasons good and sufficient in the eyes of competent authority, are shown to exist. But, whereas, heretofore such a marriage, when entered into before a civil magistrate or a non-Catholic minister was recognized by the church as valid and binding, although regarded as an unlawful and sinful (because rebellious) act, on and after next Easter Sunday (April 19th) when the new regulations go into effect, it will not only be unlawful, but in the eyes of the church void and of no effect, in a word, no marriage at all.

3d. It is to be observed that this ruling applies only in the case where one or both of the parties to marriage is a Catholic. It is, therefore, incorrect to say that "the church will recognize only marriages performed by a priest." As she has always done, she will continue to recognize, as valid and binding, marriages, in whatever way ratified and contracted, by baptized Christians outside of her pale. This may, at first sight, appear superfluous, but upon reflection one will recognize that it becomes important in certain contingencies, is case for instance that husband or wife or both at any time subsequent to marriage wish to enter the Catholic church and there has been an attempted divorce.

To put the whole matter of this new legislation in a nutshell—on and after Easter Sunday next, the only valid and real marriage where a Catholic is concerned as one of the contracting parties will be such as is contracted before the priest in charge of souls or otherwise lawfully deputed for the purpose in the place where the marriage is celebrated.

It may be of some general interest to mention that the recent enactment of Pius X is in reality not new legislation. It is merely an extension to the whole Catholic world of the provisions of the decree "Tametsi" (so called from the word with which it begins) of the famous council of Trent (A. D. 1542-1563) invalidating clandestine marriages, i. e. marriages not entered into in the presence of the proper witnesses and in compliance with ecclesiastical regulations. For various reasons this decree was in abeyance in some countries, until now by the Pope's recent actions it is made applicable in every part of the world.

The prominence given to this matter by your front-page article of yesterday evening will, I trust, be deemed ample excuse for my troubling you and your readers with this communication.

Yours respectfully,
W. F. BRADLEY,
Rector St. John's Catholic church.

This morning in Justice Archer's court the parties arrested yesterday morning, (Bert Ellige and Sam Golden) for the appropriation of the garments of A. J. McFarland and Wm. Likewise Tuesday evening, and who were caught with the garments in their possession, and the surroundings of such a character that to deny the charge would be worse than foolish, they when arraigned, pleaded guilty to the charge of petty larceny, and received the maximum fine for this offense, which is thirty days in the county jail. They were immediately taken back to the bastille where they began serving their sentence. While one man's name was Golden, he could not have rightly be said to have been observing the Golden Rule when he grabbed his neighbor's coat and took away his cleak, also.

MRS. FRANCES LUKAGEK DEAD

Telegram Telling of Death Came Last Evening---She Visited Here Last Sunday

A message came last evening, telling of the death of Mrs. Frances Lukagek, of Lawrence, this state. It was a sudden and severe shock to the relatives and friends here, as she had visited in the city last week and departed Sunday morning for her home, apparently as well and strong as anyone. Her brother, John Janda, telephoned, but could get no further information than that she had died suddenly and that the funeral would occur Friday. A number of relatives departed this morning for Lawrence to be present at the funeral, among them being Ceril and John Janda, Mrs. Joseph Wooster, Mrs. Joseph Nejedley, Hermia Chaloupka and Frank Buttery. Her parents died some time ago. Her father, who was a familiar figure on our streets until a few years ago, was over eighty years old and a picture of robust manhood. He died about eight years ago, and his wife died some twenty-three years ago. There are four brothers here, Antone Frank, Ceril and John Janda, and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Velela of Cedar Hill, this state, and Mrs. Antone Chaloupka of this place.

STEAL THEIR HOST'S GARMENTS

Taking Advantage of His Absence Two Culprits Steal McFarland's Clothes

While the rain came down in torrents last evening, Bert Ellige and a friend were visiting A. J. McFarland at his apartments in the Guthmann building, above the laundry. The fire burning low Mr. McFarland stepped out to get some wood, being gone only a moment, but on returning found an overcoat and a dress suit gone. He immediately notified the police, who began a search for the missing garments. In visiting the "Bum Shanty" Officer Rainey found that two people had been there offering some clothing for sale which tallied with the missing articles, and the fellows at the shanty thought that the parties had gone only a short distance up the track then. Officer Rainey hastily departed in the direction of the city pumping station but was unable to find the missing men or the stolen garments.

Chief Fitzgerald, in order that the culprit should not escape, notified the police in Omaha to be on the look out for the clothing thieves, and also departed for that place himself, and was rewarded by a very clever capture of the man Ellige, who he got at LaPlatte this morning and lodged in the county bastille. The stealing of all kinds of articles is getting to be common, and the rapid manner in which the police force is gathering them in will serve to lessen the depredations. The full extent of the law in cases of this kind and of a like nature, is good and wholesome medicine and will in the end prove effective.

Got His Shoes Filled

Wheeler claims the honor of having driven the slowest team in Cass county last evening, saying that he put in all the time it was raining, going five miles, and when he has arrived at his journey's end and had the team in the stable, the stars were shining again after the rain. ## MISSOURI PACIFIC STRIKING BACK

Denies Right of Commission to Deplete Rates, and Appeals to U. S. Court

The Lincoln Journal, in speaking of the Missouri Pacific rate matter says: "Baillie P. Waggener, general counsel for the Missouri Pacific, has attacked the power of the state to regulate or attempt to regulate rates on the Missouri Pacific in this state. He has attacked the two-cent passenger rate law, the Aldrich freight rate reduction bill, the anti-pass law and the railway commission act, alleging that the enforcement of these acts results in the confiscation of the property of the road without due process; the enforcement of these acts in effect would regulate interstate rate and interfere with interstate commerce, forcing the company to reduce interstate rates to keep them on a par or below the sum of outside and interstate local rates. This attack was made in the filing of an amended cross bill in the case of the state of Nebraska, Attorney General W. T. Thompson and the state railway commission begun in the state supreme court and transferred to the federal court. The amended cross bill was filed in the Lincoln division of the court, and asks for an injunction to prevent the railroad commission from interfering with the management of the railroad property.

Look Out for Him

An enlarger of photographs who has been operating lately in Omaha has a new scheme which is proving very attractive to women.

He goes to a house and secures a photograph for enlargement by promising to do the work for nothing, just to advertise the business.

A few days after he returns and secures an order for a frame usually to cost $3.

When the delivery is made the enlarged picture is generally not very good and customers protests against taking it.

"You are not paying anything for the picture; we charge nothing for that," is the reply of the agent. "You have no right to complain about something you get free. All we want is the money for the frame."

So the frame is brought and the picture usually consigned to the cellar or the garret.—Omaha News.
