EVER HAVE IT?

If You Have, the Statement of This Plattsmouth Woman Will Interest You

Ever have a "low-down" pain in the back? In the "small," right over the hips? That's the home of backache. It's caused by sick kidneys. That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it. Read a case of it:

Mrs. Joseph H. Smith, living at corner Second and Diamond streets, Wintersteen Hill, Plattsmouth, says: "Owing to a derangement of the kidneys, I have suffered a great deal for years from pain in the small of the back. I was troubled the most when on my feet or any over-exertion. Difficulty with the secretions annoyed me and especially at night when my rest would be disturbed. My husband had his attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills and he brought home a box for me from Gering & Co.'s drug store. I used them according to directions and their use did me an infinite amount of good. The pain was relieved and there was much improvement generally. I pronounce Doan's Kidney Pills a most excellent kidney remedy."

BROTHERS ARE UNITED

Separated for Twenty-Two Years, Were United Through Testimonial of Hot Springs Doctors.

Twenty-two years ago, two brothers, James and E. W. Brinley, separated. They were poor and one went one way and the other another way to seek their fortune. Each neglected to write to the other and in a short timethey had completely lost trace of one another.

After roaming about the country for a number of Years James Brinley came to Lincoln and started a shoemaker's shop while W. E. Brinley was a little more fortunate and secured a farm near Arcadia and settled down got married. After the brothers had settled down they commenced to search for each other, but they finally gave up in despair.

The Testimonial Published.
James Brinley, who is an ardent reader of the newspaper, read the following wonderful account in this paper, the issue of February 6, 1908:

"After months of suffering with gall stones and many doctors had given her no relief, Mrs. E. W. Brinley started for home in Arcadia, Nebraska, to Kansas City, to undergo an operation for her trouble. Stopping off in Lincoln for a few hours, she was met by John Wall, a banker of Arcadia. Mr. Wall having been cured of an old chronic kidney trouble by the Hot Springs Doctors, has more faith in nature's never failing remedies as used by these famous specialists, than the surgeon's knife. Mr. Wall was interested in saving Mrs. Brinley from the horrors of a surgical operation, if it were possible to do so, and to this end he persuaded her to consult with the Hot Springs Doctors who have their Nebraska State Institution at Fourteenth and O streets, this city, before continuing her trip to the hospital to be operated upon. The result of the consultation with the Hot Springs Doctors, is told in the following letter:

"ARCADIA, NEB., Jan. 18, 1908.
"HOT SPRINGS DOCTORS,
"LINCOLN, NEB.:
"GENTLEMEN—I have taken your treatment three months for the cure of gall stones and ask if you think it is safe for me to quit taking medicine. I have gained six pounds and can do a hard day's work. My neighbors tell me I look better and have so much better color than I have had for a long time. You have done so much for me that I know you will use your best judgment now. If you think I need more medicine, don't let me stop too soon. What can you do for appendicitis, as one of my neighbors has it? I thank you for what you have done for me and feel that you saved my life, after other surgical physicians said I would have to have an operation."
MRS. E. W. BRINLEY,
Arcadia, Neb."

Called on Hot Springs Doctors.

As soon as Mr. Brinley read the article he hastened to the office of the Hot Springs Doctors to secure a description of Mrs. Brinley and if possible, that of her husband. Obtaining the desired information Mr. J. Brinley wrote a letter to Mr. E. W. Brinley in Arcadia with the result that a few days later, the two long lost brothers had a happy re-union.

The Hot Springs Doctors are in receipt of thousands of just such letters as that of Mrs. Brinley and their honest dealings with their patients, and the fact that they absolutely refuse to accept an incurable case for treatment has won for them a world-wide reputation.

All those suffering from chronic diseases of the blood, nerves, kidneys, liver, bowels, heart, lungs, or skin, are cordially invited to call on the doctors for free examination and consultation. The Hot Springs Doctors, specialists, are permanently located in Lincoln, at the corner of Fourteenth and O streets.

Dr. Kinsey, who is chief staff of the Hot Springs Doctors will pay a three days visit to Plattsmouth. He will be here April 20, 21 and 22, and will be at the Riley hotel. Consultation and examination is free. Curable cases will be treated free except for the bare cost of medicines used. Incurable cases will not be accepted for treatment at any price or under any conditions.

Harsh physics react, weaken the bowels, cause chronic constipation. Doan's Regulets operate easily, tone the stomach, cure constipation. 25c. Ask your druggist for them.

Sunday at the Churches.

Last evening at the Presbyterian church, to a well-filled house, Superintendent J. W. Gamble of the city schools, addressed the young peoples' society of Christian Endeavor upon the subject of the "Wise Use of Influence." In his opening remarks, the speaker challenged the attention of the hearers to any story book with its characters, and especially the leading one, be it a heroine or a hero, that has his character changed by the persons with whom he comes in contact, showing that each character, however obscure, has its influence upon the life of all others. He showed that we, in our commingling with the world at large, have an abrupt corner of our characters knocked off here and a deficiency rounded out there; with the changing, which brings out the product of the life and character, one which we little thought would be the result, when we entered the race. He referred to a little boy who was plowing on a hot summer's day, and while stopping to allow the horses to rest was joined by his school teacher, who asked if he would not like to take a course in college, and after a while of conversation, it was decided that he would if his father's consent should be obtained. This the friend and teacher did, and the plow boy passed through college, then the university, and a result of that teacher's influence the speaker was able to address them.

As a result of one man's influence, he cited the turning of the utter route of the Union army at the battle of Winchester into a signal victory, by the influence of the presence and energy of one man—Phil Sheridan. He spoke of two men of great influence in New York City—one for good and the other for bad—in the persons of Newell Dwight Hillis, and the other Chuck Connors, of the Chinatown of New York, the former the pastor of the Plymouth church, Brooklyn, where he is using his influence for the betterment of the human race, while Chuck Connors of the underworld, and its mayor, was ready to sell a man's life for a song was using his influence for all that opposed the good in this world. Mr. Gamble said that the young ladies could do more for the purification of society, if they would exert their influence in that direction, than any other influence that could be brought to bear, more than either press or pulpit. If they should require that their gentle men friends should not smoke in their presence, should not swear or drink or loaf on the streets—all this would be done away with. The speaker said that no one could go down the street smoking a cigarette, but there was a probability that he was exerting an influence upon the life of some future president. In conclusion, he said that, of the influence of all, there was none which was so great as that of the Man of Galilee, the Saviour, and in closing he said he would like to leave with the hearers, the command of the Master, when he said, "Let your light so shine that all men may see your good works and glory your Father, which is in Heaven."

At the Christian Church

At the Christian church last evening the subject being the life of John B. Gough, George M. Porter had to say regarding the character whose life they were to study:

"John B. Gough was the most eloquent apostle of temperance of the many who have plead that way. He was born in England, Aug. 22, 1817. His parents were poor. They sent him with a neighbor to America. His mother gave him a Bible to read on his way with marked passages, especially the second to the fifth chapters of Proverbs. After becoming a Methodist while working on a farm, he went to New York with but a half-dollar to his name. Great poverty and the ability to sing and tell funny stories led him into bad company. He became a drunken actor. The first play in which he appeared was: "Departed Spirits; or, The Temperance Hoax." He was at one time so despondent he had a bottle of laudanum he was going to drink, and was only restrained, he said by the Spirit of God. A waiter, named Joel Stratton, got him to sign the pledge. He fell twice, but was at last able to stand. When he began to speak for temperance it was in a feeble way, but his great powers soon developed, and he was the leader of them all. He won thousands to Christ and away from drink. He died in 1886. His life impresses me with the great sympathy drunkards need, and who knows what kindness will accomplish?"

Other speakers followed, much the same, and a very interesting meeting was had.

Death Was on His Heels

Jesse P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." Sold under guarantee at F. G. Fricke & Co. drug store. 50c and one dollar. Trial bottle free.

RECALL THE BLIZZARD OF APRIL 1873

Old Settlers Tell Impressions of Early Day Storm

The State Journal in speaking of the early-day blizzards, says: Thirty-five years ago today the "April blizzard" of 1873 was at its height. The storm was of great severity and traveled rapidly eastward across the state. Much live stock was lost in the western part of the state and considerable damage was done in the wrecking of the homes of settlers by the heavy wind and the caving in of the roofs of many sod houses by the weight of huge snow drifts. The blizzard raged continuously for three days, the 13th, 14th and 15th, coming without warning after a spell of beautiful April weather. Traffic throughout the eastern half of the state was blocked for several days after the storms and communication west of Grand Island was entirely cut off so that the extent of the storm was not definitely known. Diaries and the recollections of the early settlers in this part of the state contain many details of interest. It was believed by some to be their first experience with a permanent feature of the Nebraska climate. There was little fruit in Nebraska in those days save in the counties along the Missouri and besides the loss of this there were no permanent effects, the heavy snow fall being much needed after a comparatively dry winter.

Palmer Blake then of Tecumseh in recalling the storm remembers most impressively the intense cold, the thermometer remaining excessively low for several days. In that vicinity much stock was lost from exposure but there was little snow.

Reports from York indicate a fall of snow of some four or five feet. The storm is vividly remembered by Henry Seymour who was at York at the time. The cold was so intense that the kitchen range was removed to the basement where the family remained for a couple of days. A lad in the neighborhood was lost in venturing but a few feet from the door step. Several men in the county disappeared while caring for stock. The driven snow was blinding for more than sixty hours. Several men at the Seymour home reached the barn but a hundred feet distant by lining up along the side of the house, joining hands and plowing through the fearful blast.

Much snow fell in and about Lincoln but the cold was not unendurable. S. D. Tuttle then living at Seventeenth and N streets recalls that the wind blew at the rate of eighty or ninety miles an hour for a considerable time, driving with it a furious storm of snow. A dwelling northwest of town was demolished and boards from the house were blown a distance of a mile. The few trees then about the city were uninjured, the spring having been a little late and the leaves only budded.

EUREKA!

Yes, I Have Found It at Last.
Found what? Why that Chamberlain's Salve cures eczema and all manner of itching of the skin. I have been afflicted for many years with skin disease. I had to get up three or four times every night and wash with cold water to allay the terrible itching, but since using this salve in December, 1905 the itching has stopped and has not troubled me.—Elder John T.
