GETTING AROUND POSTAL RULES

The Postoffice Department Rules on the Advantages Taken.

A special from Washington says: Information has reached the postoffice department that a merchant recently sent out by rural carrier one pair of shoes, and on top of the shoe box placed a package of salt, the package of salt being added to make the package overweight to avoid the payment of postage, so that the carrier might carry the package for hire. Subsequently the same merchant sent out a pair of pants attached to which was a sack of salt, the salt being sent along to make the package overweight. Rural carriers are permitted to deliver as express matter for hire, and at the request of the patrons of their routes unmailable merchandise only, and packages of mailable merchandise weighing in excess of four pounds. If the patrons for whom the shoes and the pair of pants were intended did not order the salt brought to them by the carrier at the same time as the shoes and pants, the rural carrier should not have been permitted to accept either of the packages.

Assistant Postmaster General DeGraw says: "All packages of merchandise to be sent out over rural mail routes by merchants of the town should be presented at postoffices for inspection, and in case it is found that extraneous matter not ordered by the patrons has been added to any mailable matter or package for the purpose of making such package of matter unmailable, postmaster should refuse to permit the carrier to carry any such matter or package for hire outside of the mails, and rural carriers should not receive any mail matter for hire which they suspect has been made unmailable by such devices as adopted by the merchant referred to."

What Lee Mayfield Says.

Omaha World-Herald: "L. J. Mayfield, of the Louisville Courier was in the city Monday. Mayfield is one of the storm sufferers of that place. He describes vividly various pictures of the fury of the tornado at that place. 'We will have some difficulty in getting out regular editions of the paper for a short time,' said Editor Mayfield, 'since most of our printing material is rather hard to collect at present. It is safe to say, without boasting, that never before has our paper had such a wide circulation in the country as on the memorable evening of May 12. Few places for a radius of several miles were without a paper or at least a line o' type. But after all it is nothing unusual in the life of an editor. We are more or less used to cyclonic times.'"

Are Taking An Outing.

The stage hands of the Orpheum theatre of Omaha, numbering thirteen in all, are taking an outing near La Platte, where they are fishing and having a general good time. With the beginning of next week they will begin work at the theatre at Lake Manawa, and take this opportunity of taking an outing, the Orpheum having closed last week. They are Chas. Gore, stage manager, Gus Smith, Arthur Wetherberg, Albert Schneiderwein, Herman Kohn, Howard Holland, Davis and Henry Harmon, Alford Allen, Louis Luzerne, Charles Koster, Frank Howard, Arthur Thuler and Lyle Littleford.

Forest Cunningham Breaks Leg.

The following special from Nehawka, under date of May 19th, says: "Last evening Forest Cunningham with two others was returning home from Nebraska City, when his team took fright and overturned the buggy, breaking Mr. Cunningham's leg. The others escaped with slight bruises." Mr. Cunningham is the liveryman at Nehawka, and the Journal trusts nothing of a dangerous nature will result.

Never can tell when you'll mash a finger or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil instantly relieves the pain—quickly cures the wound.

THROUGHED RAILWAY STATIONS

A Few Words of Warning to Foolish and Giddy Girls.

The following words of warning to young girls is taken from the New York Weekly, and while Plattsmouth is not afflicted with many of this class, what there are may be somewhat benefited by its publication:

We ask the question every time we have occasion to go anywhere on the train, "Why do people through the railroad depots?"

Somebody tells us that it is because they are seeing friends off, or because they are expecting friends to arrive, or because they are going somewhere themselves. But we know better.

It is safe to say that seven-tenths of the people who crowd our depots to the inconvenience and serious annoyance of travelers, are not going on any of the trains, are not seeing friends off, and are not expecting anybody to arrive.

And now, what are they at the depot for?

When the whistle sounds they are invariably the first to rush for the platform—they fill the doors, and crowd around the car entrances, and elbow the bona-fide passengers, and push the woman with a satchel and umbrella, and make themselves nuisances generally.

And their loud talk and laughter can be heard above the shriek of the locomotive, and above the conductor's cry of "All aboard!" and above every other sound, thunder not excepted.

We have in our mind a certain large country town through which we often pass, and which is especially notorious in this respect. The crowd at that depot is such that a passenger risks his life and limb in getting off the cars, or into them, and if he chance to be feeble or infirm, he ought never to attempt such a thing alone and unaided. And the majority of these loafers, we are sorry to say, are women and young girls.

The regular travel from this place is not large, but day after day, and train after train, these idle, aimless people throng to the depot; and what possible end they have in view, who can tell?

What reasonable diversion can any woman find in this sort of thing? We do not so much wonder at man resorting to depots, for they hear the latest telegraphic news, and they can spit on the platform for the ladies to wipe up with their dresses, and they can get a good view of the ankles of the female travelers, as they leave the car; but for ladies to frequent depots and push and elbow, and rush and crowd, and act like second class rowdies generally, is to us incomprehensible.

Can these young girls who hang around our depots, day after day, without having any business there, be blessed with sensible mothers? Do their fathers take enough interest in them to inquire whether their daily walks tend?

Do they themselves dream of the way in which men speak of them when they see them dawdling about such public places, and do they know that they are almost always reckoned by travelers among the woman who are no better than they should be?

Young girls, do not visit railway depots unless you have business there, and the girl who has true respect for herself will never want to be stigmatized as a depot-loafer.

A Romance Ends in Marriage

F. J. McAndrews of Hyannis, Nebraska, came down from that place last Saturday made application for a livery team and drove out south. On Tuesday morning he made the trip again and when he returned he had with him Miss Sadie Harshman and together they went to Nebraska City where they were married.

It now transpires that there is quite a romance connected with this. Girls are very scarce out in that country and Mr. McAndrews wishing someone to share his lonely lot advertised for a wife and Miss Harshman answered and a correspondence grew up with results above indicated.

Miss Harshman is the daughter of George Harshman, one of the wealthiest farmers in Cass county. The groom is engaged in the ranching business near Hyannis. The Register wishes them success.—Nehawka Register.

Miss Fay Eades to Wed.

The Sunday Omaha Bee contains the following announcement: "Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Eades announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edith Fay Eades, to Dr. William Washington Ward. The wedding will take place early in June. Miss Eades is a former Plattsmouth girl, being born in this city, and of course we all feel interested in her future. She is one of the handsomest young ladies in eastern Nebraska, and in advance the Journal cannot help but congratulate Dr. Ward upon his capture of such a lovely prize."

Mrs. Stone Again Ill.

Mrs. J. M. Stone, of Nehawka, who was here the major portion of the winter taking medical treatment and went home feeling very well, is very sick. She was taken down with the grip, after getting home and this was followed by an attack of pneumonia and she is quite ill.—Nehawka Register.

THEY WERE MARRIED IN THIS CITY

But Wanted Their Names Kept Out of the Papers.

The following is clipped from the Fremont Herald of Tuesday, and refers to the young couple who procured their license at the county judge's office in this city, and were married by the honorable judge at precisely the hour of 3 p. m. on Friday, May 15:

"Why, we meant to keep it a secret for a while."

That's what Mrs. David L. Murray asseverated to her mamma, via long distance telephone last night, when assured by the lady who guided her infant footsteps that "Its all over town."

The fact is, or seems to be, that David L. Murray and Miss Edna A. Clark forgot that the Omaha newspapers have a habit of publishing the list of marriage licenses daily, which Fremont people noticed Sunday and wondered when it was "coming off."

Dignified young Beeson married the happy young people Sunday, in the nondescript old town of Plattsmouth. After the hymenal knot was tied. Mr. and Mrs. Murray returned to Omaha, unconscious of the fact that their marriage was soon to be public.

The groom is a well-known druggist, and was many years with J. H. A. Thomas here. He is a young man of sterling qualities, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray of this city and a brother of Mark W. Murray, the Pender editor and statesman. The bride is one of the best girls in the universe, and has hosts of friends here. She is the daughter of Mrs. P. B. Cummings, and like the groom has spent the major portion of her life in Fremont.

It is stated that Mr. and Mrs. Murray will soon remove to a western town, where Mr. Murray will go into the drug business on his own account.

It will be seen the Herald is mistaken in the date of the marriage. But we do not find so much fault to that as to calling Plattsmouth a nondescript town. The writer certainly never visited this city or he would not be guilty of such a thing. Therefore we do not believe Henry Richmond wrote the above. He knows it is everything but nondescript.

SLEEPS NOW IN THE SILENT CITY

The Remains of Peter Hanrahan Consigned to the Tomb Until Called to Arise.

This morning from the St. John's Catholic church was held the funeral services over the remains of the late Peter Hanrahan, who died of accident Monday evening. The casket, when it was carried from his late home to the church and cemetery, was wrapped in the National colors, for which he fought for four long years, and which with the principles they represent, give protection to his family, and every home in the land. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Father Bradley of the St. John's Catholic church, and the interment made in the Catholic cemetery, the pall bearers being William Gilmour and John Renner, representing the Grand Army, of which Mr. Hanrahan was a faithful member, while the Catholic church was represented by Con Gillispie, Charles McGuire, Peter Claus and Frank McElroy. Thus is laid to rest the ashes of one whom we all love to honor, and who has given many a year for the good of his country and his fellowman.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank our many kind friends and neighbors for their help and sympathy during the tragic death of our beloved son and brother. Also to the choir, and for the many beautiful floral offerings.

A Trip to Kansas.

John McNurlin and wife departed this afternoon from Alameda, Norton county, Kansas, where they will visit for some time with Eugene Freye, for some three weeks, and will, if they can find an opportunity, visit in Trego county where they have a number of acquaintances. While there they will attend the wedding of their foster son, Eugene Freye, and Miss Mary Rundle, a teacher in the public schools at that place. The wedding will occur at the home of the bride's parent's near Alameda, Kansas, on June 3rd.

Just Good Clothes THAT'S ALL

Not necessarily the highest priced clothes, but clothes priced high enough to be good. No manufacturer can afford to sponge and shrink the cloth of a cheap suit. He cannot afford to give it to a skilled tailor to make and he cannot afford to put first-class interlining and trimmings in a cheap suit. Our Quality clothes are thoroughly shrunk—they are thoroughly tailored and only the best trimmings used. This makes them good clothes—just good clothes—that's all. They're none too good for the man who really wants good stuff. They're good enough to be worth $20.00 to $35.00 per.

PHILLIP ROUCKA REPORTED DYING

Telephone Message Received From Omaha, Making This Announcement.

A telephone message from one of the nurses at the St. Joseph hospital at Omaha this morning, told of the very serious condition of Phillip Roucka, saying that he could not live many hours and for his parents and friends to come on the first train if they wished to see him alive. His mother, Mrs. Frank Roucka, sr., and her son, Frank, jr., a brother of Phillip, departed on the noon train, accompanied by Edward Donat and wife, for his bedside. Mr. Roucka was operated upon for appendicitis some days since, it being the second operation, and while he was considered as being pretty sick, he was not expected to be so serious that his recovery was not looked for.

At 3 o'clock a telephone message was received saying that Phillip Roucka had just died, and that the body will arrive tomorrow morning on Burlington train No. 4, and the funeral will be held from the Holy Rosary church, but when has not as yet been determined. More relative to the matter will be given in another issue.

Sore Nipples.

Any mother who has had experience with this distressing ailment will be pleased to know that a cure may be effected by applying Chamberlain's Salve as soon as the child is done nursing. Wipe it off with a soft cloth before allowing the babe to nurse. Many trained nurses use this salve with best results. For sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.
