The Storm Yesterday.
Monday was one of the most disagreeable days of the fall. Starting out with a high wind which tore through the streets and filled the air with sand from the newly finished pavement, it culminated in the afternoon and night with a heavy rainfall which made the streets all but impassable, and at night rendered pedestrians subject to humiliating misadventures. At one time during the afternoon, the outlook for a tornado was good as dark, heavy clouds swept the heavens and the air became very close and hot. Lincoln reports a small tornado which did a lot of damage to electric light and telephone wires and tore down signs and over set small outbuildings. Kansas reports tornadoes at several points which did considerable destruction and as far south as Clayton, N. M. tornadoes played havoc—an unusual thing for that section. In the west, show fell in Western Nebraska reaching the proportions of a blizzard in Colorado. The rainfall at this point was rather heavy and the newly laid pavement was a torrent of water down the center of the street owing to all the rainfall draining into that place. It is evident that a heavy rain means an almost impassable street by foot and some scheme will have to be devised by which pedestrians can cross the street from one side to the other. Sand was washed from the pavement in spots yesterday by the swift current.

There were two cars coming up the hill back of the first car and for two blocks these cars backed away in a thrilling attempt to escape. The cars were crowded with passengers bound down town, many of them prominent business men. For three blocks before the cars finally collided men and women jumped frantically to the street, and many were hurt in their efforts to escape.
