ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING FOR INDUSTRIES

Coates' Hall Crowded Last Night With Business Men to Hear Proposition---Big Boom Started

From Saturday's Daily—

The meeting advertised for last evening to take up the project for a canning factory and alfalfa mill was a success far beyond the anticipations of its promoters. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd of business men out, men with the right spirit who came to the meeting intent upon doing something which would place this city in its proper place and give it some industries which would make it independent and flourishing. It was manifest from the commencement that the people who had braved the elements and came down to the meeting through the snow, had only one thing in mind and that was the welfare of the city.

The meeting was called to order by W. W. Coates, who briefly explained that the meeting was called to consider a proposition from Mr. T. H. Roberts for the establishment of a canning factory and an alfalfa mill. He then moved the selection of Hon R. B. Windham as chairman which prevailed unanimously and Mr. Windham took the chair.

In assuming the position Mr. Windham took occasion to remark upon the splendid outpouring of the representatives of the business and commercial interests of the city, stating that in all his forty-one years residence in the city he had not seen so representative a gathering. He dwelt upon his own interests in the city and declared unequivocally in favor of any scheme which meant the upbuilding of the city and its industries. He took up the matter of a canning factory and cited facts and figures gleaned from the experience of the surrounding cities to show that this was a most excellent place for an industry of this kind. He referred to the mismanagement which had wrecked the former industry of the kind in this city and explained that that experience had not shaken his faith in the stability or success of the enterprise. As to the alfalfa mill proposition Mr. Windham was not so well informed but from what he had seen and what he had been told, he was certain that such an enterprise could not help but pay. The raising of alfalfa had already grown to an industry of more than respectable size and there was no reason why it should not expand and be made an industry which would be highly profitable both to the people of the city and the farmers of the surrounding country. He cited a little field of this feed near the city which contained five acres and the four crops from which yielded some thirty tons. That this was highly profitable no one could deny. There was much more of Mr. Windham's speech which space alone forbids giving the attention it deserves. It was a bright, happy, optimistic speech and one which breathed the right spirit—a spirit of progressiveness and go which if carried out would make Plattsmouth a city in truth.

Mr. T. H. Roberts was then called upon to explain his plan to the assemblage. He prefaced his remarks by stating that he was a business man and not an orator. He was here because he thought there was an opportunity here to make money both for himself and the people here. He referred to his visit here in the past when he came as a representative of Grafton Johnson to investigate the possibilities of this city and vicinity from a canning standpoint, and he went on to state that the several weeks spent here then convinced him that this was an ideal location for such an industry. He referred to the limitless possibilities of the surrounding country as a producing field for all those things which the canner depended upon particularly the staples such as corn, peas, beans and tomatoes. He had an array of facts and figures which went to show that this city with its freight rates upon the Missouri river basis could easily outstrip its eastern competitors. He cited the fact that with all the manifold products of this country at our doors, the cost of canning must be much less than in the east, while the fact that we stood at the door of the Omaha and Council Bluffs jobbing houses made it certain that we had a market practically at home. He proved by his figures that the farmer can make more money raising products for the cannery than he could make in corn. There was much more which space forbids upon the canning possibilities. He then took up the alfalfa proposition and upon this line explained the theory upon which the product was manufactured. It used that portion of the alfalfa which had hitherto been allowed to go to waste. He also went into details upon this and explained the vast amount this industry meant to pay out in this town to the farmers and vicinity. He figured that upon the alfalfa proposition alone there would be expended the sum of $64,000 per year while the amount paid for canning products would be fully as much. This all impressed his hearers with the importance of securing a plant of the kind mentioned and was freely admitted by those in attendance as being sound and logical. Mr. Roberts then took up the matter of financing the proposition. He had written a prospectus of the proposed company which provided that it should be organized with an authorized capital of $75,000 of which $50,000 was to be paid in and $25,000 was to remain in the treasury as treasury stock. In addition there was to be issued $30,000 of seven per cent interest bearing bonds of which $7,500 was to be retired on December 1st, 1910, and a like amount each succeeding December 1st, until the full amount had been taken up with the privilege of the company to retire the whole amount upon December 1, 1910, or any succeeding year. The plant to be erected was estimated by Mr. Roberts to cost $45,000 upon which there was to be placed a mortgage to secure the above mentioned $30,000 of bonds. The proposition which the gentleman presented provided that the people of Plattsmouth should take this $30,000 bond issue, subscribing the full amount and advancing the money to three trustees for the bondholders which they would elect themselves and who should have the supervision of the expenditure of the money. These three trustees should at all times have the power to investigate the books and records of the company and ascertain the actual condition of the affairs of the company. Mr. Roberts urged immediate acceptance of his proposition as he was compelled to return to his home in Colorado today and he desired to know whether there was any prospect of the deal being closed.

There were a number of auditors who desired to ask questions, among them D. O. Dwyer who desired to know if any of the stock of the company was to be issued before the full amount subscribed had been paid in. He developed that the company would consist of three men and that they would pay in $15,000 by the time the corporation was ready for business. This seemed to be the only amount he figured upon the stockholders contributing until after the plant was in running shape, when the balance of the capital would be used for running purposes. Mr. Dwyer asked a number of highly interesting questions concerning the organization and management of the company.

Sam S. Smith asked in regard to the price which the company could contract for alfalfa for and Mr. Roberts stated that he could guarantee $8 per ton. Smith insisted that he should guarantee $10 which he thought would induce farmers to subscribe for the bonds as it would make a highly profitable market for them but Mr. Roberts declined to go to that length. He stated that they would have to pay the market price for alfalfa no matter what it was, but as it varied from $8 to $14 per ton, he did not feel warranted in guaranteeing more.

William Barclay enquired if there was any objection to making public the names of the proposed owners of the company in addition to himself. Mr. Roberts stated that there was no objection, that the $50,000 stock was subscribed for by Mr. W. W. Coates, J. P. Falter and himself.

Other highly interesting and instructive questions covering the proposed scheme of organization were propounded by Messrs. J. H. Salsbury, Jos. McMaken, G. L. Farley, F. E. Schlater, T. H. Pollock and others who were deeply interested in the matter

Mr. S. S. Smith suggested that Julius Pitz, who was present, give his views upon the alfalfa proposition with the prices he had received for his crop. Mr. Pitz, who has been gaged in raising this product for several years, complied and stated that he had been receiving $10 and $10.50 per ton for the past two years; that he had shipped most of his product to Illinois where it was used, the price received being f. o. b. cars at this city. Mr. Pitz gave a very interesting and enlightening talk upon the alfalfa question.

There seemed to be some misunderstanding as to what would be the proper method of procedure to get the ball rolling, but after discussion it was agreed to appoint a committee of five to investigate the plan and see what could be done toward securing subscriptions to the bonds and upon motion of Geo. L. Farley the chair was empowered to seect five business men as this committee, after which the meeting adjourned.

This morning Mr. Windham acting upon the authority given him by the meeting appointed the following committee which will at once take up the matter, Messrs. C. E. Wescott, C. C. Parmele, F. E Schlater, Julius Fitz and Philip Theirlof.

The Journal in an effort to ascertain the general feeling of the business men concerning the proposition efore them, interviewed a large number of them and found that there was an enthusiastic desire on the part of all of them to secure this or some similar industry for the city. They all wanted, however, to know that there was going to be something go into the plant besides their own money and that seemed to be the shaky point among them. However, the work of the investigating committee will put any doubts at rest that may exist upon this score, as the members composing the committee are the best business men in the city. It is a committee in which everyone will have full confidence and Mr. Windham in its appointment made ideal selections. It is not well to criticise the manner of organization until the committee has acted and passed upon the questions involved. This will be soon and it will then be time to accept or reject the scheme. It must be admitted that there are some things about the plan which need explanation, but this can doubtless be furnished.

No matter what the outcome of this deal may be the fact remains that the city is alive and that it will have industries sure. The coming of power really means a great development to the city and the commencement of years of progress seems at the door.
