

dispatched my own order, and, while idly waiting the return of the servant, had my attention attracted toward a group gathered about a second table just beyond the one occupied by the English family party.

CHAPTER II.

In Which I Meet His Lordship. Chilean officers, largely naval, to judge from their rather resplendent uniforms, occupied this second table, and it was evident that they had been drinking to excess. It was their loud voices and boisterous laughter which first attracted my attention, and I soon caught sufficient of their incautious speech to discover they were bantering one among their number to carry into execution a tipsy boast he had just made over the wine. The special officer thus singled out as butt for the boisterous wit of his reckless companions was a naval lieutenant, a rather tall, cadaverous fellow, sallow faced, his short black hair standing erect and bristling, his mustaches drooping so as to shade the corners of his mouth. His cheeks were flushed with temper from the rough sallies at his expense, and his lips uttered a burning Castilian curse, as he arose somewhat unsteadily to his feet, and glared about into the expectant faces of his laughing tormentors.

"Sacro Cristo! you will see, camaradas; you will see!" he declared, bracing himself for the effort. "Caramba! what sailor fears in presence of beauty ?-- puf! not L"

He turned short about, his sword chains rattling, and strode directly across toward the unconscious Briton, who stared up at him over his roast beef in petrified astonishment. Fumbling awkwardly at his belt, the intruding officer finally brought forth a card, and placed it ostentatiously upon the table, bowing low as he did so.

"I would myself to introduce to the senor," he announced with drunken gravity, and in amazingly broken English. "I Teniente Lootenant Sanchez, Chilean navy; one of the fir-rst family in this country. Maybe you know me, hey? I was with de Almirante Cochrane, when the capitano call on you in the leetle shin. Now I would the bettar-r acq'aintance make with the entree, an' it is easy. I take you to the dance on the warship-bueno! all vera fine. Si, was it not so, mees?"

'Make the Slightest Uproar and I'll Hoist You Over the Railing."

The young girl, her fine eyes contemptuous and loathing, turned aside from the leering, drunken face confronting her. An instant only her glance rested on the sputtering old man at the head of the table, then swept, almost beseechingly, about the great room. Apparently no one present had taken the slightest interest in the affair, with the exception of the small party of Chilean officers who were laughing uproariously over their wine, and the girl's gray eyes, now almost black from excitement, came back to her persecutor.

"The dance on the warship, senorita," he insisted, "the gran' dance of my country; it will please you mucho. Dios! w'at care we fer papa?"

She perceived me plainly now, lean ing forward just outside the window directly behind the feliow's back. I amply repaid for my little part in this know not what message of encourage comedy of errors by your smile of recment she may have read in my face, ognition and words of thanks. You but into her eyes there instantly swept are English?" a mute, passionate appeal. For the fraction of a moment I hesitated, feel lashes clearly outlined against the city on the morning train. rested gloatingly on the surprised face ing convinced that any action on my white fiesh. part would only serve to hasten my own fate. Yet it was not in my nature are English travelers for pleasure. to hold back. Half rising, and bend. Our yacht lies anchored in the harbor ing forward, I reached through the below. open window, twisted my fingers into I imagined she was tempted to inthe fellow's coat collar, and the next quire who I might be, but, while she instant he was lying flat upon his back on the balcony floor, nothing re- priety of so personal a question, the day. maining to show his recent presence, spare, stiff figure of the Englishman in the dining hall except an overturned chair.

he finally vanished into the blackness below. The chances were strong that I should hear from him later, but in the meantime my interest veered to the excellent dinner being served. The lieutenant would have his turn, and, perchance, bring me swift release from all my troubles on the morrow. The English party still remained at their table, lingering over the dessert, but I noticed that conversation had lapsed, and precious little eating was being done. Evidently only the require ments of good form held them to their places, the elderly gentleman especially denoting his nervousness by continual side-glances about the long room. I overheard him mutter something indistinctly regarding having left his pistol upstairs, and it was plainly apparent he felt thoroughly ashamed of his late passiveness under insult. Madame was flushed and uneasy, angry still over the episode, and greatly inclined to sputter now that all real danger had passed; but the younger woman merely toyed with her spoon in silence, her eyes downcast, her cheeks devoid of their previous color. She made a fair picture, the brilliant light overhead flooding dark hair, and it was not in young human nature to refrain from gazing at her through the invitingly open win dow. Finally they all pushed back their chairs to retire, and, as she glanced up while rising to her feet, our eyes met fairly, and a warm wave of color swept across the uplifted, sensitive face. The next instant, yielding apparently to some sudden impulse of gratitude, she stepped through the open window, and stood beside me with extended hand.

"Senor," she said, speaking a broken Spanish very prettily, "it was extremely kind of you to assist in removing that horrible man, and I cannot leave without some expression of my gra4 tude."

I was upon my feet instantly, bowing before her as to a queen, yet feeling a strange embarrassment.

"That incident was nothing, senortrain. ita," I insisted, yet venturing to look directly into the depths of those dark gray eyes, so intensely studying my face under the dim light of the lanterns. "I did no more than any man davs. would consider a privilege. I realized you had no younger protector at hand.

She glanced around toward the others of her party, now also upon their feet, and gazing out at us in undisguised amazement.

'No," she explained, as though in unwilling apology; "he has passed the age where he can safely measure strength with ruffianism. It is not lack of courage, senor, but of bodily vigor.'

"A time of life which must come to all of us," I returned, hastily, "and prudence is not necessarily disgrace. Yet helieve me, senorita, I already feel

Men's Fancy Hose!

During the Summer months and the low shoe season you will want to wear well fitting stylish hosiery. We have the celebrated Onyx Brand line from New York City. These are the goods you find in the swellest shops in New York or Chicago. We have all the new shades of green, wine, London smoke, fawn browns, electric gray and sand tan in lisle wear at 25c. These are all full fashioned goods, with high rib top that fit and stay in place. We've the genuine silk lisle at 40 and 50c. Holeproof, guaranteed $1.50 4 for six pair. We also have boy's Holeproof.

 DAILY PERSONAL NEWS Short Items of Interest From Saturday Evening's Daily Journal

Mrs. J. W. Black is spending the Harold Streight departed on the day in Omaha visiting with relatives early morning train for a day in going to that city on the morning Lincoln. Frank Krowlek came down this

James Johnson departed this mornmorning from Havelo k to spend ing for Creston. Ia., where he goes Sunday in this city. for a visit with friends for several

Joe. Waics and wife are spending the day in Omaha going to that city on the early morning train.

C.E.Wescott's Sons

"Where Quality Counts."

A. S. Will is attending to business matters in Omaha today going there this morning on the early train.

C artis Parmele is looking after bus tess matters in Omaha today going t that city on the morning train. Jacob Jones and family were pas-

Mrs. Wilson of Omaha who has engers this morning for Lincoln been the guest of Mrs. C. C. Parmele at noon. where they go to make a visit with departs ! this morning for her home.

F. G. Mergan and wife are spend-Gideon Archer is looking after ing the day in Omaha being passensome very important business today gers for that city on the early train in the big city, having gone there this morning.

Otto Herold and family are spend- Josephine, are spending the day in senger for that city on the mail train ing the day in Lincoln with rela- Omaha being passengers for that city

Fred McCauley is among those traveling to Omaha this noon on the mail train.

W. R. Baird was in the city this morning, returning to Omaha on the fast mail at noon.

Julius Johnson departed on the mail train at noon for Lincoln where he will make a visit over Sunday.

Hans Rothman was a passenger at noon for Omaha where he goes to look after some business matters.

George, Henry and Philip Thierolf ame in this morning from Cedar Creek to look after business in this city.

Miss Julia Janda is spending the afternoon with friends in Omaha having gone to that city on the mail train at noon.

County Clerk Rosencrans is looking after business matters in Omaha this afternoon going to that city on the mail train at noon.

Thos, B. Bates is attending to business matters this afternoon in Omaha being a passenger for that city on the fast mail at noon.

Mrs. F. C. Letts is spending the afterneon in Omaha being a passenger for that city on the mail train ars. C. P. Richards is spending Mrs. J. H. Hall and daughter Miss the afternoon in Omaha being a pasat noon.

Isaac Pearlman, the Omaha capitalist, is spending the day in the city attending to some important business matters.

C. E. Metzger, the well known Cer-reat ingles, an' the ladies, the most boot'ful ladies," and his sunken eyes of the girl, who had half turned, the better to observe him.

It was all so swiftly, so impudently done that the astounded Briton could only stare, his lean face reddening with annoyance. This hesitancy, as well as something in the constrained attitude of the younger woman, seemed to encourage Sanchez; his expression changed to a satisfied smile. while his lank figure bent in another ceremonious bow, this time directed toward her.

"Ah, I knew it vould so be," he said, insinuatingly. "It was so I told it to my bravas camaradas. Si, si, it vas so ever-the uniform make us welcome with the ladies. They lofe the brav'; is it not so, senorita?"

By this time the outraged paterfamilias had stiffened into rock, his eyes cold and hard behind their glasses. In frigid contempt he deliberately turned his back upon the fellow, saying felly:

"You impertinent scoundrel! I am accustomed to selecting my own guests, and you are certainly not one of them."

The Chilean lawzhed, perhaps not wholly comprehending the words, and remained twisting his mustache between long white fingers. He was far too drunk for fear, besides being upheld by a military contempt for civillans.

"Pah! 'tis a pig of a papa," he sputtered, brlf turning to witness the approval of his laughing companions byhin t. "But the smile of beauty still invites, and Juan Sanchez fears pot before man or devil."

He strode around the table, his scobbard clauting on the stone floor, drew out the single vacant chair and planted himself in it, his back toward me, his impudent face leering across the white cloth toward the startled, indignant woman seated opportie. I watched her gray eyes widen from astonishment, only to darken with indignation. She pushed back her chair, half rise to her feet, and sank down again, her cheeks flushed, her bosom rising and falling tumultuously. Her evident contempt for the fellos would have utterly crushed any one less befuddled into embarrassed silence. But Sanchez merely grinned, his hands still toying with his mustaches.

"Sangre de Cristo, war it not so, mees?" he questioned, insinuatingly, utterly ignoring the helpless man sputtering at the head of the table, who could only glare at him with open mouth. "The uniform of valor is the best introduction to the favor of the ladies. Si you vera soon be pretty good am'ra of me, the Lootenant Ja Sanch I show you the vera b society in Valparaiso, the opera, t' : grand br'l, everything that pleases that to the head of the stairs, watching him

It was rather smartly, prettily done, the astounded lieutenant possessing fest disapproval. neither wind nor opportunity for the slightest outcry, and once without, 1 promptly throttled him, meanwhile proper to permit me to express our muttering a few important admonitions into his ear in well-selected Spanish.

"Lie still there, you drunken idiot. response, and he stood directly facing Make another attempt to bite me, and me, bowing slightly with a stateliness I'll pound your head on these stones. Bah! save your threats, senor, and if you make the slightest uproar I'll hoist ish, doubtless assuming that to be my you over the railing yonder, and it's native tongue. 30 feet to the pavement below. Now stand up! Do you see this, senor?" and I pressed the cold muzzle of a revolver against his swarthy cheek. "Oh, you do! Well, you probably paralleled impudence as to be, for the know also how it works. Now listen to me-there are stairs at that corner yonder; you go down them quietly and disappear-disappear; do you understand that? If you dare return to that dining room to-night, or attempt again to address that young woman, I am going to kill you, senor.'

My voice was cold and low, but it carried weight. Panting still from the flerce choking, his eyes hot with anger, his lips trembling, he endeavored to speak.

at last, his face full of murder, yet standing helpless before my gun-barrel. "I cut your heart out! You insult me, a Chilean sailor. I have revenge for my honor. You fight me for this, senor."

I returned, indifferently, "Only you get out of here now, and sober up, Sanchez.'

senor; but I know not yours."

which had been written the cognomen I had assumed at the hotel.

what tartly, "Besides, senor, that happens to be my dinner coming yonder, and I prefer eating it undisturbed. You either go down those stairs quietly at once, or I'll kick you down."

I was obliged to smile while watching him back away. Beyond question the fellow was an arrant coward and bully, yet sufficiently angry and outraged to have fought gladly if only opportunity served. I followed him senoritas in my country. I have the closely while he descended, cursing fiercely to himself at every step until

"Yes, senor," she replied, softly, "we appeared suddenly in the open casement. For a moment of silence his cold eyes surveyed us both with mani-

"Doris," he spoke at last, his words natural gratitude to this young gentleman." She drew aside quietly, making no of manner scarcely courteous, his language immediately changing to Span-

"The gallant action of the sepor was greatly appreciated by all of us," he began formally; "the more so because I was so astounded by the fellow's unmoment, helpless to resist insult. I trust the senor has not suffered during him by a special letter immediately."

gray eyes behind his shoulder. But he yielded her no further opportunity for expression, and I remained there

I bowed, giving utterance to a word the encounter?" "Not in the slightest."

"That is most gratifying," the calm stateliness of his features slightly relieved by the flicker of a smile, as he drew forth a gold-mounted case and extended toward me an engraved at this post is uncertain, yet we shall

"Nombre de Dios!" he burst forth

"Oh, certainly, anything to oblige."

"Caramba! you know my name,

I drew a card from my pocket across slone, watching them move slowly "You possess it now," I said someacross the brightly illumined dining eyes at the numerous tables, my heart pulsing to a new emotion as she turned swiftly, beneath the half-concealing shadow of the portieres, and cast one quick, sweeping glance backward. "Doris"-the name lingered softly pleasant upon my lips in memory, seeming to bring before me the haunting vision of her face. I held the card up to the light and read:

Her eyes fell slightly, the long tives having been passengers for that this morning on the early train.

Mrs. Brad White was a passenger

Mrs. Charles Creamer from near Murray came in this morning and was a passenger for Omaha on the morn-

Mrs. Charles Herman and sister

'eparted this morning for Omaha hrre they will spend the day visit-this morning for Omaha where she day.

ng train.

ig with relatives.

relatives and friends.

Miss Lettie Smith was a passenger stood hesitating, uncertain of the pro- will visit with relatives during the Mrs. F. G. Morgan, being passengers O'Neill line, called there by busi-

> Mrs. J. E. Thompson and son were passengers on the early train this morning for Omaha where they will spend the day.

Frank Hawksworth came down day. cold and stern, "it would have been last evening from Lincoln to make a brief visit with his parents, returnon the early train.

> Mrs. Dameron and baby of Co- to this city. lumbus, Neb., who have been visiting in the city with George Poisall and family, departed this morning for their home. F. H. Steimker and wife were passengers for Omaha this morning where they will visit with their children who reside at that point. They

it.

visit.

Mrs. Pallister of Omaha who has Frank Buttery, departed this morning for her home. She was accompanied by Mrs. Buttery for a short you at any time on board our yacht this morning to spend Sunday with in the harbor. The length of our stay his mother, brothers and sisters, Mrs. Aug. Hess and family.

surely remain for several days. And let me add," he concluded, drawing Mrs. Guy Burton and little son of himself up with an air that compelled Plainview, Neb., arrived in Plattsmy admiration, "that I hold myself mouth Thursday evening for a few personally answerable for any consedays vish with her parents, Mr. and quences which may follow upon your Mrs. Fred Kunsman. timely interference. I shall so inform

Miss Helen Chapman departed this afternoon for Mediopoils, fa., where or two of formal thanks, belleving I she will make a visit with her sists read a far more cordial invitation in Mrs. Batell, formerly Miss Hattie the depths of the suddenly uplifted Chapman, for several days,

Jacob Schneider came down this room, instantly the cynosure of all ter of Deeds Schneider for the day. last night several ofhis fields being badly washed but he was glad to have escaped the hail which did so much damage south of hlm.

on the morning train. Mrs. John Hiber and daughter Miss dar Creek citizen, is looking after Marie, were passengers on the mornwill visit with her son during the in train for Omaha where they will spend the day with friends.

Miss Edith Atwood is in Omaha this morning for Benson where she today in company with her sister on the morning train for that city. ness matters.

> Mrs. A. J. Beeson and baby and Miss Gertrude Beeson were passen- Ina Davis of Union, are spending the gers on the early morning train for afternoon in Omaha being passengers Omaha where they will spend the for that city on the fast mail.

Frank C. Wheeler was a north deeds and baseball "fan," is spendbound passenger this morning on ing the afternoon in Omaha going up ing to the capital city this morning the early train going to Omaha and he claims to take care of Thaddeus possibly to Norfolk before his return S. Clifford.

> Mrs. Short and daughter of St. Joe and were passengers on the fast mail Mo., who are visiting with her, were for Omaha where they will spend passengers this morning for Omaha the afternoon. where they will spend the day.

known farmer from west of the city. is spending the day looking after old friends and to attend to busiwill make an over-Sunday visit of business maters in this city

Ed. Rummell came in this morning from his home southwest of been visiting in the city with Mrs. the city, to attend to some business been visiting with D. Hawksworth matters. He reports that the rain and family departed yesterday afterof last night did a great deal of noon for her home in Texas, her damage to fields by washing and daughter who has been visiting with also by covering up newly planted Mr. and Mrs. Hawksworth for some-business matters in the city today. coming down this morning on the Schuyler train. John Hallstrom departed on the noon train for Royal, Neb., on the

Miss Edith Pitz and her guest Miss

Henry A. Schneider, register of Mrs. John Hirz and daughters Mrs. J. D. Short accompanied by came in this morning from the farm August Fitt one time a resident of Adam Kaffenberger, the well this city, came down from Omah this morning to visit a few hours with ness matters, returning to his home on the mail at noon.

> Mrs. J. E. Hawksworth who has time accompanying her.

Spring - Millinery 25 PER CENT YOU WILL FIND Better Styles Better Goods Better Work and 25 per cent less than any other Millinery in this part of the country. Call and see morning on the Schuyler from Cedar Creek to look after some business maters and make a visit with Regis-Aug Nolting, the well known and popular farmer from west of the city. was in the city today attending to business and while here he took occasion to pay this office a pleasant call. Mr. Nolting was one of the sufferers from the the heavy rain of card. "Permit me, senor; and we Fred Hess, who is employed in the shall feel greatly honored to receive B. & M. shops at Havelock, came in Fred Hess, who is employed in the fields.