ANNUAL CORNHUSKER FOR 1909

One of the Best Ever Issued-- William A. Robertson of This City Editor-in-Chief

As stated on its title page the Cornhusker is "published annually by the upper classes of the University of Nebraska, volume three being a partial record of the happenings during the college year 1908-1909."

Two hundred pages of the book are devoted to a history of each of the classes with individual paragraphs and photographs for each of the upper classes.

The 1909 Cornhusker is more than a catalogue of the university. It gives a resume of the school as would a catalogue, but it goes further than that in embodying something of the Nebraska spirit in book form.

The Cornhusker staff is itself composed of students who are generally recognized as having the spirit which they have striven to give their book.

O. Bentley, business manager of the book, is a junior engineer. He is a member of Phi Kappa Psi and of the engineering society.

As managing editor the Cornhusker has E. W. Hills, 1909, R. S. Moseley, 1910, C. P. Peterson, law 1909, and L. B. Studevant, medical 1909.

Probably the most notable feature of the 1909 Cornhusker, wherein it differs from the publications of previous years is in the artistic effect obtained in grouping the individual photographs.

The military department of the Cornhusker presents a pleasing appearance with its numerous photographs of companies officers, band and special drill clubs.

Not only are the pictures arranged artistically, but the general art work in the publication is above the average of university books. A number of full page drawings by P. K. Fredericks, 1911, are worthy of note and headings by "Deacon" are well executed.

The one noticeable deficiency of the book is in fun. The 1909 Cornhusker will probably rank as the most serious annual ever yet published by the university students.

The first pages of the book are devoted to the dedicatory expressions and to a statement and picture of the staff. Immediately following the full page photographs of Former Chancellor Andrews and the present acting Chancellor, Dr. Samuel Avery.

The class history of the senior class occupies two pages wherein are set forth briefly the principal events during the four years' course of the class through the university.

One page each suffices for the histories of the sophomore and freshman classes. In each the historian confined himself to a mere statement of fact.

Following the class histories there is an extended resume of the various colleges of the university. This section, including the individual mention of the juniors and seniors, comprises the major part of the book.

The teachers' college, reposing with dignity in the Cornhusker as the "College of Pedagogy," follows the academic college departments the picture of the dean prefacing the rest of the material.

The same plan of treatment which was followed in the preceding college departments is held in the industrial college section, and also that of the engineers, medical students, dentists and law.

For the first time in the history of university annals the sea farm is given a department of its own. A history of the school of agriculture by Principal A. E. Davison constitutes the preface to this part of the Cornhusker.

Succeeding the departmental part of the Cornhusker is the athletic section, introduced by a picture of Coach "King" Cole, who has for two years superintended the making of Nebraska's foot ball team.

The college organizations which are given space following the military section speak well for the various activities of the university. cities the Y. M. C. A., the English club, the German club, the medical society, the Latin club, the Catholic students' club, the engineering society, the university branch of the American Institute of electrical engineers, the Komensky club, the college equal suffrage league, the dramatic club, the Daily Nebraskan, the students' debating club, the debating squad, the interclass debating teams, and the class societies, including the Innocents, Black Masque, Silver Serpent, Vikings, Xi Delta, Iron Sphinx, and Spikes.

The eleven fraternities of the university and the nine sororities the each represented by photographs and a roll of members. The masonic organization of Arcadia and the various professional fraternities are likewise exhibited.

As the beautiful strains of the wedding march, rendered by Miss Mary Zimmerman, floated through the auditorium, the bridal party took their places at the marriage altar. The ceremony was beautiful and impressive, being witnessed by only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

After the ceremony the bridal party and the invited guests went to the home of Ambrose Bickert where a delightful wedding breakfast was enjoyed. The happy couple departed in the evening for their future home near Louisville.

It is a pleasure to chronicle the marriage of such worthy people and this paper waits to them its warmest congratulations.—Elmwood Leader-Echo.
