

CANDIDATES WHO WILL SERVE THE BEST INTERESTS OF CASS COUNTY

Democratic Candidates Are Worthy of the Votes of Every Taxpayer and Citizen Regardless of Party or Creed

National politics may have an importance that calls for party fealty and party solidarity in order to work out the principles and policies of great national politicians, but no such exigency exists in the affairs of our county, and seldom in the affairs of our state. Here we are all at home and the affairs that are controlled by the election of public servants are the local affairs of our own community of interests and we are all in a position to thoroughly understand the character and condition of each local candidate. Where we go out to trade, or to transact business of a general character we are all disposed to trade or transact business with those people whom we like best and in whom we have the most confidence. And we all prefer to transact our public business along these cordial lines. And the Journal is not going to ask the people of Cass county to vote for a single man for office next Tuesday, simply because he is a Democrat, but because we believe he is the best man for the position for which he is a candidate, and better adapted to serve the taxpayers and those interested in seeing the public affairs of Cass county conducted in such a manner as will reflect credit upon the people and honor to themselves. The voter cannot possibly make any mistake in supporting the following ticket in its entirety:

Frank E. Schlater

Who has served the people so faithfully and efficiently for two years, is a candidate for re-election and asks them to endorse him at the polls for the second term. Those who know Frank Schlater well will all vote for him, because they know he is honest and competent, and has done his duty well in the past. He has served one term as county treasurer and the record he has made in that office is beyond reproach. He is an unobjectionable public official, and has discharged his duties with care, economy and ability. Can you better those conditions by displacing him with a man who has yet to earn the class into which he is to be placed? Frank E. Schlater has earned your loyal and hearty support.

Ed. S. Tutt.

The above named gentleman is a young man of sterling qualities and worth. He served two years as deputy sheriff under John D. McBride, and performed his duties as such official to the entire satisfaction of all who had business with the sheriff's office during his incumbency. He was born and reared in Cass county and the people who know him from boyhood up, can vouch for his honesty and integrity. That he will make an efficient official no one will have the audacity to question. Ed. Tutt should receive the support of every voter who believes that the office of sheriff is a public trust and that the affairs of the office should be conducted in an honorable and legitimate manner.

D. C. Morgan.

Our candidate for county clerk is a gentleman, whose character is as clear as the noonday sun in a cloudless sky. Those who know him best are his friends, because they know his every day life has been that of an honorable, upright citizen. He has served nearly four years as the faithful, reliable and efficient deputy of County Clerk Rosencrans and all who have had business in that office know that all the Journal has said in reference to his candidacy is the truth. His record is an open book and everyone will bear us out in the assertion that there are no better men, or any that are superior to him for county clerk than the Clall Morgan. All voters who desire the office to be run with that efficiency in the future as it has been in the past four years, will vote for him.

Michael Archer.

For county judge we have a candidate who has been a resident of Cass county for many years, and whose interests have been those of the people of the county. Judge Archer is a good man in every sense of the term, and is one of the best lawyers at the Cass county bar. We doubt if there is an attorney in the county better read up on the law. He is just the kind of man to fill the office of county judge, because he will ever have an eye especially to the interests of all widows and orphans in the settlement of estates, and these interests will be most carefully guarded by Judge Archer.

Andrew J. Snyder.

Here is another Cass county production who should be honored by his election to the office of register of deeds, a position he is so eminently fitted to fill. Andy Snyder is a young man who is a friend to everybody he meets, and to know him is to love him. Reared on the farm, educated in the common schools, honorable in all his dealings, his record as a man and citizen is one to be proud of. He should be elected to the office of register of deeds because he is well fitted for the place. The people will find him, if elected, a gentleman who will always be a gentleman in carrying out the duties of his office. A vote for Andy Snyder is a vote for the proper person for the proper place.

Miss Mary E. Foster.

So well and faithfully has this lady performed the duties of the office of county superintendent of schools that the people of Cass county, and especially those who are truly interested in the public schools, will decide to let "well enough alone," and vote to retain her for a second term. Miss Foster has had considerable experience in the public schools, and has been a teacher for some years. She enjoys the distinction among a few in the state of Nebraska of holding a life certificate, issued by state authorities, while her opponent had hard work to secure a third grade certificate, and had to go out of the county to secure that. Miss Foster is well known for her excellent qualities, and we do not believe the voters of Cass county will turn her down for a man who has been a resident of the county for two years, and "is here today and there tomorrow" sort of citizen.

George P. Meisinger.

The above named gentleman should be elected to the position of county commissioner because he is a citizen who will have the true interests of the entire county at heart during his administration. He is one of the county's noblemen, belonging to one of the best families in Nebraska, and can be depended upon to do his duty at all times and under all circumstances. He will have no fear for friend or foe in carrying out what he thinks is for the best interests of the entire people of Cass county. If you want this kind of a man on the board of county commissioners, vote for George P. Meisinger.

Fred Patterson.

Fred Patterson is the only regularly nominated candidate for county surveyor. Mr. Patterson is one of Cass county's best citizens, and has lived here for many years. He learned the art of surveying in his early manhood, and for years followed it as a profession. He understands the business to perfection, and should be elected because he will prove "the right man in the right place."

County Coroner.

E. Ratnour of Weeping Water is our candidate for coroner. Two years ago he came within a very few votes of being elected to this position. Mr. Ratnour is one of the most reliable undertakers and embalmers in eastern Nebraska, and there are none better qualified for this office. He is a good man and one of the leading business men of the city of Weeping Water. A vote for Mr. Ratnour is a vote for a gentleman that you will never regret.

Held for Wife Abandonment.

In county court this morning Judge Beeson held Charles Neligh, a resident of Wisner, Neb., for trial in the district court in bonds of $500 for wife abandonment, which he gave and was given his liberty. Neligh was taken into custody at Wisner by Sheriff Quinton on a warrant issued out of the county court several days ago, and brought back to this city for trial. He was married in this city to Ethel York, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. York, and after living with her a short time he abandoned her, according to the complaint on file in county court, and has since failed to provide for her in any manner. He is quite well known in this vicinity, where he lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. B. Neligh, for many years. The Nelighs moved to Wisner several years ago, and the young man accompanied them. It was at this point that he was located when this complaint was filed. Mrs. Neligh, it is stated, is being sued for divorce by Neligh, his mother, who is in the city, being authority for that statement. The entire matter seems to be most unfortunate and regrettable, as the two are among the popular young people of this vicinity.

Election Officials Notified.

In another place the Journal speaks of the officers who served at the primary election serving at this fall's election. Today the Journal reporter made an effort to secure an authoritative expression from Clerk of the Court Robertson, who appointed the officials, but that gentleman had not returned from his trip into the county, and it could not be obtained. However, his deputy, Miss Jessie Robertson, stated that the law was quite plain on the matter, and the officers who served at the primary election last August would hold over and serve on next Tuesday. The law does not provide for any official notification from the clerk of their term of office except as contained in the notice of their appointment, but it does provide that they shall serve at the official general election. Miss Robertson states she has had many inquiries by phone and otherwise as to this, and the law is as set forth above. Therefore, all judges and clerks who served in the several wards and precincts in the county at the August primary will report on next Tuesday morning for service at the general election.

To Give Fine Supper.

Next week on Wednesday from 5 to 8 p. m., the ladies of St. John's Catholic church will give one of their delightful suppers at Coates' hall. To those who have been guests at these gatherings in the past it is unnecessary to say anything of the good things in store at that time. The suppers which these ladies have given have always ranked as among the most superb collations served in the city, and invariably they have splendidly patronized. The one next Wednesday, November 3, will be no exception to the rule and doubtless the attendance will be much larger than ever before. A large number of ladies are now selling tickets for the affair, and they are meeting with splendid success. In addition to giving their patrons more than their money's worth, the ladies have a grand object to work for, and it alone merits a magnificent attendance.

Huffman Wins Three Dollars.

Wescott's Sons yesterday afternoon had a big crowd of people present when the clock was unvelled to see who come closest to winning the three green dollars which they give away every Wednesday. S. H. Huffman of this city was the lucky man. He held a ticket calling for 5:28:25, while the clock stopped at 4:58:45. Mr. Huffman was almost the farthest away from the winning number of any of the lucky ones, and that just illustrates how the chance runs. These regular unvelving and awards are becoming one of the weekly attractions of the city and a great many people come in from the country to be present and see how close they come to winning the valuable prize. The next unvelving takes place on next Wednesday, November 3, at 3 p. m.

C. D. Clapp and son Willard, with several of the Republican candidates for office who have been touring the county, came in last evening in Mr. Clapp's automobile, and it is understood most of them will remain in the city until nearly election to repair their fences.

THROUGH THE NEWEST STATE

Charles Grimes Writes of His Trip to Southland

When I last closed this narrative of strange doings and happenings in the southland, I had succeeded in getting as far as the south line of Oklahoma, a matter accomplished after a great deal of hard work and the use of many words and expressions.

I made the run through Oklahoma during the night time, and therefore am not in a position to speak from personal observation of the ravages of drouth and the burning winds, but I talked with travelers who got on the train at various points, and from them I found conditions to be more intense than farther north. The corn crop is stated by all to be the shortest in the history of the new state, the long drouth leaving the fields in shape for a burning wind, which came up in August like a blight and turned the green fields into seared and yellow prairies. For years corn had been one of the staple crops of the new state, and each succeeding year had seen a larger percentage of acreage put into it, this year being no exception. In many parts of the state the farmers had turned their cotton fields into corn, believing it would pay them better, and would be much easier to get into storage. Many of the farmers in this new state are northern men, used to corn culture, and not used to raising cotton and this was one of the reasons why they changed the crop.

Another and perhaps more potent cause was the lack of help to gather cotton. Last year the loss from this cause was large and many complaints were made because of the inability to secure cotton pickers. The negro is relied upon to furnish the bulk of the cotton pickers and this help has been deeply incensed at the passage of the "Jim Crow" law and other laws prejudicial to their interests as they view them. It is well known the "Jim Crow" law referred to is the law to separate the races in railway depots and upon trains. As is the case now throughout the south, the separate coaches are provided for negroes and whites and the Indian through the new state is for these purposes, a white and rides with them. Separate waiting rooms at the depots are provided for the races and the law prescribes a penalty for both races for using the rooms of the other. It is this impressing of the race distinction upon the negro which makes him give Oklahoma a wide berth and reduced the number of laborers in the cotton field.

In addition to the short corn crop, all agree that cotton has been badly injured by the prolonged drouth and that the crop will be a very short one. It is true that the price is high but it is not nearly high enough to make up for the shortage in bales. This has cut into the cotton grower and he suffers just as the corn planter, so conditions in the state will be hard during the coming winter.

Despite this the towns and cities which deck the rich prairies are alive with building and business. Not a one but shows its new dwellings and its new stores and not a resident of the cities but speaks optimistically of the future. Drouth and short crops do not even discourage the boomer who is heard abroad in the land. Among the larger cities ablaze with light and lively with movement during the evening and early morning can be numbered Vinita, one time a capitol of an Indian nation, Wagoner, a railroad center and a teeming business mart, Muskogee, one of the new giants of the southwest and a railroad and business center of no mean magnitude, Eufaula, a prairie town brimful of business, McAlester, a coal town with prolific mines surrounding it and much railroad business as well as a big farming community and Atoka from which point a branch line runs to Shawnee and Oklahoma City, a live and bustling community. All these towns and cities have the prosperous and rushing air incident to rich and populous centers of trade and commerce and all give promise of a fine future. One of the best signs about these places was the large number of passengers constantly getting on and off the trains—a sure sign of ready money and prosperity. The long Katy train was crowded throughout the night with an endlessly changing crowd of wanderers white, red and black.

One of the passengers to get on at some place in the night was a husky gent with large, pop eyes, and a heavy blonde mustache. He also was dressed in a handsome diamond or near-diamond ring, the remainder of his apparel being a minor consideration from the way he flashed the stone about. As he entered the car he was the cynosure of all eyes, whatever cynosure is, and he plainly realized his importance to the community. His arrival stirred the nodding and weary wayfarers into activity and the ancient dame who had deposited so large a bundle with little Bill, claimed pop as her own. He took a seat across the aisle where she had been setting in the early part of the day and she moved over at once and attacked him. At her onset, pop was plainly disturbed and fain would have fled but the dame had him between her and the window and he didn't have nerve enough to jump out. So there he sat and suffered while she unloaded upon him a world of recollections from a memory extending back to the time, probably, of Cleopatra or Zeus or somebody of her first time on earth. And I will own I was pleased, for pop was getting the just dues of he who wears his virtues upon his fingers and uses pomade for brains. He had started something which he couldn't finish as the poet hath so elegantly phrased it and he got no sympathy from yours truly. The queen who sat alongside me took a deep interest in the situation or the diamond, I was not sure which and expressed much regret at the untimely plight the latter was in. I told her to keep her seat and not worry—she had me and why want diamonds and handed her a few more bon mots of a similar nature, until she became good and ceased from worrying over the fate of the ring. As the train rumbled away in the night the aged spinster continued her tale and the lord of the pop eyes had to stand it together with her loving glances until reason was dethroned and with a wild shriek he sprang over Miss Sixty and was down the aisle and out into the night at some way station, leaving the sorrowing spinster behind bewailing his sudden flight. Then did little Bill give way to mirth, loud and unaccountable for I felt that I had my revenge and was repaid for the slight cast upon me by the contumacious maid. The queen said I was real bad to laugh at the dame's plight and gave me a real, sassy slap on the elbow but I didn't care. She had got hers and that was plenty for me.

By the way, the queen tried to make me say that a dirty-faced offspring of some people across the way, was "just too cute" but I refused flatly. She was presuming on her rights and I wouldn't stand it.
