He found the weather here more severe than it was at his home and was surprised that there was so much snow in evidence. The winter in the northwest was quite mild during the winter. Crops in that section have been very good the past year and the farmers have an abundance to enter the coming year with. Mr. and Mrs. Core will visit for a while in this city and later go to Murray where they will visit with Mr. Standish and wife.

MAKES HIMSELF PAIR OF SKIS

K. W. Savogren, Forman of Burlington Gang Fond of the Winter Sport.

Something quite novel and out of the ordinary was seen this morning by the Journal man who was invited by K. W. Savogren, foreman of the Burlington gang engaged in putting in the big sewer for the company here, to visit his car and examine a pair of Swedish snow skis which he had manufactured himself. Mr. Savogren is a native of Sweden and it is quite interesting to hear him talk of that country and its long and hard winters. In this country the winters as a rule are mild and pleasant and for that reason the native American does not appreciate the benefits to be derived from the use of the ski nor the sport which can be had with it. The ski itself as exemplified in the pair of Mr. Savogren, is a long narrow piece of wood turned up at one end with the other end tapering to a point. The ski is ten feet in length and three inches in width. Mr. Savogren states that the proper width should be three and one half inches but he was unable to secure a board of the right width which would answer his purpose and he had to make it narrower. In the middle of the ski there is a stirrup, being broad leather band, which fits over the shoe and which holds the ski to the foot. Ordinarily the ski is made of hard wood but this was not available here and Mr. Savogren used pine for that purpose. With these skis, on a man can slide down the steepest hills upon snow or ice, and attain a speed of startling proportions, so fast that most people who have never seen the sport imagine it impossible. The ski is also used for walking over deep snow protecting the walker from breaking through and becoming immersed in the fleecy bath. Mr. Savogren states that in Sweden where the snow gets to the depth of five, six and seven feet the ski is necessary for travel as otherwise many travelers would become hopelessly buried in the drifts and perhaps perish. But it is in sport that the ski shines to the greatest advantage. Mr. Savogren cites a case of a long hill in Sweden some two miles in length, where a great annual tournament is held at which the expert ski runners come from all over the country and compete for prizes. At the foot of this hill there is an artificial mound constructed which the runners dash up and then leap out into space. They sometimes leap one hundred feet through the air and alight upon their feet. Should one be unfortunate enough to miss his footing he must inevitably get a fall attended with more or less danger. To escape injury so far as possible, immense snow banks are constructed which the jumper will fall in if he misses his footing and which breaks the force of his fall. Mr. Savogren states the sensation of a ski run is something peculiarly delightful and exhilarating. It must also be borne in mind that the ski has a groove in the bottom of it to prevent it sliding sideways when running or sliding. It is the intention of Mr. Savogren and several of his men to try the ski upon the steep hills of the city should the snow stay on. Fifth street being regarded as a particularly inviting spot for the sport. Doubtless the exhibition will prove interesting and highly entertaining and it may lead to this sport being taken up in this city.

Mr. Larson Improving. The friends of L. G. Larson will be glad to learn that he is still getting along nicely and that he will be able to be home for the Christmas holidays. He writes that the janitor or engineer at the sanitarium where he is stopping the other day neglected to shovel coal with the consequent result that the patients suffered severely and proceeded to "bawl him out." Mr. Larson felt little of the ill effects and considered that a highly favorable sign. He is at Burlington Junction, Mo.

THE DRUGGISTS

Going Some.

Talk about Ak-Sar-Ben and State Fair crowds! There is nothing in them to compare with the crowd which went to Omaha this morning for the corn show and Christmas shopping. It is true that some of them went there on real business matters but the bulk of them were passengers to take in the corn show and see what Santa Claus had in the windows. The Burlington station at this point will certainly have to be enlarged to accommodate the crowds if this exodus is to continue. This morning the women's waiting room was so congested that standing room was at a premium and many were forced to stand outside on the platform. If that isn't going some, we don't know. Ye reporter endeavored to get the names of those who comprised the multitude but soon gave up as a bad job and retired from the field discomfited and defeated. In the presence of such an overwhelming array of feminine loveliness, he found that his pencil faltered and was weak and he only got down the names of about one-seventh part of them. The rest will have to be content with being merely mentioned as a part of the crowd.

To Raise Fine Cattle.

George Snyder and Ben Horning, two of the best breeders in this section, have concluded the purchase of a fine young shorthorn bull calf. They bought the animal at the sale held in South Omaha a few days ago, paying the sum of $260 all told for him and they are quite proud of their bargain. He will form the nucleus of a fine herd which these enterprising gentlemen are getting together and makes a big step forward in cattle breeding in this county. Mr. Snyder also invested in a fine short horn cow which he intends to use to the best advantage. Cass county needs more men in the cattle business like Messrs. Horning and Snyder.

No Improvement.

The condition of Mr. E. C. Sutphen, the aged gentleman hurt several days ago at the masonic home, is reported this afternoon as not at all favorable. He is still unconscious and is weaker. The attending physician does not hold out any hope for his recovery, his advanced age precluding his recovery almost. Hopes were entertained for a better condition but it has failed to materialize and the worst is feared.

Before Justice Archer this morning.

the trial of the case of Propst vs. Wagner, was taken up and some testimony adduced. The case is a suit over a cream separator which the defendants brought from the plaintiff and which they seek to show was worthless after having used it all summer. The hearing of the testimony will take some little time.
