

COMMENCES BIG AUCTION SALE

M. Fanger Preparing to Remove to Omaha

From Friday's Daily.

Today M. Fanger, the department store man commences his big auction sale which is to continue for several days or until the entire stock is disposed of. Mr. Fanger is closing up his business here preparatory to moving to Omaha where he will open a large department store on Douglas street next door to the Calumet restaurant. Mr. Fanger at this sale intends to dispose of everything in his store at prices which his customers can afford for themselves. This includes the stock of dry goods, cloaks, women's suits, hosiery, gloves and all articles of women wearing apparel, all men's furnishings, hats, caps, shoes, men's and boy's suits, underwear for both men and women, ties, sox, trunks, valises, suit cases and all the many lines which he has carried in stock here for years past. These things will be put up as called for by the patrons and they will sell for what the customers want to bid for them. This is a grand opportunity for obtaining excellent goods very cheap as the stock will have to be closed out regardless of cost or of the previous marked selling price.

The auction sale will open today and will be prosecuted every day until everything is gone or if the public does not care to clean up this stock here, it will be boxed up and removed. In any event Mr. Fanger states he intends to sell all this stock and when he opens in his new location have a new and fresh stock of goods. The public is invited to attend this sale and take advantage of the bargains which will be offered. A competent and accommodating auctioneer will be on hand to point out the merits of the articles and this part of the business will be very carefully looked after.

Mr. Fanger's determination to leave will be received with genuine regret among a great many Plattsmouth people. He has been a resident of this city for twenty years past, having started into business here without a cent of capital and having built up a splendid amount of business during his residence. Mr. Fanger has been an undoubtedly aid to the general business interests of the city. People had come here from many miles around to take advantage of his bargains which he had put on sale as trade winners and this resulted in a general increase of the business of the city and helped the other business men and merchants. His leaving takes away one of the city's best known men and one of the live wires of the community. He some time since came to the conclusion that the field here did not afford him an opportunity to expand as he wanted and for this reason he has been looking about for a location which would meet his requirements. Finding an available site in Omaha for a large store, he concluded to make the change and accordingly is disposing of his interests here. The store which he proposes to open will be a competitor of the large department stores of the city and those who are aware of his ability in business lines believe he will make a winner out of it.

Mr. Fanger has a very charming family and they have made many good friends in the city during their residence here. Their departure will be hailed with the deepest regret by all but they carry with them the best wishes and hopes for their future prosperity and success. It is the expectation of Mr. Fanger that he can complete the sale of his property and remove within a very few days, not exceeding a week or ten days at the outside.

Slowly Sinking.

Colonel H. C. McMaken this morning received word that his brother, Captain Andrew McMaken at Atchison, had suffered a relapse and was slowly sinking. For several days he had rallied and hopes were entertained that his splendid vitality might pull him through. His age, however, has militated against him and he could not continue on the upgrade as hoped for. Owing to the frequency with which Captain McMaken rallied from these sinking spells in the past, it is hoped he can continue to pick up and overcome this one now. The letters to Colonel McMaken do not hold out the greatest hopes however.

Mrs. E. R. Queen and Miss Etta Nickels of the Murray neighborhood, were in the city today and were business callers at the Journal office. Both are very estimable ladies and we were pleased to have them call.

The last day of my closing out sale of millinery will be the 18th of June. Mrs. Julia Dwyer.

The State Sunday School Convention.

A special from Beatrice, under date of June 9, says:—The state Sunday School convention, one of the most successful yet held by the state association, closed here this evening after a three days' session. The attendance was not as large as was expected owing to the inclement weather, but over five hundred delegates were registered. A parade was held this evening in which nearly one thousand men participated, two bands being in the procession, and large delegations being in from Fairbury, Wymore, Blue Springs and Lincoln, special trains bringing many from those towns.

At the business session this morning an effort was made to raise $10,000 for the Sunday School work in the state. Of the amount necessary, $6,000 was apportioned to the various counties, $2,500 was pledged and the remaining $1,500 can easily be secured, according to the officers of the association.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, G. G. Wallace, Omaha; vice president, E. J. Wightman, York, recording secretary, C. C. Wescott, Plattsmouth; treasurer, E. C. Babeck, Lincoln.

Department superintendents: Teacher training, Rev. J. M. Kersey, Omaha; adult, B. G. Dawson, Fairbury; intermediate, Mrs. W. E. McCloud, York; home, Mrs. Frank Root, Beaver City; pastor, Rev. R. A. Schnell, Hastings; missionary, Rev. F. G. Knauer, Nelson; temperance, Rev. J. D. M. Buckner, University Place; visitation, Rev. Mr. Clark, Lexington.

Among the division superintendents chosen was Rev. C. A. Burdick of Nehawka as one for the southeastern district. There was a great deal of routine business transacted also. Cass county was highly honored in the selection of C. C. Wescott of this city as recording secretary and Rev. C. A. Burdick of the Religious Field Glass.

A Warm Reception.

Attorney Charles L. Graves of Union was in the city this morning and while here paid the Journal office a pleasant call. Mr. Graves while in the city inadvertently strayed upon the reservation of Missouri Tribe No. 69, Improved Order of Red Men and was captured by Chief Black Hawk who intends to keep him prisoner until next Thursday night when the tribe will give him the choice of joining the tribe by adoption or burned at the stake. The prisoner was given to understand this morning by the sign language that he had to make up his mind at once and he signaled that he wanted to join. Hence the decree of adoption will be signed on next Thursday night and he will be christened Chief Hit-the-Ball in commemoration of his early base ball days. There promises to be a large attendance of warriors present at this meeting to adopt the auburn haired paleface. Mr. Graves had legal business in the city and returned at 10:25 this morning.

MORE OF THE KARTHS' TROUBLES

Both are Likely to Recover From Their Injuries.

The story of the shooting of Mrs. Melvin Karth by her husband and his subsequent attempt at suicide at Salt Lake, which appeared yesterday exclusively in the Journal, has aroused considerable interest in this city where the couple were quite well known and where they resided for almost a year. There was considerable speculation as to whether or not excessive drink—the cause given by Mrs. Karth—was really at the bottom of the trouble and later developments conclusively prove that her statement was not correct.

Last night it was ascertained that Karth and his wife were both still alive and that it was believed they would both survive their injuries. Their chances for recovery it was stated by the attending physicians on Friday morning were very fair and unless complications which were not looked for set in, indications were that they would both be able to be out of the hospital in a comparatively short time.

The investigation into the case of the tragedy by the police resulted in their conclusion that jealousy was at the bottom of the matter. Developments showed that Mrs. Karth had met a man named Marcus G. May, proprietor of the Teddy Bear Cleaning works, at Salt Lake, about one month ago and had fallen in love with him, transferring her affections from Karth to the new flame. This came to Karth's notice and he was roused to an insane rage. He at once took a layoff from his work with a butchering establishment in the city and started out to investigate the stories which had reached his ears. He had very little trouble apparently in finding corroborative evidence of his wife's faithlessness and made plans to kill both her and May.

With the latter end in view he called at May's home and told his wife that he intended to kill her husband. He told her of what he had found out and that after he had killed May he would kill Mrs. Karth. Mrs. May pleaded with him not to kill Mrs. Karth on account of the children of the family, but she admitted to the police she didn't ask any clemency for May and, as he had transferred his affections to Mrs. Karth, it didn't make much difference to her if he was shot. It was after this interview that Karth started out on his murderous expedition. He had been drinking all day the day before the tragedy and when he left home for his work, he had made up his mind to slay May and then return and kill his wife. He went up town but May had fled and he then came home and at first refused to talk to his wife. He afterwards commenced to accuse her of intimacy with May and began abusing her. He told her at this time that he intended to kill her. The little son of the couple, Paul, stood beside his father and heard the terrible words which the frenzied man poured out upon the woman. Quarrels between the couple were so frequent that the boy did not regard it as anything new and especially had this been the case since Karth had found out about May. Suddenly Karth drew a small revolver as told in yesterday's paper and opened fire with it. The woman was wounded as told in the paper yesterday, in the shoulder, the head and the hand. The bullet which struck her head knocked her down and the little son started to run toward her when Karth threatened him with the revolver, so he says, and he turned and tried to get out of the house. He found the door locked and on turning saw his father slash himself with the butcher knife and fall to the floor. In getting away from the crazed father, the boy stumbled over a chair and wrenched his ankle. The remainder of the story is identical with that printed yesterday in the Journal.

The story of the trouble which was told by Mrs. May, the wife of the faithless husband in the case, and which employs of May's cleaning establishment confirmed, was that May became acquainted with Mrs. Karth about one month ago. It seems that May was taken with the woman from the start and after they had talked matters over awhile, he offered her a position in the establishment as a clerk. Mrs. Karth seems to have been equally enamored of May and accepted. When she told Karth that she was going to work for May, an ugly row ensued and he protested vigorously. It did no good for the woman went to work just the same and then affairs reached such a stage that there was no question as to the relations of May and his clerk.

Mrs. May's story follows: "I used to look out of the window in my little home and see my husband caressing Mrs. Karth over in the cleaning works. When I spoke to him about it he would not answer. About two weeks ago he made a date with Mrs. Karth and the two were out until midnight. I think the husband of the woman found out about them that night for he came around to the cleaning works to make inquiries on the following day. He also asked me what I thought about the case, and I gave him my mind just as I knew the situation to be. This revelation seemed to break Karth's heart. He wanted me for telling him and went home very despondent."

Then followed the tragedy, one which it was sought to blame upon liquor but which plainly is caused by the faithlessness of the woman in the case.

It has been learned in connection with the case that Karth's name was Melvin and that he and his wife had lived around over eastern Nebraska for many years, he being an expert butcher and having worked in shops in the larger towns throughout the state. The couple had had a stormy and tempestuous married life and the woman had frequently been the cause of talk. Karth himself was not rated very high personally in most of the towns either. The couple resided for some little time at Fremont where he was employed during the summer of 1906. He was considered an excellent butcher by the firms in that place, although the papers state his personality was never above par. Mrs. Karth's actions there were not such as became a wife and mother either. They finally quarreled while there and Mrs. Karth left him and went to Omaha. Karth then sold out his household goods and also took his departure. It was some little time after this when they came to this city and made a home again. Their subsequent life and troubles here were told in yesterday's Journal.

Funeral This Afternoon.

The funeral of the late William F. Leuchtweis took place this afternoon from his late residence, the services being conducted by the Rev. W. L. Austin. There was quite a large attendance of sorrowing friends of the young man, he having lived in this vicinity all his life and being very well known. There were a large number of floral offerings from those of his friends who could not be present at the obsequies. The services in addition to Rev. Austin's sermon consisted of appropriate music, several of the sacred songs so familiar in life were rendered. Rev. Austin's sermon was an able and eloquent tribute to the many excellent traits of the departed and bore upon his fortitude in the long trial and suffering which was his lot through disease. The sermon brought tears to the eyes of many of those who heard it. Following the sermon, the remains of the excellent and worthy young man were laid at rest in Oak Hill cemetery, the last rites being performed by old friends and neighbors who had known him since childhood and whose grief at his death was that of the loss of a son or brother.

Some Fish.

Lee Bates and Elias Kildow this morning had an exciting time with a miniature whale which they snared upon a line in the Platte. The gentlemen had set several lines on the river yesterday and this morning went out to run them. They also had a pole line and after baiting that hook they cast it into the river and started to run the set lines. Hardly had they done this when they observed a great commotion in the waters and Bates yelled at Kildow to seize the pole as there surely was some whale on it. This he did but he found that he could not handle the line and the fish by himself and he called for help. Bates rushed to his assistance and they slowly towed the whale to shore. As soon as the snout of the monster appeared above the surface the men decided upon capturing it. Bates slid down the bank into the waters and soon a terrific hand to hand combat ensued between the monster and the man. Bates is some man though and he finally secured a strangle hold on the fish and chocked it into insensibility. He then hurled it out on the bank where it was found to be a channel cat of nine pounds in weight. It is a fine fish and well worth the trouble it cost to get it.

Hose Shower.

The pleasant home of Mrs. W. H. Mason was the scene of a hose shower last evening in honor of Miss Ella M. Sattler, whose marriage to Mr. Jesse Warga will occur on next Wednesday. For the occasion the charming rooms of the Mason home had been handsomely decorated, a color scheme of pink and white being carried out with a generous use of flowers and streamers and arranged in a wedding bell with white streamers.

The time was most delightfully spent in various amusements, such as social conversation, games and the like, which were most thoroughly enjoyed. During the evening a mock wedding was held which occasioned considerable merriment and in which Ella Sattler was the bride, Mrs. Olga Crowskary groom, Anna Warga and Hattie Hofmann, bridesmaids, Pearl Mumm best man, Olga Sattler and Ferris York, ushers; and Amanda Sattler, ring bearer, she carrying the ring in a huge peony. Another pleasing feature of the evening was a dainty luncheon which was served at an appropriate hour. The bride received hose of all shapes, sizes and colors and which will be constant reminders of the splendid entertainment of last evening.

Just prior to the close of this most enjoyable entertainment, the bride cut a miniature cake and presented the guests with a small piece of same in a white box tied with white satin ribbons.

Those who participated in this delightful affair were Mesdames Jacob Mason, John Lutz, Ed. Mason, J. P. Sattler, Olga Crowskary; Misses Anna Kopia, Anna Warga, Hattie Hofmann, Pearl and Rose Mumm, Helen and Katherine Lutz, Ferris York, Olga and Amanda Sattler.

W. H. Heil, proprietor of Pleasant View farm, drove in this morning from his home, bringing with him Mrs. Heil and Miss Lizzie Heil, who were passengers on the morning Burlington train for Omaha, where they will spend the day, while Mr. Heil remains in this city to look after business matters.
