

"Clean Up" Sale of Fine Clothing!

Copyright Hart Schaffner & Marx

WITH such goods as we sell, a "clean up" sale means something to you—something worth while. It isn't simply that you have a chance at this season of the year to buy clothes for less money than is usually asked and paid for them; but you have a chance to buy unusually good clothes at less than usual.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX clothes are always a good bargain—there's no special reason why we should ever sell these clothes at less than the regular prices; they're always worth the money. But we have to buy for each season a certain margin of surplus. You'd think it was a queer store that was sold up clean at the end of the season.

So while the new goods for Spring are now about to arrive we're going to make a place for them by cleaning up the Fall and Winter stock. The way we shall do it is by quoting prices that will do it.

OPENING OF WATERMAN OPERA HOUSE 25 YEARS AGO

We have in our possession a copy of the program printed for the opening of the Waterman opera house twenty-five years ago. The date of the program is January 13, 1885, and "The Galley Slave," under the management of Bartley Campbell, was the opening play. The program is surrounded by advertising cards from Plattsmouth business men, nineteen in number, and strange to say, there are but three of those business men now in this city—E. G. Dovey & Son, Sherwood & Son and Dr. C. A. Marshall. The opera house opened on January 13, 1885, was burned down along in the early nineties, and the present Waterman block, in which the Journal is located, was erected on the site. The programs for all the shows were then printed in the Daily Journal office, as they are now printed in the Evening Journal office for the Parmele theatre. The Journal was then published by Mr. Chas. S. Sherman, now a resident of Bonanza, Oregon. We also note that the next attraction was Fay Templeton, January 28, 1885. John Waterman, still a resident of the city, and in the lumber and coal business, erected the building, and he and his son were proprietors of the Opera House, while J. P. Young was manager. It fully illustrates the many changes that take place in a town in a quarter of a century, and how people come and go. A few of those doing business in Plattsmouth at that time have passed over to the Great Beyond, while others are living in other parts of the country. While this play house could not be compared with the Parmele theatre of today, it was considered one of the finest in the state at that time and many of the big attractions of that date visited Plattsmouth. The Journal is under obligation to its friend, Mr. Phil. Harrison, for a copy of this program, who has preserved it these long years.

(Note: Since the above was put in type Mr. Waterman informs us that Fay Templeton's first visit to Plattsmouth was on the occasion of opening the Opera House, and that it was in 1882, and that he paid her $500 for her appearance on that occasion. She was here again three years later.)

STUDY OF AGRICULTURE IN THE NEBRASKA PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Growth of the Study of Agriculture Has Been Wonderful in the Last Three Years—Prizes for the Best Results.

The growth of the sentiment for pursuing the study of agriculture in the public schools during the past three years has been phenomenal. The splendid achievements of scientific farming has made such an impression on the inhabitants of the agricultural west that agriculture has been prescribed as one of the studies upon which teachers are required to take an examination before a certificate to teach will be issued.

A part of the sentiment bringing about these results has been caused by the agricultural bureau at Washington, which three years ago issued a bulletin entitled "Exercise in Elementary Agriculture—Plant Production," issued primarily for the use of the teachers of the public schools. The demand grew so heavy, that the fourth edition of the bulletin was issued, aggregating 22,000 copies. Nebraska has not lagged in this matter and the legislature some time ago enacted a law requiring the study to be taught in the rural districts. Children of the 7th and 8th grades are required to make investigations of different sorts of soils, and make experiments with the different grain producing plants, they are taught how the plant makes its growth by the absorption of moisture, using tin cans with holes in the bottom filled with garden soil. They are also taught how the roots absorb moisture making the proper experiments under the guidance of the teacher, with such apparatus as can be procured, sometimes at their homes, and sometimes proved by the school board. A complete outfit for the experiments required for a course in agriculture will not cost over $7.00 or $8.00.

The subject of seed selection and the importance of planting pure seeds is thoroughly gone into, and the boys and girls are taught to make seed tests to ascertain whether the seed is good before planting. In some sections of the country associations have been formed among the agriculturalists and prizes offered for the best results in the way of crop production, pupils of the public schools between the ages of 11 and 16 allowed to participate in such contests. In Illinois and some sections of the south results from these contests have been surprising.

At the agricultural school at the Nebraska State farm similar methods have been employed to bring out the efforts of the farmer boys of Nebraska. There ought to be some organization in Cass county to promote the interests of the public school students in the subject of agriculture. Some of the retired farmers, who still own farm lands should feel interest enough in the cause to contribute to a fund for payment of prizes to the three best results in growing an acre of corn, wheat or alfalfa, or any of the farm products. Only the public school children should be allowed to participate in the contest. The result in increasing the production of the farm lands in Cass county would be amazing, and add to the value of the land.

COMMITTED TO THE FEEBLE-MINDED INSTITUTE

A hearing was had before Judge Beeson this morning on a petition filed by the county attorney on behalf of the county commissioners praying that Roy Anton, a seven-year-old orphan be committed to the institute for the feeble-minded at Beatrice. The court upon hearing the evidence granted the petition and made the proper order. The boy will not be taken to Beatrice until the consent of Superintendent G. L. Roe is obtained, as the law gives the superintendent of the institution a discretion as to whom he will receive. There are only one hundred and twenty wards in the institution, and there are one hundred and eight applications for places at the institution.

Miss Pearl Mumm Gets Clock.

The handsome hall clock given away by John Crabill on a drawing of numbers on tickets given out with every dollar's worth of goods or every dollar paid on account during the month of December, was drawn by Miss Pearl Mumm, who held the lucky number, 2108.

The drawing was held Saturday afternoon and was fairly conducted. Little Miss Emma Richardson being blindfolded, the numbers were placed in a box and drawn out by her. The clock was a fine one and Miss Mumm is to be congratulated on her good luck.
