VALEDICTORY.

Old Year, thy cup of destined Time Is broken and a piece, Thy feast ends the midnight chime Thy dance of glory ceases.
Thy dawns and eves fluttered past, Thy last stars gem the sky, And lo! the faithful moon—the last—Goodby, Old Year, goodby.

Thy snows were purer than the snows That crown the Alps with glory Thy roses sweeter than the rose Of olden song and story.
Alas, thy gay pageantry Of days and nights should die.
The bloom has left the rose and thee, Goodby, Old Year, goodby.

Oh, linger yet, thou canst not part The golden ties that bind thee, A strand of love to every heart, Has fastened and entwined thee.
Good fellowship, occasions dear, A dream we builded high A look, a smile, perhaps a tear—Goodby, Old Year, goodby.

Ah, years will bloom and fade away,
And be forgot in waning, But thou shalt still be yesterday To all the years remaining.
But yesterday, so far withdrawn, Yet to the heart so nigh, Alas the chimera chanting "Gone"
Goodby, Old Year, goodby.

Don't write it 1910 any more—1911, remember.

Doctor Wiley's years of research on the subject of pure foods seem to have resulted in a verdict in favor of home cooking.

The Old Year is drawing to a close amidst numerous appalling disasters and great loss of life.

Plattsmouth can do better in 1911 than she did in 1910, if we have less kickers among our people, and we all get down to business.

Two Christmases and two New Years within a week seem to be almost too much of a most admirable thing.

There seems to be only one remote chance for ever getting rid of the long hat pins, and that is to have sunbonnets become all the style.

If you want to quit drinking, smoking and chewing, do it now.
But for the good it will do you and your parents, young man, quit the cigaret habit.

Of all the states Rhode Island has the densest population—508 to the square mile. No wonder the Rhode Islanders are stand-patters; they cannot progress much without getting out of the state.

It is feared Woodrow Wilson is going to be as poor a politician as Roosevelt or Hughes. With all his educational advantages Mr. Wilson has never learned the science of whispering.

There will be an effort put forth by the Lincoln people to have an appropriation made of several hundred thousand dollars to have the state capital building repaired and fixed up so that it will do for several years. Why not have the capital removed now, and save this money for an entire new capital building? Let's settle this capital removal question as soon as possible and get over with it. If it's bound to come let it come

Hon. John Kuhl, of Cedar county, seems to be in the lead for speaker of the house, and it is conceded he will be the choice of the democratic caucus. Mr. Kuhl will prove "the right man in the right place."

Speaking of the commission form of government, do you think it would prove better than the present manner of doing business? People should thoroughly investigate the commission form of government before making the leap.

The lobbyists are getting ready to get in their work on appropriations.
The people will stand for the necessary amounts, but the legislature has no authority to throw away the people's money in order to please a few hangers on in Lincoln.

There are many who are disposed to believe that Poulson and his crew will have very little influence in his cranky efforts with the new legislature. Even those members who are favorable to county option have very little use for the imported Mr. Poulson. He is simply a disturber, that's all.

Congress will increase its membership through the reapportionment.
Eleven of the sixteen members of the house census committee hail from states that must lose some members if the membership were decreased, and none of them felt like sawing off the limb on which he was sitting.—

The holidays are now over. The Journal hopes its readers have had a good time during this week of comparative leisure with many of them.
We hope their wives, children and sweethearts have all been suitably remembered that Christmas comes but once a year. That they have sent, as far as possible, greetings to their intimate friends and associates; and that they have all done their part toward making everybody happy during the Christmas holidays. The old year has been quite prosperous and happy to many, while death has cast sorrow over a few by the passing of dear friends and relatives. But such is life. May the bright wings of love hover over all of us during the new year, and may we all possess more of that spirit of human kindness than heretofore, and may everybody enjoy a prosperous and happy new year, is the prayer of the Journal.

THE FACTOR OF THE WEST.

Presidential speculation that does not take into account the West as the deciding factor is not sound. If the next president is a republican he will have to get practically the solid vote of the West to win. If he is a democrat he will need the West to supplement the vote of the South and possibly one or two Eastern states.

A republican who could carry the West could also win in the regular republican states in the East, but it is quite conceivable that a republican might carry practically the solid East and lose nearly the solid West.

A democrat who could win a number of western states would have the best chance to win in the doubtful Eastern states.

Therefore, the deciding factor in the next presidential election will be the West, more particularly those states in which the progressive spirit is strong.

Important changes may take place in the prestige of the respective presidential possibilities between now and the nominating year, and possibilities not now considered may become conspicuous. It is too early to make forecasts as to men.

But the progressive movement will continue to grow; its changes will be for the better; it will be stronger and more general in 1912 than it is now; and the next president will be a progressive, be he democrat or republican or the leader of a new party.

And the section in which this qualification will be insisted to the deciding point is the West.—Kansas City Star.

BEWILDERED PRESIDENTS.

The Wall Street Journal tells the story of a bewildered railroad president and solicits the sympathy of the world for him in his troubles. This president says that his road was created from a trail in the wilderness to a profitable and well managed property. He is now extending his road in new territory, at the urgent desire of the inhabitants of that territory; while, so far as his completed road is concerned, nothing he can do seems to please the shippers, who practically owe their existence to the railroad.

The Journal confesses that there is no hope of remedying the total depravity of these shippers and declares that: "Our railroads, if anything, are over regulated. This is no answer to discontent. What answer could the lamb downstream make to the wolf above who charged him with fouling the water?"

The case of the president is sad indeed, but does not his sadness come from putting, as it were, the cart before the horse. He says the shippers practically owe their existence to the railroad. Does not the road owe its existence to the shippers? That old trail in the wilderness would be there yet if these shippers had not gone in there and suffered hardship and toil in turning the wilderness into fertile fields.

In another paper on a different date comes another story concerning a railroad, 200 miles long. The general officers of this road mingled with the people and became their friends. They insisted that all their employees should be polite and courteous. One of the general officers took an interest in dairy farmers along the line, brought an expert to meet them at the farmers' institutes and in conjunction with the farmers made arrangements to handle their milk more expeditiously. All the people along the line knew the president and when the Morgan group undertook to capture the road the farmers along the line and the business men in the towns went into the market and bought enough stock to control it and keep it in the hands of their old president. That president was also somewhat bewildered, but he is a very happy and contented president.

The New Year was ushered in with a regular old-fashioned Nebraska blizzard.

A reward should be offered for the fellow who prophesied that this would be a mild winter.

Be sure and write it 1911. Remember old 1910 has gone glimmering among the things that were.

Speaking of commission government, it would be best to post ourselves thoroughly on the matter before acting.

Did you turn over that new leaf?
If you did, remember at what page you marked it.

The house plants suffered Sunday night, and there is some thoughts of "cuss" words by some of the women folks, if not proclaimed.

The fellow who protests that Christmas has become "a regular hold-up," evidently received a pair of embroidered suspenders.

We all know that resolutions are like pie crust, easily broken, but we hope, especially, that those young men who resolved to quit the cigarette habit, will hold fast.

The proposition to spend $495,- 000 improving Salt river has received the approval of President Taft. With an eye to his own comfort in sailing two years hence, no doubt.

Despite the best efforts of the Washington correspondents, the public will at least wait twelve months before becoming tremendously excited as to who shall be nominated for president.

The United States boasts of 100,- 000 000 population, including the Philippines and Porto Rico. But that is a good deal like a man boasting of his increased weight because he has acquired a ten-pound tumor.

Plattsmouth is very fortunate in securing Prof. N. C. Abbott as superintendent of the city schools. He is truly an up-to-date educator and not only that, our people will find that Mr. and Mrs. Abbott will prove quite an addition to the social circles as they are both most excellent people and very accomplished.

Can you tell us why the cattle of Nebraska have decreased over 500,- 000 head in the past two years? If so, come to the meeting of Organized Agriculture at Lincoln, January 16th to 20th, 1911, and let Nebraska farmers be ready to take advantage of the high prices of the future which must come from the decreased output.

Ex-Senator James Smith, of New Jersey, has not improved his standing in the estimation of the democratic party by his views on questions of public policy, nor his general standing in the country by his attack on Dr. Wilson. He who loses his temper loses ground before witnesses.

These are lean and hungry days for the little birds unless thoughtful people provide for them. A few crumbs from your table, thrown out over the snow, will furnish a good meal for many birds and the eagerness with which they attack the food will amply repay you for the trouble.
Have you tried it?

The parcels post, if ever adopted, will prove the greatest detriment to home merchants that ever happened in this country. The instigators of this movement are the hirelings of such large department stores as Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Montgomery Ward. The western senator or congressman who votes for such a measure should never be returned, and will not be.

The farmers of Nebraska figure they are twenty-five million bushels of corn ahead this fall because they planted tested seed corn instead of depending upon the cribbed corn as in former years. It does not cost a penny more to bring a fifty bushels to the acre field up to picking time, than it does to bring a fifteen bushel crop up to that point. If you want to save money on corn picking plant bad seed.

Under the state law no money shall be paid to a school teacher who is not legally qualified to teach. The state superintendent and the city of Hastings have looked this matter up.
About $3,000 is due the Hastings district from the state under the present apportionment, but because of some trouble between the board and the state department of education the fund will be held temporarily until the differences are adjusted. Some of the teachers in Hastings have not credentials signed by the board which has power to do so.

Aldrich, the new governor, objects to an inaugural ball. It will be remembered that he told the people in the home of his youth, back in Ohio, how he was going to reform the state of Nebraska, and show to the people that he "was some governor." And he proposes to start in by casting aside this custom. Aldrich is religious, you know, only when there is a horse trade in sight, or a horse race going off. He may do well enough as governor, but if he makes as good a governor as Mr. Shallenberger, he will have to trot some.
"Shelly" is small in stature, but oh, my, he is big in intellect.

During the past year the railroads of the United States have greatly increased their use of oil as fuel. It is stated that the results of the introduction of fuel oil in the United States navy has also proven satisfactory and steamship companies are equipping their vessels with oil burning plants. Two of the navy's battleships—the North Dakota and the Delaware—have been equipped with oil burning plants and battleships now being constructed are to be equipped for the use of oil as an auxiliary to coal. Fifteen destroyers will also be so equipped. Similar experiments are being made in a number of European countries and the prospects are exceedingly bright for a vast increase in the consumption of low grade oil within the next few years.

FIGHT PARCELS POST.

Every newspaper publisher should lend all possible assistance in the campaign started by the American League of Associations against the proposed establishment of local rural parcels post service throughout the country.

The fight of the association is directed chiefly against the retail mail order houses, the leading advocates of the parcels post system. Such a system would do inestimable damage to the country merchant and to save this class from elimination by preventing, if possible, will be the chief aim of the organization. The association has spread broadcast a petition which shows how the small towns would be practically wiped out by the failure of the small merchants, which would have a very direct effect upon publishers. The petition is as follows:

"To the senate and house of representatives of the United States:

"The undersigned respectfully protest against the enactment by congress of any legislation for the establishment of a local rural parcels post service on the rural delivery routes for the following reasons:

"It would foster the development of an enormous trust, create an oppressive monopoly, destroy the prosperity of all country towns, ruin thousands and tens of thousands of jobbers and country merchants, drain the rural communities of their capital and population, aggravate the evils of centralized wealth and congest cities, and benefit no one but the great retail catalogue mail order houses in the big cities and the express companies.

"In every country town, catalogue agents of mail order concerns would establish themselves. They would need no store, pay no rent, employ no clerks, require no credit and give none, and carry no stock. Their whole time would be devoted to solliciting orders from catalogues. The merchandise would be shipped to them by express or freight from the retail mail order houses in the large cities. When received it would be deposited in the local post office and the packages delivered by the rural carriers.

"The rural free delivery wagon inaugurated for the educational advancement of the people, would thus be subverted from its original purpose, and would become a mere instrument or agency in the hands of the great retail mail order catalogue houses for the development of the most oppressive trust that human ingenuity could devise—the mail order trust—a trust that would eventually control all sources of supply and all channels of distribution for everything the people must eat, wear and use in their daily lives.

"No one but the retail mail order catalogue houses, dealing in all classes of merchandise, could maintain a local catalogue agent and solicitor in a town. They would thus be given a monopoly of the commercial advantages of this new system of merchandise delivery by the mail carriers on the rural routes. The department stores in the big cities would absorb the trade of the merchants in suburban towns and villages and would be provided with a daily package delivery system in those places through the rural carriers. They would ship the packages to the local postoffice in the suburban town or village by express and thus largely increase the business of the express companies. All packages sent from any other postoffice to the postoffice where the rural route initiated from which delivery was to be made would have to be sent to that postoffice by express. This would further increase the profits of the express companies from the system. No competition with express rates would be created.

"The scheme for a local rural parcels post begins where competition with the express companies ends. It loads all the competition on to the backs of the country merchants and the retail tradesmen in the suburban towns and villages.

"A local rural parcels post would heavily increase the postal deficit.
All rural carriers who are now equipped only for the rapid delivery of mail would have to be equipped with facilities for carrying freight and merchandise in large quantities."

Space is left at the bottom of the petition for signatures.

The enactment of the proposed measure would prove injurious to the small merchant in the country town, would affect the distributor, and concentrate business in the big cities.

If the bill is passed the rural free delivery, which was inaugurated for the educational advancement of the people, would become a great feeder for the express companies. The system would be subverted from its original purpose and become a sure instrument or agency in the hands of the great retail catalogue mail order houses for the development of the most oppressive trust human ingenuity could devise—the mail order trust.

We are greatly pleased to know that Hon. John Kuhl, of Cedar county has been chosen speaker of the house of representatives. There was no contest, he receiving the caucus nomination unanimously. Mr. Kuhl is one of the brightest young men in Nebraska, and he will make a speaker of which the democrats can justly feel proud. He will prove fair and impartial in his deliberations and rulings, and the Journal prophesies that when the present legislature adjourns, it will do so with the credit of having had one of the most popular speakers that ever presided over a house of representatives in Nebraska.

Commissioner L. D. Switzer arrived
