A FINE TIME AT G. A. R. HALL

In Honor of the Forty-Sixth Anniversary of Lee's Surrender

The members of McConkie Post, Grand Army of the Republic, celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of the surrender of General Lee, commander-in-chief of the Confederate army, at their barracks in this city last Saturday evening.

A splendid program had been prepared, consisting of addresses, readings and music, which, with the elaborate supper served, combined to make the occasion one of the most enjoyable ever held in the city. The women of the Relief Corps were present and served the banquet, the menu including every conceivable dish to tempt the appetite, including hot beans and hot coffee.

The program was taken up after the transaction of the usual routine business of the post. An address by Hon. R. B. Windham on the "Far-Reaching Effects of the Surrender of Lee," was given. Mr. Windham made a strong and stirring speech on the wonderful things which have been accomplished by this government and its people during the past forty-six years. Mr. Windham was at the front when the event took place and he has been a leading character in the development of the country since the close of the war, and he was especially well equipped to discuss the topic assigned him, and his address received many favorable comments from those present.

A reading which was much enjoyed by the company was one given by Miss Maude Kuhney, and was of Benedict Arnold's bravery before he became a traitor. Miss Stenner sang a very beautiful solo, which was encored.

One of the pleasant features of the evening was the eloquent address of Mrs. J. E. Vandercook, who spoke on the subject of "Patriotism." Mrs. Vandercook is a very talented lady and her speech was listened to with the greatest of interest by old and young alike. Mrs. Vandercook's address was followed by the solo, "Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground," sang by Miss Helen Chapman. Miss Helen Windham gave a reading which was well received.

HAVE HAD SAFETY DEPOSIT VAULTS FOR SEVERAL YEARS

President C. C. Parmele, in conversation with a Journal reporter this forenoon, says the electrical burglar alarm is a great protection to a bank, and that his bank has used one for the past several years. In fact, the Bank of Cass County was the first bank in Nebraska to put this particular kind in a bank. His bank also has the steel lined safety deposit vault and boxes, with over 200 of the safety deposit boxes in use by customers of the bank. The Bank of Cass County has had safety deposit boxes for rent for several years.

LEGISLATURE TO ADJOURN TODAY

House and Senate Agree to General Maintenance Bill.

COMPROMISE AT LAST REACHED

Fund for New Steel Grandstand at Fair Grounds Is Cut to Fifteen Thousand and the University Fund From $300,000 to $170,000.

Lincoln, April 10.—The Thirty-second Nebraska legislature will adjourn today. All the bills which have been going through the engrossing process have been signed in the presence of the house and ready to go to the governor. The big appropriation bill for general maintenance was finally reported out of the conference committee. The house and senate agreed to the changes in it. The compromise was between the agricultural men, who wanted money for the state fair, and the university men, who wanted $300,000 for the state university.

The $100,000 for the fair grounds, which was to have been expended for a new steel grandstand, was cut to $15,000, which will be used for general repairs and the university fund to $170,000. The money for the university will be divided equally between the agricultural school and the city campus. An item of $40,000 for the Beatrice institute for feeble minded, which was put into the bill by the senate at the urging of Senator Jansen, was the only large amount cut from the bill. As the bills were finally passed the total appropriation for the maintenance of all state institutions, excepting the university, was $2,684,310, a slightly smaller amount than was expected when the members were in the midst of adding items to it ad libitum.

The senate reconsidered the postponed Prince bill for a nonpartisan board to control all state institutions, excepting educational ones, changed it to agree with the Matrau bill providing for an appointive body, and then passed it.

CHANGES IN THE GAME LAW

The Law Pretty Much the Same as Originally Prepared by Dan Geilus

The Lincoln Journal says that Representative Metzger of Cass county, the introducer of bills amending the game laws, will leave for home today with the satisfaction of knowing that nearly every bill he introduced was passed by both houses. Senator Banning of Cass county assisted in passing the bills through the senate. The bills passed, if they are all signed by the governor, will enforce every recommendation of former Chief Game Warden Dan Geilus, with one exception, his recommendation that county clerks receive a fee of 10 cents for issuing game licenses. Many members of the legislature contend that game laws are merely for the benefit of city and town hunters or gun club members who take a vacation occasionally and go to the plains or the streams and lakes to hunt and fish. The lovers of this sport generally assert that they are the people who pay for the preservation of the game of the state and that unless they did this there would be no game today in Nebraska. They contend that everyone, farmers, ranchmen and all who hunt or fish, should pay their mite toward what they call "conservation of game."

This was the argument used by Banning of Cass in the senate. On this theory that the fish and game department of the state should be made self sustaining the present license law is changed by a bill passed by the legislature. At present a license need be taken out only when one goes outside the county of his residence to hunt or fish. The legislature passed a bill to require every person who hunts to pay an annual fee of $1, except boys under 18, when accompanied by parents or guardian. Boys under 18 or female persons may fish without a license.

The beginning of the open season for ducks was changed from September 15 to September 1. A provision extending the season from April 5 which is now the end of the open season, to April 15, for the killing of blue winged teal, was defeated. The beginning of the open season for prairie chickens was changed from October 1 to September 1, and will close as formerly, November 30, but the limit of a kill is reduced to ten birds or chickens.

An open season for quail, from November 1 to November 15, was agreed to by the legislature, ten quail being the limit.

Snipe may be killed, according to a bill passed, from September 1 to May 1. An open season for doves, from July 15 to August 31, is provided for.

The season for black bass is to open April 1 and close June 1.

Permits for the killing of beaver may be issued by the game warden for the killing of the animals on one's own land when they are doing damage.

The sum of $5,000 was given for the purchase of game birds.

The legislature gave Superintendent W. J. O'Brien of the state fisheries a boost by raising his salary from $1,200 to $1,500 a year and appropriated $3,500 for seining overflow ponds and transplanting fish in waters where they will thrive.

EVANGELIST LEWIS AND ASSISTANTS BID FAREWELL TO PLATTSMOUTH

On the Whole the Meetings Have Proven a Success, and the Church People and Revivalists Very Well Satisfied.

The series of revival meetings which have been going on at the M. E. church for the past four weeks came to a close last night. As a result of the good work done by Farmer Lewis and his able assistants, between 45 and 50 persons have signified their resolve to live the Christian life. Eighteen of these have already united with the church and another class will be received on Sunday, April 23. The membership of the church is well pleased with the results and it is believed that much good will yet result from the vigorous preaching of the evangelist in addition to that which can be seen. The church is convinced that Rev. Lewis and his helpers are thorough Christian gentlemen who have done faithful, conscientious service for the Master.

The services yesterday were well attended, and although Rev. Lewis came from a sick bed to the pulpit in the morning, and against the advice of his physicians, yet he preached a very strong and effective discourse. He paid a high tribute to Dr. T. P. Livingston, both as a physician and gentleman of moral worth, saying that his association with the doctor would be one of the bright places in his memory of Plattsmouth.

Before Rev. Lewis began his morning discourse and before he entered the room, Rev. Austin had assumed charge of the meeting for a short time, stating that the evangelist and his helpers had come to Plattsmouth without any guarantee except their expense, and that nothing had been said by any of them about their pay, but that he thought the laborer was worthy of his hire, and he was going to give the church an opportunity to respond in a free-will offering, which was taken before Rev. Lewis came in. The offering amounted to $225, which, with the collection in the evening, would amount to $250. Rev. Lewis stated in the evening that if anyone had given toward this fund who ought not to have done so, or had paid more than they should have done and the offering was not entirely a free-will offering, he wanted the committee to repay the person who had thus contributed.

The morning discourse was addressed to the doing of little things, the attention of the Christian to the smaller details, such as reading the scripture and frequent prayer and attending the services of the church, and based upon the scripture: "He that is faithful in that which is least is also faithful in much." He related how Moody had made a rule to each day speak to someone about their soul, but on one busy day he had retired to his bed vexed with the toils of the day, when it came to his mind that he had not spoken to one that day. Moody arose, dressed himself, went into the street, found a drunken man leaning against a lamp post, took him to a place where he could sober up, made an appointment to see him when sober, and brought the man to the Savior by his attention to the little things.

The afternoon meeting for men was well attended. Here the evangelist spoke of the evils of the open saloon, having for his subject, "What a Man Soweth That Shall He Also Reap." He said that he, a farmer, did not need to come from Ohio to tell Nebraska farmers that if they sowed wheat they would get wheat, and a basketful would bring a wagonload in the harvest. The same law applied to a sin sowed; it would yield sin at the harvest and the increase would be as great in this line as in the physical world.

At the evening service Rev. Lewis spoke to the new converts on the subject of the "Risen Christ." At this service Rev. Lewis took occasion to say that he had enjoyed his four weeks' stay in Plattsmouth, and that he had found many earnest, faithful Christians here, and he had also found a great many who needed "fixing." He urged upon the beginners, as well as the older ones in the faith, the necessity of being always at the Christian work, and to work without discouragement. He pictured his home-coming today and said he expected a more glorious one in the future when he saw the great white throne.

At the close of the service in the evening an invitation was given and three or four went to the altar. Rev. Lewis departed for Ashland, Ohio, accompanied by Mr. Holmes, while Mr. Sutherland left for his home in Michigan, departing on the midnight Burlington train.

PAINTING AT NEBRASKA CITY.

Frank Gobelman returned home from Nebraska City last Saturday evening, where he had been for the past few days doing some sign painting. He tells us that he closed the contract with the baseball association for the painting of the fence around the ball park, which will take him and his staff of workmen several days to complete. Nebraska City people know a good painter when they have had the experience, and they have sure had it with Frank Gobelman's work.

Mrs. Homer McKay and her daughter, Minnie Pickard, arrived today from Havelock, where Mrs. McKay went last week to attend the funeral of her son-in-law, Mr. Pickard.

Robert Propst of Mynard was in the city Saturday.
