

ALEX HUNTER NOW RESTS IN A CELL IN THE MILLS COUNTY JAIL

Eluded the Mills County Officers Who Went After Him Last Friday, By Making His Get-Away While They Were Taking Wrong Man to the Train—He is Now Safe in the Toils.

Colonel H. C. McMaken returned from Clarinda this morning, where he has been since Monday looking after the public works contract his firm has there. Colonel McMaken says that the Mills county officers succeeded in capturing Alex Hunter (who is charged with having murdered John Wagner on the night of October 14, and placing his body under a Burlington trestle in Mills county, Iowa), about fifteen miles south of Clarinda.

Hunter fled last Friday afternoon when the sheriff and his deputy went to Clarinda for him, and although the officers could have laid hands on him had they recognized him, he covered the fifteen miles and almost reached the Missouri line before being overtaken.

The Mills county officers cannot be commended for a great amount of skill in either detecting a criminal or securing one after it is determined that a crime has been committed. Had a coroner's inquest been called when Wagner's body was first discovered at the curve bridge and effort put forth to locate the murderer, evidence which is said to have been in existence and which has since disappeared, could have been secured. Jake Miller, the fisherman who found Wagner's body, informed the officers who first viewed the body that the circumstances pointed to foul play. When Miller first arrived on the scene, while out hunting that Sunday morning, Wagner's body was lying on its face and the hat was some distance away. When the train crew arrived the body was turned over and Miller placed the hat over the dead man's face and placed some stones on the rim to prevent the wind from blowing it off.

A jury of Mills county citizens should have been called before the body was removed and all of the circumstances of the mysterious death of Wagner gone into while facts were easily recalled by those who last saw the deceased and his companions. If Hunter is the guilty man we hope the Mills county courts will punish him.

In County Court.

From Wednesday's Daily. In the county court today administration was granted in the estate of Fred Panka, deceased, an aged German farmer, who died in the vicinity of Louisville some months ago.

The contest over the instrument propounded as the will of Thomas Slagle was commenced this morning, one witness, Mrs. Amen of Lincoln, testified, when a motion for continuance was filed by the daughters of the deceased, supported by an affidavit setting up that A. Slagle, of unknown post-office address in the state of Washington, was a material witness to show the manner in which execution of the will was procured, and that the contestants had not been negligent in trying to locate the witness, and that they believed they could obtain such testimony within sixty days. The continuance was granted and the deposition of the absent witness will be procured in the meantime.

Will Sharp Here.

From Tuesday's Daily. Will Sharp of Omaha came in yesterday to visit his mother and to look after some business matters. Mr. Sharp and his wife returned a day or two ago from a trip in the western part of the state, and on their return trip visited Mrs. Sharp's sister, Mrs. Chancellor Phillips and family, for a few days at Cambridge, Neb. Mrs. Phillips and husband are rejoicing over the arrival of a little son, who is 3 weeks old, and mother and child are as well as can be and both doing fine. Mr. Sharp manifested much indignation at the rumor set afloat by some malicious person a few days ago to the effect that Mrs. Phillips, his wife's sister, was dead. Mr. Sharp and his wife were at the Phillips home at that time and were shocked at the circulation of such a report.

Recovered Cap.

Elmer Frans, a senior, appeared at the Journal office and claimed the blue serge cap this morning. The cap was lost in a mysterious way. A party of the freshmen were holding Halloween services in the residence property formerly occupied by J. E. McDaniel, when the senior class made a raid, anticipating the capture of the freshman president, but the freshmen were on the alert and stowed their president away in the garage so that the seniors came off empty handed. In the darkness a very fresh freshie took Elmer's cap and hurled it into the darkness, where it could not be found until daylight came. Elmer was not far from home when the episode took place, and was little inconvenienced by the loss.

Mushroom Record Broken.

William Holly is the champion mushroom gatherer of the season. Yesterday afternoon in one hour by the watch, in the presence of Ben Rainey, chief of police, and Claus Speck, both "reputable witnesses," Mr. Holly plucked exactly, in round numbers, 36 pounds, avoirdupois weight, of mushrooms. Both the chief of police and Mr. Speck also engaged in the same sport, and returning to the city after a thirty-minute's walk back, they found they had been absent from the city just two hours. The mushroom season is at its best right now, and will be good for some time.
