Loyal Sons Elect Officers.

The Loyal Sons (the young men's class at the Christian church) met last evening at the home of M. S. Briggs, and among other things elected officers for the ensuing term, and laid plans for a more active campaign for the work of the future. The officers elected were: President, Place Phebus; vice president, Everett Gooding; secretary and treasurer, John Stander. M. S. Briggs was re-elected teacher of the class and arrangements were perfected for pushing forward the work of the class and the school. A committee of six, known as the lookout committee, consisting of Phillip Rhin, John Stander, Everett Gooding, Place Phebus, Russell Standard and M. S. Briggs, were appointed as the committee, whose work will be to look out for those young men who have no Sabbath school home, and use every means to induce them to become connected with any school, it being more to be de-sired that they be members of some school and a good working class than that it be the class to which the committee belongs, while they would give preference to that class.

The young lady's brother, Henry Albert, came in from the farm last evening and went to Omaha this morning to visit his sister.

Good for Elmwood.

About fifty of the business men of Elmwood met last Monday evening and organized a Com-mercial club. The deliberations of the meeting was enthusiastic throughout, which demonstrates that the citizens of Elmwood are thoroughly alive to the interests of that enterprising little city. The following officers were elected: Chairman, L. A. Tyson; secretary, Edwin J. Jeary; treasurer, B. L. Clements. A committee was se-lected to draft by-laws to be pre-sented at the next meeting for adoption. We are glad to see our Elmwood friends make this move, as a well organized Commercial club can do wonders in the way of building up and improving the town. The business men gen-erally are enterprising, more so, in fact, than any town of its size in Nebraska, and the men at the head of the new organization are hustlers. The Journal already views in the distance a bright future for Elmwood. Good for Elmwood!
