The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hartsook is quite sick.

J. C. Olsen lost a very valuable horse and also a mule. They were sick only about half an hour. Mr. Olsen had been offered $200 for the horse just about twenty-five minutes before it died.

Have You Property?

Everybody has some property. Those who do not take good care of it, usually lose it. The best property of everybody is his health. If he does not neglect the same and if he quickly repairs occasional indisposition, his prospects for a long and happy life are very good. The first symptom of an indisposition is usually partial or total loss of appetite and of strength and energy, some headache, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, constipation. In such cases use at once Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine, which will thoroughly clean out the digestive system, strengthen it and stimulate to its regular work. It is very good for the stomach, for the liver and for the intestines, for rheumatic and neuralgic pains, as also for colic and cramps. It will improve the appetite and strengthen the body. At drug stores, Jos. Triner, 1333-1339 So. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

Scramble for Better Places.

The resignation of Superintendent I. N. Clark has been the means of bringing before the school board so far, about twelve applications for the position, and many others to be considered. The board has been called together each time a new name appears, and it is evident there is not a dearth of aspirants for the Weeping Water job. In the matter of teachers, for each vacancy there were also several applicants. This does not signify too many teachers, only a scramble for better places.—Weeping Water Republican.

Verdict for Defendant.

The case of Jacob Cohn vs. Ralph A. Duff, wherein he asked for $15,000 damages for the injuries which he received by reason of being struck by an automobile being driven by the defendant, after he got out of his buggy on Central avenue last fall.

The case was given to the jury and they were out some little time, last evening, and sent for Judge Travis and informed him they had reached a verdict. The fact that the jury was out for some time led to the report that they favored a verdict for the plaintiff, but this was dispelled when the jury came into the box and the foreman delivered a verdict for the defendant. The plaintiff gave notice that the case would be appealed.—Nebraska City News.

CARPATHIA NEARS NEW YORK

Wireless Stations Get in Communication with Carpathia.

MESSAGE FROM THE CHESTER.

Says List of Cabin Passengers Sent Tuesday Is Complete—Third Class List Yet to Come—115 First and 167 Second Cabin Passengers Lost.

Beyond even the mystery of how the mammoth steamer Titanic met its fate another mystery, evolved by the events of the last three days, forced itself to the front. Although the rescue ship Carpathia was within the zone of wireless communication and both shore stations and relaying ships were able to obtain from it long lists of survivors among the steerage passengers and to send and receive numerous short messages from and to private individuals, not a word of matter descriptive of the manner in which the steamer received its deathblow, or how those on board the doomed liner comforted themselves in the face of impending doom reached the shore.

The roll of the saved from the Titanic disaster seems complete.

Practically every attending circumstance in the transmission of news from the Carpathia goes to show that only 328 of the 610 cabin passengers of the Titanic are safe on the rescue ship.

The 282 cabin passengers whose names are being sent to the United States coast guard cutter Chester wireless ashore that she had been in communication with the Carpathia and had asked repeatedly for the full list of the first and second cabin survivors and that the rescue ship reported that all the names had already been sent ashore. The remainder of 540 persons saved were passengers in the steerage or members of the crew.

Thousands of hopeful hearts were turned to despairing ones when the United States scout cruiser Chester wireless ashore that she had been in communication with the Carpathia and had asked repeatedly for the full list of the first and second cabin survivors and that the rescue ship reported that all the names had already been sent ashore. The remainder of 540 persons saved were passengers in the steerage or members of the crew.

From the Carpathia, which is expected to reach the entrance of the harbor by 8 o'clock tonight, came a new report as to the number of survivors on board.

Hope for Wireless Mistakes.

The fact that one new name came through in a private message from the Carpathia was the basis of what was a desire more than a hope that there were slips enough in her wireless lists to account for a few at least of those still unaccounted for. At the best, however, it appeared that it could only be an occasional one whose safety had been reported through some error of compilation on the liner or of wireless transmission.

List of Saved Grows Less.

Through the Cunarder Franconia, which established wireless communication with the rescue ship, came a message which included this statement:

"She has a total of 705 survivors aboard."

The previous statement from the Carpathia had been that she carried 868 survivors. It may be that the report received through the Franconia included a count of rescued passengers only, disregarding the 100 or more members of the crew who must have been in the boats which the Carpathia picked up.

Communication was being had with the Carpathia through both the scout cruiser and the shore wireless station at Siasconsett. Through the Chester there came slowly the names of saved passengers from the third cabin of the Titanic. The very sending of these could but help confirm the faithful belief that there were no more names of first and second cabin passengers to send. And thus the name of well known men such as John Jacob Astor, William T. Stead, Isidor Straus and others of the now familiar list of fatalities could have been omitted in the transmission of names. That these men have gone down with the ship there remained hardly a doubt. Authorities on conditions of the banks agreed that rescues of passengers not taken from the liner by the boats would have had to be made speedily, as exposure and exhaustion would quickly sap the life of human beings forced to resort to any other means than boats of keeping afloat.

Bodies Will Remain Down.

Baltimore, April 18.—"The bodies of the victims of the Titanic are at the bottom of the deep, never to leave it," declared Professor Robert W. Wool of the chair of experimental physics of John-Hopkins university.

"It is altogether improbable that any of the corpses ever return to the surface as is the case with bodies drowned in shallow water. At the depth of two miles the pressure of the water is something like 6,000 pounds to the square inch, which is far too great to be overcome by buoyancy ordinarily given drowned bodies by the gases generated in time."
