A Cass county corn field is anything but a dream. In fact, it is a glorious reality.

A dollar is not always a hundred cents—depends on whether it is going or coming.

Frank M. Currie of Broken Bow has been elected chairman of the regular republican state central committee.

Hon. W. J. Bryan will be the chief orator at the dedication of the Lincoln statue next Monday—Labor day.

The bull moose candidate for president is to speak in six towns in Nebraska, beginning at Lincoln September 20.

The Journal was somewhat premature in stating that congress adjourned Saturday. However, it finally adjourned later on.

Roosevelt says he will wait till late in September to reply to the Penrose charges. Our opinion is that he will wait several months longer.

You cannot expect customers to think the goods you have tucked away in dark corners are of much importance. Get them out where they can be seen.

The third party followers and the Taft republicans are further apart than ever. And they blame Aldrich and his henchmen for the present state of affairs.

All democrats and about one-half of the republicans in the country are for Wilson and Marshall. Maybe we can make it unanimous by November 5.

W. J. Bryan will open the democratic campaign in Nebraska on September 4, by making a speech on the state fair grounds. Mr. Bryan will answer Governor Hiram Johnson of California.

George W. Perkins is general manager and chief financial backer in the Roosevelt campaign, and he is also a director and chairman of the finance committee of the harvester trust. Is that not sufficient to convince all honest voters that Teddy is sailing under false colors? One would naturally think so.

Congress has adjourned and the members are preparing to wend their way homeward.

Our philosopher says that though it costs more to live, it is worth more now than ever before.

A man has certainly arrived at the turning off place when he is no longer in condition to enjoy enthusiasm.

The president's vetoes of democratic measures merely push the tariff into the foreground and the democrats have almost always won when that was the leading issue.—Philadelphia Record.

Chairman Billy Thompson says everything looks well for the democratic ticket throughout the state. That probably is true, but the thing to do is to keep it looking that way, and better, if possible.

John Maguire will be at home in a few days, and then he will begin his visits to his friends, the farmers. They will all gladly welcome him, too, for they fully realize his true worth to them in congress.

The Taft following in Nebraska is the true republican party of Nebraska, and the state republican candidate who fails to get his name on the ticket headed by W. H. Taft for president is not a republican, but a bolter in the fullest sense of the term.

When La Follette pointed out a year ago that a second Taft administration would be unwise and unsafe, Roosevelt declined to take sides with the issue. Now, according to Roosevelt, the danger is sufficient to justify a new party. The wave of reform struck Roosevelt all of a sudden.

Word has been heralded all along the line to at least get all the republicans in the state together for Aldrich. From what we can learn, Aldrich is trying to do this himself. He doesn't care a continental for the balance of the ticket. That's Aldrich.

The Lincoln Star has started a subscription fund for the democratic national campaign, and already has several hundred dollars subscribed. The Star deserves great credit for the interest taken in democratic success. That paper is evidently doing a great work for both the national and state tickets. Long live the Star!

Everyone who heard Hon. John H. Morehead's address at the Old Settlers' reunion at Union Saturday complimented the democratic candidate for governor very highly, and while he does not possess great oratorical powers, he is a forcible, sensible talker and fully demonstrated to the immense crowd present that he was made of the right kind of material to make an excellent governor, and many republicans announced their intention of voting for him.

When you are weighing in your own mind the testimony showing that Roosevelt received contributions from the trusts in his 1904 campaign and knew where the money came from, as against his denials, just remember that in 1904 Roosevelt said: "Under no circumstances will I again be a candidate for the presidency." That should help some in arriving at a decision whether he is telling the truth now when he says he didn't know.—Lincoln Star.

Roosevelt has promised to speak in Lincoln September 20. He is to speak one day in Nebraska and at night speak in Omaha.

Roosevelt is very much worked up over the exposures made by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. It is the old, old story, "when thieves fall out," etc.

The management of the democratic national campaign are appealing for help to carry on the fight. They have no one to call upon but the common people, and everyone should give a little.

Secretary Wilson, the occupant of the agricultural portfolio, is soon to retire to private life. Doubtless this decision has been reached since the election of a democratic president became a foregone conclusion.

The democratic state ticket, with such a man as Hon. John H. Morehead at the head, should be elected by a big majority. There are hundreds of republicans who will not support Aldrich for governor, no matter what kind of a combination he may effect with the Taft party leaders. The leaders are not the common voters by a long shot.

Here is a situation: The amount of money available for conducting the state's affairs next year is $160,000 less than the Aldrich administration has had to do with. With such a reduction of the state's income can't you see that it is necessary to elect John H. Morehead and the democratic ticket, because there will be need of close and careful business figuring?—Hasting Democrat.

The senate wisely determined to disregard the protests of England and to permit the free passage of coastwise American vessels through the canal. If we haven't been building the canal for the particular benefit of American commerce, what in the thunder have we been constructing it for? The very idea of charging our own ships the same toll charged foreign ships seems preposterous. This question should be settled right now and for all time to come.

Mike Harrington wants the governor to call the legislature together to change the election law so that the progressives can place a ticket on the general ballot. As the law now stands before a party designation will be placed on the ballot the party must have been in existence and participated in the primary previous to the election. Aldrich has about all the trouble he can handle and does not intend to participate in any more. He has therefore turned down Michael's request.

Perhaps the most talked-of animal today is the Moose. For some years past it was thought the Moose was almost extinct. But developments since the Chicago convention prove the contrary. Just now this stately animal may be found from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the lakes to the gulf, and you don't have to hunt long to find it. Domestication has had no effect on its native habits and it still retains its fierceness. It has developed one peculiarity. It has an intense hatred for stand-patters and literally "eats 'em alive." President Taft is trying very hard to capture the biggest moose in the United States, which naturalists have named "Teddy-bovalapus." He wants to place the animal in the National Museum for exhibition purposes and also to get him out of harm's way. However, the president says that if he cannot capture this big Moose before next November he'll let him run at large until he breaks into some government inclosure and then Woodrow Wilson can take him in hand.

Wednesday, September 4, will be a big day at the Nebraska state fair. This is Omaha day and then again it is the day upon which Mr. Bryan will answer the speech of Governor Johnson, bull moose candidate for vice president.

Wilson clubs are being organized in many towns in Nebraska. What's the matter with Plattsmouth coming to the front with a good, big organization of this kind? Let us organize.

The Penrose and Archibald exposure of funds given Roosevelt in the campaign of 1904 is opening the eyes of the people, and Teddy is shaking in his boots. Roosevelt's record is getting worse every day.

One of our prominent republican farmers remarked last Saturday that there is no use to change congressmen as long as John A. Maguire performs his duty so well. His record will compare with the average member and then his attention to his constituents is steadfast and constant.

The Taft republicans have about come to the conclusion that they do not care to have anything more to do with Aldrich. In fact, Aldrich has attempted so many schemes for his own selfish purposes that they are all getting suspicious of his movements. It looks now as if each republican candidate will have to light out for himself and "let the devil take the hindmost."

Teddy Roosevelt is undoubtedly getting pretty shaky over the trust campaign gifts investigation. They are to be investigated from 1904, and Teddy has cause to get nervous. He knows where the money came from to elect him, and now posing as a reform candidate for president. Ain't that enough to make the people go against such a man?

The senate has adopted the Penrose-Reed-Pointdexter resolution authorizing the Clapp committee to investigate all campaign resolutions from 1904 to the present time. Senator Clapp seems to think that the investigation cannot be resumed before September 30. On with the investigation, and "let no guilty man escape" the consequences.

Honest John Morehead intimates that he will pay no attention to Governor Aldrich's request to get out in the sunlight. Mr. Morehead isn't that sort of a candidate. He prefers to let the people believe he is a political saint, whether he is or not.—Nebraska City Press. This is one of the papers that got a portion of the constitutional amendments to print—probably $150 worth.

When you have a dollar to spare send it to a catalogue house. When you need credit for a dollar go to your home merchant and get it. When you have some chickens, apples, plums, potatoes, cabbage, roasting ears and other products to spare, don't let the catalogue houses have any of it. Send it to the home merchant and then take the money and send it to the catalogue house and buy what you need. That will keep up home interests and will typify the Golden Rule.

"The outlook for a sweeping democratic victory in both state and nation could not possibly be brighter," says W. H. Thompson, chairman of the democratic state central committee. He predicts the election of every candidate from Wilson down. These predictions are all right, but none of them should be the means of deterring democrats from organizing. We should not encourage our party friends in feeling too sanguine. There is no telling what a few weeks may bring forth.

Congressmen were so sure of adjournment that they had their grips and trunks already packed to light out for home, and the report was heralded broadcast that congress had adjourned. But it seems to have been a false alarm. The arrangement was balked by filibusters. But finally an adjournment was brought about.

Talk about party bosses, just watch the movements of Aldrich and his henchmen, J. L. McBrien and C. B. Manual. They are already bosses in the new bull moose party, right now, before the new party has gotten fairly started. Aldrich wants the bull moose endorsement at their convention to be held in Lincoln next Tuesday, and he is going to have it, whether any other state candidates get it or not. He is just that kind—all for Aldrich.

"Know Nebraska Better" should be the slogan of every school district in the state. Every school teacher should study Nebraska, and should fit herself—or himself—to teach the facts about Nebraska. We opine that the average Nebraska schoolboy knows more about England than he does about his own state. It is not enough that the pupil should be able to "bound Nebraska" and name her principal cities and rivers. They ought to know something about her soil and her climate; about her products, her manufactures, her past and her future. By cutting out a lot of fool fads and adding on a few things worth while, our public schools may be made of more service to the people.—Will Maupin's Weekly.

The Journal does not believe predictions amount to much this early in elections, especially by the men higher up in the political world. It only instills confidence in party workers to the extent that they become lethargic and inactive. This "sure thing" business does not always pan out satisfactorily, and such a feeling should not be indulged in to the extent that some public men are doing. Of course, as everything looks now, Wilson and Marshall are sure winners, but things, all of a sudden, may take on a different appearance, and democrats should be in readiness to meet it. The only way to checkmate any after-clapp of this kind is for democrats to be prepared for it through organization. We are a great believer in organization. It is the only way to keep the party in line, and this should not be lost sight of in over-confidence for success.
