Without a Cook.

The famous author, Meredith, said once that an intelligent man cannot live without a cook. This means that it is just as important what you eat as how you eat it. A well cooked meal goes much farther than a quick meal, which is often the cause of indigestion and of different diseases of the stomach and the intestines. In such diseases Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine always gives the best satisfaction. In loss of appetite, indigestion, constipation, nervousness, headache, attacks of rheumatism and neuralgia, in diseases of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, this remedy will always be used with success. It does not contain any ingredients which bring temporary relief only, but is intended to bring a permanent cure. At drug stores. Jos. Triner, 1333-1339 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Beggar Asked to Leave Town.

Frank Wilson, who was hanging around town yesterday begging and generally making a nuisance of himself, was hauled in by the police last evening and this morning was brought before Judge Archer, who assessed a fine of $10 and costs, but on the agreement of Mr. Wilson to leave town at once, the fine was suspended. Wilson was a cripple, and, as usual with beggars of this character, was very much of a bore to the people going up and down the street.

IMPROVING ROAD EAST OF BURLINGTON DEPOT

The city workmen are at work today repairing the road on the river bottom east of the depot and putting it in shape for travel. When the workmen arrived to start work this morning they were ordered to desist by the parties who had squatted on the land there, but on advice of the city officials the work was continued, as the ownership of the land is in doubt and the city of Plattsmouth has a claim to the land in dispute, the original patent of the city giving them the land to the river. The only action the squatters could take would be to bring the matter into court, and then they would be compelled to prove their own right to the land, which is also claimed by the railroad company.

AT THE PARMELE THEATRE NEXT SATURDAY EVENING

"The Rosary," One of the Great Plays of the Present Time.

"The Rosary," which played in Lincoln Wednesday night, drew a large audience, and the State Journal speaks very highly of the company as follows:

Our old and tried friend, "The Rosary," was seen once more at the Oliver last evening. This strong play has in the course of time gathered around itself a clientele of its own. Judging from the large audience present last night its hold on the public has in no wise diminished. The play bids fair to run for from one-half to a whole decade. I might have quoted the brook which "runs on forever," but this phrase needs a rest after long service calculated to render it stale.

"The Rosary" is a strongly knit play. The story moves forward rapidly from the moment the characters and their cross purposes are revealed without any long speeches or any dialogue not pertinent to the main issue. There is just enough of comedy of the better sort to prevent the atmosphere of gloom from becoming dense and impenetrable.

The uncommonly strong climax to the second act, when the good priest lies to the husband in order to shield the wife until her innocence could be established, was received with the same degree of approval as on the two previous presentations in this city. More than mediocre acting is required in order to bring out the full strength of the several situations. The actors in charge of the various parts were quite equal to the task. Hence they deserve more than passing mention. Rufus L. Perry is a forceful and dignified Father Kelly, on whose shoulders rests the burden of the play. He looks the part and is consistent throughout. As Bruce Wilton, Gordon Hamilton, blessed with a resonant voice, does full justice to the role while avoiding temptation to rant. Josephine Worth takes the part of both Mrs. Wilton and the suffering twin sister, Alice. To her credit be it said that she differentiates the characters sharply. Acceptable acting of all other parts made the performance a well rounded one throughout.

THE HORSE DISEASE PROVING MOST FATAL

How Animal Is Attacked With the Dread Disease, From Which Very Few Recover.

The strange disease that has been ravaging horses throughout the state during the last few weeks seems to have at last invaded Cass county, and several horses have already died from the effects of the disease. The symptoms in several of the cases resembles cerebri spinal meningitis which has been so prevalent throughout the state.

A farmer residing south of the city has a horse that has been suffering for several days with all the symptoms of the disease, and the animal is apparently in a condition from which it cannot recover. The symptoms of the disease are that of a chill, a raise in temperature, or a general weakness and shivering of the legs. A painful, convulsive twitching of the muscles sets in, followed by muscular rigidity along the spine, in which condition the animal will move very stiffly and evidence great pain in turning. Evidences of paralysis or paraplegia develop, and retention or incontinence of the urine is present. The presence of marked fever at the beginning of the attack, associated with spinal symptoms, should lead us to suspect spinal meningitis or myelitis. These two conditions usually appear together, or myelitis follows inflammation of the meninges so closely that it is almost impossible to separate the two; practically, it does not matter much, as the treatment will be about the same in both cases. Meningitis generally becomes chronic and is then marked principally by paralysis of that portion or parts of it, posterior to the seat of the disease.

As yet but few cases have developed in Cass county, but it is very liable to spread, the same as it has done in other sections of the state.

In reference to the fatal disease, the Lincoln Star says:

With 5,000 horses now estimated to have died in Nebraska from the epidemic there is every evidence that it is spreading throughout the state was indicated by State Veterinary Bostrom Tuesday afternoon.

"We are helpless," he said. "The disease simply combats every treatment with which we are familiar and so far we have been unable to do anything to stop the progress of the malady."

Mr. Bostrom and Dr. Davidson, the federal veterinary expert, held another conference at the state house Tuesday morning, but had nothing to give to the public at its conclusion.

EASTERN STAR ENJOYS A MOST ENJOYABLE EVENING

Home Chapter of the Eastern Star last evening had the honor of the official visit of the grand matron of Nebraska, Mrs. J. W. Gamble, of Omaha, Grand Warden Mrs. Goodman of Crete accompanied the worthy matron and participated in the enjoyment of the evening. The lodge was largely attended by the members, and Mrs. Delia Anderson of Union was received into the order.

After the session of the lodge a splendid banquet was served in the dining room, and the delicious repast was participated in by about fifty people. Mrs. J. C. Peterson, worthy matron of Home Chapter, presided at the banquet and introduced the various speakers in a most happy manner. Toasts were responded to by Mrs. Gamble, Mrs. Anderson of Union, C. H. Taylor and J. C. Peterson, who greatly pleased the audience with their remarks. The dining room was beautifully decorated and reflects great credit on the ladies. There were about twelve members present from Murray and Union to take part in the session of the lodge.
