The custody of their child was given the plaintiff, with the defendant being allowed to visit the child whenever she so desired. The illness of the judge necessitated the holding of the court at his residence.

As a result of their increasing business, Weyrich & Hadraba, the enterprising druggists, have been forced to enlarge their store room some twenty feet, moving the partition back and installing new and handsome natural oak fixtures, including several new wall cabinets, which will be used to display part of their large stock in. The room has been repapered and a steel ceiling placed in the room, making it one of the most handsome stores in the city. The walls are finished in a shade of brown, blending nicely with the green and gray of the ceiling, and is a most artistic combination. The firm has also remodeled their prescription room and now have a work-room that can be closed off from the main sale-room and give them an ideal place to carry on their business. We are glad to see the business houses of the city prospering and hope to see more of this improvement going on among our merchants.

THE RILEY HOTEL BARBER SHOP GREATLY IMPROVED

Perry Thackston, proprietor of the Hotel Riley barber shop, has placed new linoleum on the floor of his shop, which adds the finishing touches to one of the finest barber shops in this part of the state. Mr. Thackston has had the room repapered and painted and installed a modern and sanitary wash stand in the shop and may well take a pardonable pride in the appearance of the shop, as it certainly is one of the swellest places in the city and Perry should be congratulated on his enterprise in keeping up with the spirit of improvement that is bringing Plattsmouth to the front.

ALEX HUNTER GOES WHERE HE IS NOT WANTED

Saturday night Alex Hunter, who hails from the vicinity of Pacific Junction, came to this city and proceeded to take on numerous drinks and proceeded to the home of Mrs. McPherson, in the northwest part of town, and although his company was not desired there, he refused to leave and continued to make himself a nuisance until the police were summoned and removed Alex to the "bull pen," where he remained until he was arraigned this morning before his honor, Judge Archer, who, after hearing the facts in the case, concluded that Alex had offended the majesty of the law to the extent of $5 and costs, amounting to $8, and allowed the prisoner to go across the river to secure the amount. Hunter is the man who was acquitted about a year ago of killing the fisherman, Wagner, near Pacific Junction.

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM INSTANT DEATH

An accident which might have resulted in the death of one of the parties occurred last evening about 5:30, when Wayne Dickson, who was driving an automobile down Sixth street, turned at the corner of Vine street and started towards the postoffice, turning out to the right to avoid some boys who were riding bicycles on the street, and as he turned one of the boys, Ellery Groman, turned the same way, with the result that the car struck the bicycle, throwing the young man to the pavement with great force. The car was going at a low speed and was brought to a standstill at once and the occupants picked young Roman up. He was considerably dazed by the fall, but fortunately was not seriously hurt, and after a few minutes' rest was conveyed to his home. There can be no blame laid on the occupants of the machine, as they made every effort to avoid the boys and were running at less than the legal speed limit. Those riding bicycles on the streets should keep their eyes open, as it is a great deal easier for them to get out of the way than it would be for an automobile.

"THE PRINCE OF TONIGHT"

Play to a Crowded House and the Greatest Success of the Theater Season.

One of the most pleasing musical comedies that has been shown in this city was that of "The Prince of Tonight," which appeared at the Parmele theater Saturday evening. The show possesses some very beautiful scenic effects and the story of the play is most interesting and keeps the attention of the audience from the start to the final curtain. "The Prince of Tonight" is one of the best musical comedies produced in recent years and possesses some very bewitching musical numbers and was in the hands of a very fine company here. Tom Arnold, who is appearing this season as the prince of the mythical country of Lunytania, was delightful in his acting and possesses a fine voice, which was heard in several numbers, being especially effective in "Her Eyes Are Blue for Good Old Yale" and "Tonight Will Never Come Again." Mr. Arnold is fortunate in being supported by such a splendid actress as Miss Eva Carey, who acted the role of Miss Virginia Stuart, and was all that one could ask in this part, and the love scenes between her and the prince were very strong. In the character of Daniel Stuart, the mineral water magnate, Frank Harsh was a laugh from start to finish and is undoubtedly one of the cleverest comedians appearing on the American stage today. The company was good in every way and every member was up and going from start to finish and the chorus has some mighty fine singers in its ranks, especially the male section, which is one of the best that the playgoers of this city have had the pleasure of hearing for a long time.

The Parmele was filled to its capacity for the performance and attested the appreciation of the people of the delightful show offered, and it is hoped that the management can secure more such attractions in the future, as the crowd Saturday night demonstrated the interest the public takes in a good, up-to-date attraction, and such shows will undoubtedly receive the continued patronage of the public.

A THRESHING MACHINE GOES THROUGH BRIDGE

William Ash and Walter Lovell Have Narrow Escape From Instant Death.

From Saturday's Daily.

William Ash and Walter Lovell came very near having a fatal accident last Thursday afternoon while moving Mr. Ash's threshing outfit from one job to another. The engine on which they were both riding crashed through a bridge over a 14-foot ravine, just west of Frank Jameson's farm, north of town. When the bridge commenced to crack, Lovell shut off the engine and jumped. Mr. Ash, in attempting to jump, was pitched head first down against the fire box and went to the bottom of the ravine with the engine. As it turned out it was lucky, for in that way he was protected from the crash, which demolished the tool and coal boxes on the rear of the engine. It was also lucky for him that the tongue to the separator broke so that it did not follow the engine into the ditch, for it would have certainly crushed him. As it was he got out of the mixup with only the dislocation of a bone in his foot. This was caused by his foot becoming fast and getting slightly wrenched.

Billy says that when he landed at the bottom of the ditch, after what seemed hours from the time the first crash came, and found his foot fast, his first thought was of being scalded to death. When he had released himself his next concern was about his companion, Lovell, for he thought he must be under the engine somewhere. When he found Lovell safe and saw how fortunate things had come out he was simply so weak from the full realization of what the danger was that he couldn't do a thing for a while.

The damage to the threshing outfit was very slight and the engine was quite easily removed from the ditch by the aid of another engine that Mr. Ash owns, and the assistance of R. D. McNurlin and his moving apparatus.

SENATOR BANNING COMES PRETTY NEAR LOSING HIS CAR

From Saturday's Daily.

Senator W. B. Banning had a very costly experience in the village of Alvo Tuesday night. The senator drove into town with his fine touring car, about 6 o'clock, and at once placed it in the livery barn for the night, and the next morning when he called for it he found that someone had taken it out of the barn during the night and no sign of the machine could be found. The senator at once called up the neighboring towns to see if a car answering the description of his had been seen, but to no success. Later in the morning a farmer drove in and reported a car broken down about three-quarters of a mile out of Alvo, and on arriving at the scene it was found to be Mr. Banning's machine. The car had been run about ten miles and was in a badly damaged condition, several of the gears on the machine being broken and otherwise showing some very hard usage. It seems strange how a machine could be stolen out of a place where parties were sleeping started up and got away with without causing some alarm. The parties were evidently not satisfied with taking the car, but proceeded to damage it to such an extent that it will cost $30 or $40 to place it in condition to be used, and if it is possible the miscreants should be brought to time for the outrage.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says: "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For croup there is nothing that excels it." For sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.
