THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

Still let the land be shaken
 By a summons of thine own!
 By all save truth forsaken,
 Why stand with that alone?
 Shrink not from strife unequal!
 With the best is always hope;
 And ever in the sequel
 God holds the right side up!
 —J. Greenleaf Whittier.

Well, it's President Wilson.

It was a landslide all round.

Hurrah for Governor Morehead!

Hurrah for Wilson and Marshall!

The campaign liar is now out of a job.

Old Joe Cannon is even defeated in Illinois.

The most of the state ticket is still in doubt.

"I told you so" fellows are numerous now.

Everything democratic, and the people rejoice.

Roosevelt sends congratulations to Governor Wilson.

Wilson and Morehead both carry Douglas county.

It looks like Senator Banning has been defeated. Shame!

It has been a long time to wait, but we finally got there with both feet.

Even Massachusetts and Ohio went for Wilson. Also Kansas and Nebraska.

Clarence Harmon for railroad commissioner is running like a "skered wolf" and is elected.

Now for postmaster—we are a candidate and our work in the interests of the democratic party speaks for itself.

The house and senate will both be democratic, which is the way it should be to give President Wilson the right kind of support.

The election of Wilson and Marshall is one of the greatest political triumphs in the history of this country. Might as well have made it unanimous.

The abuse heaped upon Hon. John H. Morehead by the little governor did not get him much. He evidently made votes for the democratic candidate.

The returns from Cass county are very slow coming in, and are getting slower every year. We are unable to see any cause for it.

There is no use to get mad because things don't go your way. Remember we will come all of us under the same flag and for the same "Land of Liberty."

Yes, automobile accidents will happen. So will other kinds of accidents. People sometimes slip on the innocent banana peel, fall and break a limb. But that is not an argument against raising bananas.

It's all over, gentlemen.

Democrats should all feel happy.

Evidently the people do not want a new jail.

Now for Plattsmouth and Plattsmouth's interests.

This was indeed a very chilly morning for Governor Aldrich.

The constitutional amendment papers couldn't deliver the goods.

"Hard times will come again no more," even under a democratic administration.

Wilson carried one ward in Weeping Water. Well, what do you think of that?

The tidal wave in favor of reform was very sweeping throughout the country.

John A. Maguire is safely in the lead by 1,000 and will be elected. Good for John!

Well, Julius Pitz has occasion to feel proud of the big vote he received in Plattsmouth.

The people will find out that Julius Pitz will make an able and faithful county commissioner.

Taft carries Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Utah—sixteen electoral votes.

At last accounts Morehead had 24,000 majority for governor and was still increasing his vote.

Now, let's all get down to business—the election is over and we should all feel glad.

This has actually been the quietest presidential election that we have ever experienced.

Thanksgiving is not far distant. That is an occasion on which we should be thankful, if for nothing more than life, liberty and fairly good health.

They are agitating the single tax question in a number of states. The single tax is a matter that don't look good to us as a fair proposition.

It seems strange that so much little petty stealing is being done in Plattsmouth and no clue to the thieves can be ascertained. These little thefts always occur after nighfall, too.

The Journal is glad that the election is over. Now we can devote our time to something more beneficial to our readers than politics. And we are pretty well satisfied that our readers generally are willing.

Did you ever stop to consider how much a town is judged by its display windows? When you go to a big city are not the display windows one of the main attractions for you? Do you realize that a line of attractive windows will not only bring customers into your store for the goods displayed, but will help all the other merchants in town, as their windows help you and all taken together will create a most favorable impression that will result in return visits and increased trade? Plattsmouth is well up-to-date with nice show windows, but let's have more of them. It costs but little trouble.

Politics will lie dormant for a few months, at least.

Holidays only seven weeks off. Do your Christmas shopping early.

Lay aside your politics and all boost for Plattsmouth and her institutions.

Nebraska is one of the best states, Cass one of the best counties in that state, and Plattsmouth one of the best towns in any state on earth.

There are 700 banks in Nebraska. During the last eight years there has been but one bank failure in the state—a small concern wrecked by an absconding cashier, which caused a loss of less than $2,500 to depositors. During these eight years these 700 banks have had on hand an average of $450,000,000 of deposits at all times.

John W. Cutright for elector, accompanied the Bryan party to this city Monday. Mr. Cutright, in connection with Chas. S. Sherman, established the Daily Journal here over 30 years ago, and this is his first visit to Plattsmouth in twenty years. Mr. Cutright is now connected with that most excellent paper, the Lincoln Daily Star, in the capacity of editorial writer, and is making awful good.

The parcels post arrangement, which goes into effect January 1, 1913, promises to benefit not only those who patronize this new department of the postoffice, but those who continue to patronize the express companies as well. It is reported that the express companies are now considering changes in rates, with the possible adoption of a zone system, that will meet the competition of the parcels post when it is established. In general this will mean considerably lower rates on small packages sent by express, especially for distances within the outside zone of parcels post.

The indications point to a fine holiday trade. The crops generally have been good and the people are disposed to spend plenty of money during the holidays. The wastefulness that formerly characterized the celebration of the holidays has been curbed to a great extent. But the giving of presents is generally observed and the class of goods purchased is even better and more sensible than the days when extravagance was in vogue. The proper observance of the holiday spirit is commendable. It has become a settled anniversary for the world of Christendom and nowhere in the wide world are the people in better condition financially for the festivities than in the central portion of the United States. The retail merchants have bought liberally in anticipation of a heavy holiday trade. Doubtless they will not be disappointed.

Hanging is not what Jack Johnson needs. Imprisonment is not the punishment that should be meted out to that black brute. "I've got money and you can't get me," he asserts. "I can get any white woman I want," he impudently exclaims. No, it isn't hanging, neither is it imprisonment, that Jack Johnson deserves. It is something else. It was meted out to a white man in Falls City a few years ago. It is punishment not mentioned in polite society circles, but that fact does not deter us from alluding to it. It isn't particularly painful, but it is mighty lasting. And it strikes us as being just about the right punishment to administer to the "big smoke," who boasts that his money will protect him in his traffic in white girls, and that he can "get any white woman he wants." All in favor of the suggestion will please say "Aye!"—Will Maupin's Weekly. Aye!

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MEN.

What makes the difference between men? Although the principles upon which this government is founded declare that all men are created equal, and this is being loudly reiterated by the disciples of a certain ethical cult, no person of any discernment can deny the fact that there is a vast difference between the majority of mankind. Stand on a street corner and watch the passing crowd and the contrast between the various members of it will be great. One man slouches by dragging his feet as though he did not have sufficient energy to raise them as he walks; his hair is unkempt, his hat thrown on without regards to looks; his coat droops and his trousers are shapeless; there is an atmosphere of dejection about him that is depressing, and neither his attitude nor his appearance are calculated to command the respect of those who meet him. Walking just behind him comes a man, quick, alert, fully alive, and it is but a moment before he passes the first one on the street as doubtless he has surpassed his neighbor in the pursuit of success in his chosen walks of life.

To look at such a man is a pleasure, for his whole appearance commands respect. His apparel and his demeanor are of one who respects himself and whom the world honors. Perhaps these men were neighbors when children and had an equal chance for education and business advancement, but one has outstripped the other and the distance is so great between them that they do not even know each other as they pass in the street. What has made them different when they started apparently equal; no man can tell. One man is trustworthy and upright, while the other has no sense of honor and though he may not be a drunkard, he is "down and out," and complains bitterly that the world has not treated him fairly. Perhaps he has merely lost his grip through misfortunes that have come to him; the loss of money, friends or relatives. Possibly the other man may have met with similar mishaps, but he had more stamina and recuperative power. He simply refused to be downed by misfortune, regardless of what they were.

The first man seized upon any excuse for what was really his own negligence. Not that he was responsible for the loss of relatives by death, though it may have been on account of his own carelessness; but he certainly might have retained the regard of friends by paying proper attention to them. Doubtless he was self-conscious and cultivated a hypersensitive feeling that made him ever on the lookout for slights and quick to resent what may not have been intentional. He nursed his grouches until he became incapable of doing anything and could not pay attention to business. No man can keep friends or retain his business, whether he be an employee or manager, who does not have some regard for others; he can neither keep a position nor retain the patronage of customers if he neglects them.

It will not do to act on the idea that the world owes one a living and that the debt is to be collected regardless of a "quid pro quo;" for as a rule a fair return is exacted for all that we get from the world. If the laborer is worthy of his hire he should see that he earns his pay. To endeavor to snatch a living from a grudging paymaster is to antagonize. On the other hand, a good business man demonstrates his self-respect in his trim appearance, and all whom he may meet recognizes the fact at a glance. Having a good opinion of himself he impresses the fact upon others, for the world is quite apt to take one at his own valuation, unless the figures are manifestly too high. He is constantly on the alert to please, as he values the good will of his associates and thus is willing to render service to gain their approbation. This man is determined to make a success of himself as well as of his business and thus he studies how the end may be attained. He knows the value of cheerfulness and willing service, so he has a smile for everyone.

Will Maupin's Weekly, which has done such valiant work for the democratic state ticket, has ceased publication, and Mr. Maupin will, about the first of December, begin the publication of a monthly magazine, entitled "Midwest." It will be devoted principally to Nebraska and her resources. Will Maupin has already achieved great fame in the publication of his weekly, which has been greatly devoted to the special interests of Nebraska. The new publication will give Mr. Maupin a great opportunity to "spread himself" and we are willing to wage anything within reason that this magazine will be worthy of the support of everyone who has the true interests of our great state at heart. Success to Will Maupin and his "Midwest."

The mechanics of Plattsmouth have all been very busy this season and many improvements are in evidence of this fact.

If we don't get all our favorites—feel thankful for what you did get.
