BURLINGTON AND MISSOURI PACIFIC PAY THEIR TAXES

The Burlington and Missouri Pacific paid their taxes to the county treasurer today. The Burlington paid over the sum of $23,387.63, while the Missouri Pacific paid $17,083.61. The Missouri Pacific protested the payment of $241.98 of their payment, which goes to the school fund of the city of Weeping Water, claiming that the city exceeded their legal levy. The law allows cities of 1,500 population or over to levy up to 35 mills and the railroad company claims that the city of Weeping Water does not possess that number of inhabitants and therefore was not entitled to make the levy.

Joseph McCaffrey, vice president for the Nebraska Greeters of America, Omaha, states: "I cheerfully recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound as a sure cure for coughs and colds. Old Disease.

It is usually very difficult, and, in some cases, impossible to cure old or chronic diseases. In the treatment of chronic dyspepsia or indigestion the first duty of the physician is to thoroughly clean out the stomach and the intestines. The same should be done in the home treatment, for which we wish to recommend Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine. This remedy will not only clean out the digestive organs, but will, at the same time, strengthen them to such an extent that the worn out organs will again be capable of their work. Those suffering from partial or total loss of appetite, constipation, wind colic, pains in the bowels, headache, should at once try Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine. At drug stores, Jos. Triner, 1333-1339 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill. For painful muscles and joints use Triner's Liniment.

The cement bridge crossing Mill creek, in the east part of town is now completed and is a most commendable piece of work. Just what the expense of construction amounted to is not at hand, but one thing is certain, there will be no further expense for many years to come. Commissioner Switzer of this district is a firm believer in putting in permanent bridges and culverts where they can be done. The bridge just completed shows the advisability of building in this manner and is a standing monument to his memory.

Service Which is Measured in Seconds!

Telephone service is the only kind of which this is true. A patron waits minutes for a street car, an office boy, a messenger, or a waiter. He waits minutes, also at his bank, at the department store counter, or at the theatre ticket window. He waits all day for merchandise to be delivered, or for mechanics to answer emergency calls. He must wait till next day for the delivery of a letter or a ton of coal. But the Telephone Service is good and prompt when judged by much higher standards.

The average time in which our operators answer subscribers is four seconds, which is practically instantaneous service.

From that time, till the patron is actually in conversation with the desired party, there will be seldom an interval of more than thirty seconds, most of which is taken up by the man called in reaching his telephone.

Service which is courteous and accurate, and is measured in seconds, is unique in its usefulness to the business man.

Don't allow your competitors to make better use of it than you do.

FIND MAINE'S LOST TURRET.

Located With Guns in Place in Havana Harbor.

During the work of removing the cofferdam built around the hull of the battleship Maine Captain Pope, in charge of the work, found the forward turret of the ship right side up with the guns in place. It was located forty feet from the place where Major Ferguson found the barrette overturned.

The strangest thing about the discovery of the missing turret is that Major Ferguson, in driving the first piles for the cofferdam, found the top of the turret short of all rivets 125 feet from the place it occupied on the ship. When the water and mud were removed and the ship's bottom was revealed the barrette was found near the ship's side, twenty-five feet aft of its position on the vessel, and overturned. This led to the natural belief that the turret with the guns was under the barrette in the mud.

The turret must have been blown forward with the guns. Why it should be thrown forward and sink without overturning, while the barrette was thrown aft and overturned, is a problem for a naval board to explain.

now we will be able to answer intelligently when central says, "Number, please." The book shows over 430 phones on the list at this exchange, which is a great increase over the former lists.

CITY OF SALONKI HAS NOTABLE HISTORY.

Turkish Stronghold Famous in Ancient and Modern Days.

Among the European strongholds of Turkey Salonki, which was recently captured by the Greeks, has always been conspicuous on account of its strategic position at the head of the gulf of Salonki. It is 140 miles south by west of Sofia, and is the capital of the vilayet which includes the districts of Salonki, Serres, Drama and Monastir. The city has been described as one of the most picturesque in Europe, its houses rising in terraces from the flat shore to a height crowned by the seven towered citadel and surrounded by ancient walls and towers. The view from the gulf, with the towers and minarets soaring above the mass of buildings, is said to be unique among coastline horizons.

Remains of former civilization have long made Salonki famous. Within the city's walls is the so called triumphal arch of Constantine, Las Incantadas, an entrance to a long destroyed hippodrome, sections of two Roman highways paved with lava, and two massive Roman gateways.

There are several churches (now mosques) of the early Christian civilization, whose decorations, still well preserved, make them important in the history of Byzantine architecture. The principal of these are known to all students of architecture as the mosques of St. Sophia, St. George and St. Demetrius. St. Sophia was probably erected by Justinian's architect, Anthemius, and it was turned into a mosque in 1580. Its casings of white marble have been copied in several recent examples of Byzantine architecture.

The prosperity of the city, achieved principally through maritime commerce, is so great that it ranks second only to Constantinople as a Turkish seaport. The splendid harbor is protected by a breakwater 1,500 feet long. The Austro-Hungarian railway system affords easy access by land with the rich valleys lying toward Belgrade, Adrianople, Sofia and Constantinople. The speech of the city is known as "Ladino," a corrupted form of Spanish introduced by the exiled Spanish Jews, who comprise more than half of the city's population.

Under the name of "Thessalonica" the town was a place of great importance to the Romans, and it is famous in connection with the early history of Christianity because of Paul's Epistles to the Thessalonians.

In 390 A. D. Salonki was the scene of a dreadful massacre perpetrated by the command of Theodosius after the city had become a defense of the ancient civilization against barbaric invasions. Constantine repaired its port. The Slavonic tribes strove vainly to take the city throughout the seventh century. In the ninth century Simeon of Bulgaria came against it because of an effort to transfer the whole of the Bulgarian trade to its port. In 904 the Saracens took the place by storm and sold as slaves 22,000 of its inhabitants. In 1185 the Normans laid a ten day siege to the city, which ended in its capture by assault and the perpetration of nameless barbarities. In 1876 the French and German consuls at Salonki were murdered by the Turkish populace.
