We are in receipt of a letter from one of our valued Murray readers telling of a recent pitch game they had not a thousand miles from Murray, and how bad the other fellow was skinned. The case is a big man meets a little man, of course the big man beats the little man, and the little man got mad. The big man said nothing and the little fellow intended to but failed—because he did not win the game. We will not publish the letter, for fear of hurting the little fellow's feeling.

One of our good farmer friends from near Murray tells us that William Schlichtemeier, over in Mount Pleasant, has been making some very valuable experiments in the deep soil turning line. Mr. Schlichtemeier claims that deep plowing will prevent the land from washing, and from what our friend tells us he is about right. His crops in all lines are proving better, and his land remains in a much richer condition than in the days when he was not turning the soil so deep. Mr. Schlichtemeier's farm shows that he understands his business when it comes to securing results from his farm work.

THANKSGIVING DAY AT OLD KENOSHA

"Uncle Eph" Tells What a Time He Enjoyed and What a Big Crowd Was Present.

Say, Mam, you missed haf of yer life by not goin' with me to that dinner they had at Kenosha church on Thanksgivin'. You never saw anything like it. I swan, I was astonished. I didn't know there was so many things could be scratched together as what they did have cooked and fixed up. If table legs ever did groan, I think them ought to a groaned, but I guess they wa'n't made out o' that kind o' stuff, 'cause I didn't hear 'em groan. They he! up heaps an piles o' stuff, but they was a standin' up just as straight when I left as they was when I went.

I tell you, they was a lot o' people there. I was middlin' airy and they was quite a bunch thar when I got thar. An' they kep' a porin' in till I began to wonder where they were a goin' to poke 'em all, but they all squeeze in an' got set down somehow, an' I tell you, we listened to a fine sermon from that Taylor feller what preaches fur 'em—he preached while the taters was a cookin'.

I seen they had a lot o' stuff a hangin' aroun' on the wall. They tol' me it was fancy work, I never said nothin', although I didn't know what that meant. I jist thought that it was somethin' that I didn't know nuthin' about. I reckon it was fancy or they wouldn't a said so. Enny how, a couple o' chaps got up arter supper an' sold it off to the highest bidders. I guess they must a brought 'em quite a little wad, case they all look pleased.

They had a little pen built up in the corner where they had candy an' popcorn on sale, an' I tell you, mam, they sold it, too. It wasn't that old runny kind o' candy like what you used to bile fur our little uns. No, sir-ee! I tell you it war hi-fa-lu-tin. I guess they made it some new-fangled way that ole jays like you an' me don't know nuthin' about. An' I thought them little gals what sold it out was kind o' hi-fa-lu-tin, too—now don't get mad, Mam, fur I didn't mean nuthin'. I guess the gals turned in quite a sum with their candy. But, honest, Mam, they was purty.

My, the way them wimmen did dig into the work when we begin to drap down to the table, fur they had it fixed so's twenty-five or thirty could eat at the same time. An' they had so many different things that agin' they got aroun' with some of each, I tell you it kep 'em a gittin' up an' a gittin'. But they stayed with it all afternoon an' night till I left, an' the last I see they war still a gittin' up an' a gittin'.

They must a realized somethin' like eighty dollars, for before I left I hearn 'em say it war gittin' beyond seventy, an' they war still a flin into the table. I tell you times has changed somewhat since I was a youngster. Fur them times they never even had sich dinners as that at weddin's. An' if they had a bumped us fur a quarter, we would a got paralysis of the pocketbook right to once an' our appetites would a been so upst that we couldn't a digested corn flakelets. But then we had lots to be thankful fur, same as we have now. An' good times! Well, I guess we had 'em. But how-sum-ever!

I thank the Lord Fur the Thanksgivin' day I spent at Kenosha with the K. N. K. An' I tell you, Mam, As sure as sin, If I'm here next year, I'm a goin' agin.

—Uncle Eph.

An Important Thing.

In one of his lectures, a celebrated physician said that it is more important to empty the bowels than to fill the stomach. We advised often our readers never to allow remnants of food to remain in the intestines, where they ferment, decay and poison the body. The best way to keep the digestive organs perfectly clean, healthy and strong is to use Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine. In diseases of the stomach and the bowels, in torpidity of the liver, where it is of the utmost importance to prevent constipation, this remedy gives excellent results, as also in nervousness, headache, rheumatic and neuralgic attacks and in female troubles caused by constipation or weakness of the blood. At drug stores. Jos Triner, 1333-39 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago. The quickest relief in painful joints and muscles give Triner's Liniment.

From Europe to America.

The sons and daughters of all European nations coming to these hospitable shores will sooner or later be absorbed by the great American nation. This idea was reproduced by Joseph Triner, manufacturer of the famous Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine, on his beautiful Calendar for 1913. It shows ships arriving at the New York harbor with new immigrants. Around the picture are maidens of different nationalities, and in their midst—the ultimate result—the American girl. A copy of this Calendar will be mailed to those who will send 10c to Jos. Triner, 1333-39 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago. 12-5-d&w-31
