"HUNTING A MAN" SUNDAY EVENING

The Christian Church Was Well Filled With Interested Listeners Sunday Evening.

From Wednesday's Daily.

Sunday evening at the Christian church the theme of "Hunting a Man" was discussed by the Rev. D. L. Dunkleberger to a large and appreciative audience. In the hunt it did not appear to be the object to find one with as goodly proportions as King Saul, who towered above his fellows "like old Goliath tall—his spear a hundred weight." The stature did not matter so much, though a fine physique is desirable. Not a man with a little, starved, shriveled, narrow two-by-four soul, whom, when he came home his dog would sink under the bed to get away from his presence, but one who would represent the "big brother," which the Elks use as an illustration of some of the principles of their order, and which the children would delight to call "Uncle Tom."

To measure up to the standard of what is necessary for the man which was being hunted, one must be of a gentle disposition, especially to the ladies, whether old and wrinkled or young and fair, to the children and everybody with whom they may chance to meet. In fact he must be a gentleman in the true sense of the word. He must be industrious, for otherwise he is throwing away his patrimony, strength, youth and that valuable asset, which is only spent once, and to bring the best results must be well invested the first opportunity—that is time.

One must live within his means, and have safe working margin left if the exigencies of the case require; no greater effort must be put forth or greater skill acquired with which to earn, for when one continually exceeds his income by his expenditures, the time must come when dishonesty will creep in to supply the deficiency.

With many more apt illustrations was the lecture explained, punctuated with pointed paragraphs, showing the ideal man and the one which when the time comes for trial is the strongest and best under any circumstances. Above all he must be right with his Creator, right with his fellows and with himself.

IMPROVING THE TELEPHONE PLANT

Work Progressing in Fine Shape, and When Completed Will Be Better Equipped for Service.

From Wednesday's Daily.

The work of improving the plant of the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph company in this city is progressing in fine shape, and when it is completed it will be one of the best equipped plants in the state. The new multiple switch-board that is being installed in the exchange will improve the service of the company 50 per cent and at the same time make the work of the operators lighter. On the old-style boards that were formerly used the operators were compelled to make connection from different sections, while on the new one all the numbers appear before the operator and it is not necessary for them to leave their seats to make the connections, greatly enhancing the rapidity of the service and making it much more convenient for the party calling. The desk of the head operator is fixed so that she can be able to tell how each operator is working and keep perfect track of the operators at all times. The long distance board is equipped with a calculagraph which keeps a perfect record of the time used by the patrons of their calls, and is absolutely accurate and does away with the necessity of the operator making out the ticket by hand and the necessity of listening to the conversation.

The company will also introduce the common battery system of telephones, that does away with the magneto system requiring batteries in each telephone and insures the subscribers against the common trouble of weak batteries, as the storage batteries in the office will be tested each morning and kept in perfect condition, which insures better service. This will of course necessitate the putting in of new telephones, and all the 'phones now in use will be relegated to the scrap heap and new ones installed. Under this system the necessity of using a bell to call central will be done away with. The telephone company will also reduce the number on a party line from four to two and install an all metallic system that will overcome the trouble so often had of hearing other parties while telephoning.

The cables conveying the wires into the exchange will be changed to run into the side of the building from the alley, where the connections will be made with the new switch-board. There will be a double protection here against lightning or other disturbances to the line that will prevent the burning out of the switch-board, there being a large copper wire conveying the current to the ground and two guards on each wire to stop the current from getting into the switch-board. The wire chief has a desk in this room where he can test out each line without being forced to bother the operators and the switch-board and be able to secure much better service for the subscribers. The work of installing the new equipment is in charge of Mr. Froese of Chicago, who was sent here by the Western Electric company and is an expert in his line, and the work is being done in splendid shape.

The company has just recently placed a new heating plant in their building and has spared no money to put the building in as fine shape as any in the state, and with the pleasant rest room just completed makes it very convenient and comfortable for the operators, and the new arrangements will give the patrons a splendid telephone service that cannot be beat anywhere.

He is a warm personal friend of the Rev. Allan G. Wilson of this city, who has known him for years, as he was a member of Rev. Wilson's parish at Elkhorn, Wisconsin, when he was stationed there. ## A DEAD MAN DISCOVERED BY LINEMAN NEAR CULLOM

A telephone message was received at the depot this afternoon announcing that a lineman had found a man lying along the Burlington tracks near Cullom, apparently dead, and requesting that medical aid be sent. A special train was sent out, carrying the Burlington surgeon, who will examine the man and bring him to this city. From the message it was thought the injured man was a brakeman named Freeman, who had apparently fallen off of a moving train and had received very serious injuries, if not killed, but the exact condition of the man could not be told until the arrival of the doctor at the scene of the accident. He had apparently been lying along the tracks for some time when found by the lineman.

The Social Side of the Farm Telephone!

In the long closed season or at planting or harvest time, there is a mighty pleasure to be had from a telephone chat with neighbors.

The telephone is essential to the men and their work on the farm not a bit more than to the women and children who enjoy the friendly intercourse with neighbors which the telephone makes possible.

The Long Distance lines also furnish an extensive and valuable service.

No farm should be without a Telephone.
