THE WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS PICNIC IN VICINITY OF BURLINGTON BRIDGE

From Wednesday's Daily. The members of the Woman's Relief Corps yesterday morning assembled to the number of some sixteen, and with a number of the young folks the crowd was increased to twenty-four, when the caravans conveyed them to near the big Burlington bridge, where the party alighted and arranged for a day of enjoyment, and from the smiling faces of those returning it was plain to see that the event had been one that they all enjoyed. The party went well supplied with baskets of good things to eat, including freezers of ice cream, and the time was most delightfully spent there, and both dinner and supper enjoyed in the delightful shade along the banks of the grand old river. The jolly crowd waited until the cool of the evening, when they proceeded homeward, feeling that the event had been one of complete joy to everyone in the party and they are all looking forward to another event of the same kind.

W. S. Askwith of the Masonic Home was a passenger this morning for Omaha, where he will look after some business matters.

TOM'S ADVICE TO DICK AND HARRY.

(Written for the Journal.) Come, men, let's look this suffrage scheme. Quite squarely in the face. Then act, with all our energy, in this vote-getting chase. We know that women, in the end, Will surely have their way— Did you ever try to keep one From having her full say? We cannot longer fool them— With that story, stale and old, Of slighted household duties, That so often we have told. They will raise their eyebrows loftily. And with an injured note, They'll say, "Do you quit business Just because you go to vote?" There's not a bit of use for us The women to offend; They'll make us feel so lonesome That we'll loathe in the end. Woman suffrage is coming Just as sure as you are born, And women, then, might set us blowing At the wrong end of the horn. I can't afford, financially, To lose the job I hold, And woman's chances at suffrage Is just as good as gold. You see, we're going to want their votes— Sometime we've got to bow— So I am going to doff my hat To woman suffrage now.

To the hand that rocks the window Must our banners be unfurled, 'Tis the same that rocks the cradle And the one that rules the world. Its cause is justly righteous, Though oftimes its methods queer, But sometimes a patient's system Calls for treatment quite severe.

When the pulse is weak and lagging And the ear is deaf to sound; When the eye is dull and listless, When no heart-beat can be found, When the hand is cold and palsied And the feet will not respond, When the lips are closed in silence, 'Twixt life and death a bond.

Is it not a time for action? Lest the patient droop and die, The physician must be active, He must every method try, When resuscitation will not bring the patient back to life, Then he must use drastic measures, Must turn to the surgeon's knife. So in England 'tis with suffrage; Deaf the ear and blind the eye To the many earnest women Who have raised the "Justice" cry. We, who know not of the struggles Of the downtrod foreign wife, Protest loudly 'gainst the tactics Used to gain in this great strife.

Because of taxes without voting, Our forefathers fought and died, And these women for the same cause Now are standing side by side, But instead of gun and saber, They are using bomb and rock, Strange a how one-time hero tactics Now so many people shock.

Can we blame these slighted women If, when pleading is in vain, They resort to drastic measures And the man-made laws profane? Have sons and husbands quite forgotten Our forefather's holy strife? What is just and right for husband Must be just and right for wife.

Let women help us make the laws By which each woman must abide, And we'll find them working with us, Hand-in-hand and side-by-side. Then let's not utter, men, a protest, Nor raise a voice to say them nay, For their cause is justly righteous And the right will win some day.

Let's be gallant to our mothers And be gallant to our wives; Show them that they are our equals, And we'll all live truer lives. Let no rocks or clubs or switches In America be used.

Let's act upright toward our women. So no law will be abused. Men, pray tell me this, why should we, Who for taxing would not stand, Unless we had our say-so, Make of women this demand? And as Nebraskans, read our motto. Look and read it once again! "Equality before the law" Means women, same as men! Grace Wiles Hall.
