WERE THEY INDIANS OR PALE FACES?

Unearthing of Numerous Human Skulls in This City Creates Excitement.

There was much excitement created throughout the city yesterday afternoon when the workmen engaged in working around the residence of W. D. Jones on North Third street unearthed some eighteen human skulls, which had been buried at the northeast corner of the house, and several of the skulls were found under the edge of the house itself. A couple of days ago the men unearthed another skeleton a few feet north of the house and were not expecting to unearth any more, when in digging for the placing of a concrete wall, the spades of the workmen uncovered the remains of what is generally believed to be Indians, although it will be impossible to tell until an expert examination of the different skulls is made, whether they are really Indians or the victims of some early pioneer tragedy.

The bones so far as found seem to be merely the heads, although several other parts of skeletons have been found. In early days the trail to the west lay along the south bank of the Platte river and over the hills along the bank of the Missouri river to the site of this city, where, in the year 1848, a ferry was established by Libeas T. Coon, a Mormon, for the use of the Saints then on their westward way, and by means of this a route was established along the bluffs, and it may be possible that some party of emigrants may have fallen victims of the Pawnees and Otoes, which tribes held sway over this section of Nebraska. The house beneath which the skulls were found has been in existence for at least sixty years, and it seems from all appearances that the bodies were buried there before the erecting of the building, and as that part of the house is merely resting on the surface of the ground without a solid foundation, it can be readily seen why the bones were not discovered at the time the house was erected. The fact that the skulls had been so long in the earth made it hard to tell just whether or not they were Indians, as the jaw bones and lower portions of the skulls had crumbled into dust, and without these distinguishing parts of the skull it was difficult to judge of their origin. The authorities of the historical societies of the state and those interested in the early history of Nebraska will be called upon to pass judgment on the question of whether they are Indians or not.

Rev. Father M. A. Shine of St. John's Catholic church, one of the most eminent and able students of early history of this state, is of the opinion that the bodies may be those of Otoe Indians, who in the early days (about 1855) secured some salt pork from the traders and immigrants and gorged themselves to such an extent that seventy of them died, and he believes it possible that the skulls found may be the remains of the Indians who feasted too well of the salty meat. Father Shine has devoted years of study to the matter of the settlement of Nebraska and his knowledge of this subject is far superior to that of any in this section of the state, of that city, one of the leading and it may be that this is the result of the untimely feast of the Indians, which after the lapse of so many years has been unearthed. One of the skulls was taken to Omaha this morning and submitted to the inspection of Dr. Gilder, historians and leaders in the research work of early Nebraska history, and after an inspection he was of the opinion that the skulls were not those of Otoe Indians, but that they were probably of an older tribe, and in his belief had been buried from 75 to 100 years. A message was received by Mr. Jones this morning from the authorities at the state university that experts would be sent down on the 1:15 train to take charge of the work of digging out the unearthed skulls, and they did not desire to have them disturbed, so all work was suspended awaiting their arrival.

TWELVE YEAR OLD LAD SENTENCED TO THE REFORM SCHOOL

This morning Albert Gardner, a 12-year-old lad, was brought before Judge Allen J. Beeson in county court, charged with being incorrigible, and as the lad had been in the court once before on the same charge, the judge sentenced him to the State Industrial school at Kearney, where he will be taken by the sheriff. Young Gardner, it seems, a short time ago stole some six dollars from his mother, who is a lady in rather poor circumstances, and hid the same in the lot near the Methodist church, and after being questioned by Chief of Police Rainey, he finally came across with the money. After the sentence to the reform school was pronounced upon him he put on quite a scene at the county judge's office, crying and throwing himself around, but was finally quieted down and was led out to await his being taken to the school.

THE SPEED LIMIT TO BE ENFORCED

It is Also Necessary for Those Driving Teams to Keep Their Side of the Road.

The agitation that is being aroused over the question of the speeding of automobiles brings forcibly to mind the fact that there is needed the enforcement of that section of the law that provides for vehicles on the highway, keeping on the right-hand side of the road or street. If this part of the law was lived up to more by the drivers of teams, as well as automobiles, it would greatly lessen the chances of accidents, especially on the residence streets and country roads, where more or less speed is not half as dangerous as the chances taken by parties driving on either side of the street they may take the notion to, regardless of the rights or safety of others who may be traveling along the same road in compliance with the law, and when this is done there will be much less complaint and danger of parties being injured than at present. As a general rule the automobile drivers are more observing of this rule than others who cannot or do not bring themselves to comply with the provisions of the law, and if possible the city should see that provision is made in an ordinance drawn to cover the question of the traffic on the highways of the city. In drawing the ordinance the matter should be weighed carefully to see that the automobile owners are treated as fairly as possible under the state law, which is quite one-sided.

BIG DOINGS AT NEHAWKA SEPTEMBER 11

The good people of Nehawka have arranged to hold a big picnic at the Sheldon grove, near that place, on Friday, September 19, and as this will be the last picnic or celebration held in the county during the year it will draw a large crowd and the committee in charge of the event will make every effort to make it a splendid success in every way. Hon. Frank J. Edgerton, deputy attorney general of the state, will be the orator of the day, and the Merchants' band of Nebraska City will furnish the music for the occasion. In the evening a grand ball will be given by the A. O. U. W. lodge of that place, the music being furnished by the Svoboda orchestra of this city. The sports of the day will consist of an automobile race, as well as a red-hot ball game between Nehawka and Union for a purse of $25. The citizens of Nehawka are very hospitable to the stranger within their gates and anyone who attends the picnic can rest assured that they will be treated right all the time by the Nehawka people.

ST. JOHN'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL OF THIS CITY

The St. John's parochial school in this city, which has for the past few years been under the charge of the sisters of St. Dominica, has been changed and is now under the supervision of the Sisters of St. Benedict, another Catholic sisterhood, who have taken over the work of teaching the children of the church. The Catholic school in this city has in the past been conducted in such a manner as to turn out some of the most talented students who have entered the High school of the city to finish their schooling, and the department of music in the school has been one of the best in this part of the state.
