fancy was posed at the right side-back. Quite "in the picture" was her big black velvet bag, swung by a heavy silver guimp.

Another very interesting costume, less dressy in type, is shown in the second sketch. Soft putty-colored duvetyne striped with royal blue was the body fabric. It had a little black satin waistcoat and a flat collar of squirrel dyed royal blue to match the stripe in the fabric. The hat was of the duvetyne, with a band of the blue fur framing the face, and a blue and putty colored stick-up posed jauntily at the left side. With this was worn a delicate vest of pleated net and cream-colored Valenciennes lace. The skirt was a simple four-gored affair, quite innocent of drapery, worn with a crushed girde of the black satin.

Speaking of weddings, one naturally reverts to the trossaux, and this calls to mind some of the wonderfully lovely negligees brought out this season. Two

CONSERVATIVE GOWNS WORN AT AUTUMN WEDDINGS

A New Negligee, Inaccurately Named The Smoking Robe

NOVEL LINGERIE FOR TROUSSEAUX

New York, November 12. Much interest has recently focused upon several fashionable weddings. It has become the custom to linger later and later out of town each season, and the scene of each of these notable country estates. Nature is truly at her best in early November, and the house parties attendant upon these events were in every instance voted a big success. The air had just enough snap to it to make the glowing wood fire a magnet, and to render appropriate the wearing of smart autumn toilettes.

The gowning, while extremely elegant, was on the whole marked by conservatism. It is an acknowledged fact that the well-bred woman does not, except in isolated instances, accept literally the extremes of fashion; rather, she modifies and individualizes the most pronounced features. Once in a while one encounters someone on the type of Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, perhaps, who possesses the stature and personality to wear striking gowns without being over-conspicuous; but such exceptions only prove the rule.

On the majority of women known for their good taste in dress, we now see drapery, voluminous, many times; but, owing to the softness of the material in which it is expressed, seldom bulky; tines frequently full and a trifle flaring, but not often exaggerated; paniers more times simulated by the folds of the skirt than actually an over-drapery.

A very effective black velvet toilette was worn by an attractive Western woman. It is shown in our first sketch. The jacket was very short in front, but came down long in the back. Its folds were held in place for three-quarters of the circumference of the waist by a loose, drooping belt. Collar and cuffs were made of one of the prettiest novelty velvets we have yet seen. The gown was champagne blue and green, on which appeared splashes of gray-orange, dull green and red, so arranged as to form an indefinite plaid.

The scant, three-piece skirt of black velvet was trimmed with two wide bias bands of the plaid. With this gown was worn a very charming hat, having a soft "lam" crown and flaring side somewhat scantily cut skirt was hung a semi-fitted jacket extending almost to the knee. It was long of sleeve, high of neck, but collarless, and untrimmed save for an old gold guimp outlining the neck, sleeve edge, and front closing, which was fastened with gold cloth buttons and loops. A Cossack cap of the crepe, finished with a dull gilt tassel, went with the outfit.

In lingerie, too, a number of interesting innovations have appeared, all designed along the line of elimination. It really seems as though the final stage had been reached in a novelty just brought out, "the garter skirt." It is made up in its entirety of a single-pleated chiffon ruffle, sometimes with an overlay of lace and sometimes without, attached to the "common or garden variety" of round silk garter. This, if you please, in lieu of the petticoat!

Quite practical, however, and delightfully pretty are the new lingerie combinations. The chemisantalon, which consists of a single muslin garment to be worn under the corset, has a chemise-like top buttoning down the front, cut in one with which are regulation knickerbockers buttoning about the knees. Another garment which has met with an enthusiastic reception is the envelope combination. This, too, has the chemise top, the skirt section being brought down long at the back in a tab which buttons to the front, forming the drawers. When worn the lower part of the garment looks like a scanty little circular petticoat.

In Every Sickness.

A good physician's first step, in every sickness, is to clean out the intestines, because his medicines cannot do any good as long as there is waste matter in the bowels. For this reason we often have called the attention of our readers to Triner's American Elixir of Bitter Wine, which they should use as soon as any indisposition is noticed. It cleans out the intestines thoroughly, in a natural way, with pain or any other discomfort, and without weakening the body. It also stimulates the digestive organs to work and in this way the battle for health is usually won. It is, in fact, a great first aid to almost every disease, and especially in diseases of the stomach and the bowels. Clean out the body and keep it clean—and you will avoid many diseases.
