The Key to Paradise.

HRIS was half reclining on sofa, propped about with pillows, and in a Chinese wrap of magnificent old brocade, all gold and twisted embroidered dragons. Her delicate beauty was unimpaired by any trace of illness, though enhanced by the unusual brilliancy of her eyes and a flush, too hectic for health, that mantled the fine oval of her face. Matt ran to her, taking her hands and kissing them, and then sank on his knees beside her. His cares, his wretchedness, the misery of his renunciation-all were gone as the soft bare arms closed round his neck and drew it would shake the world. Those were down his head. Chris' eyes opened very wide.

"What a funny, strange, impetuous boy!" she exclaimed. "Wasn't there any door?"

"There were people banging that in, yowling for my destruction." continued Matt tantalizingly. "I don't know what they wanted. I'm sure, but they were going at it in the liveliest way with an ax, and 1 chose the window rather than wait and find out."

"I'm telling it all the wrong end foremost," went on Matt. "It's an extraordinary story-Chris, it's astounding. I can't make head nor tail of it. I was actually offered $100,000-think of it, Chris, positively $100,000-right there in greenbacks to betray a man I knew. Had it forced on me-almost stuffed in my pocket."

Her surprise, disbelief even, caused him to draw forth the revolver in witness.

"It's not a joke, Chris," he said. "I bought that this morning and may be mighty glad I did so."

The momentary flash of steel was thrilling in that quiet room and amid such peaceful surroundings. Chris uttered a little cry, breathing fast and gazing at him in amazement.

"You frighten me," she gasped out. "Matt, I'm frighter ed. What does it all mean? Tell me!"

"The trouble is I don't know myself," he returned as a tide of depressing recollections swept over him. "I am somehow a blind cog in other people's business, and the thing that hits me hardest is that they have ruined me.

C. A. Schroeder, Owner

COLUMBUS, NEBR., Nov. 14, 1913.

T. H. POLLOCK AUTO CO. 2218 Farnam St., Omaha, Nebr.

Gentlemen:-

Yours of the recent date asking whether or not I am satisfied with the Henderson automobile, which I purchased from you about three months ago, has been received and will state that I am more than pleased with the Henderson car.

I own two other automobiles, one a high-priced car, costing considerable more than the Henderson, but will say that I can take my Henderson car, burning pure kerosene over the steepest hills and over country roads with better results than with my high-priced car, and at less than one-half the expense for fuel,

I have driven my Henderson car over our country roads at the rate of 45 miles per hour and do not know now much faster I could drive it. I am thoroughly satisfied with the Henderson as now built, with the gasoline tank for starting, and the kerosene fuel for running and it is a perfect success and I do not heaitate to recommend it to anyone thinking of purchasing an automobile. I pay 10c a gallon for kerosene and get from 15 to 20 miles per gallon on our country roads. 1 could not do this well on gasoline at 20 cents per gailon with any other car that I know of.

As far as power, speed and hill-climbing is concerned, I would as soon have my Henderson De Late Four-Clylinder Kerosene Car as any six-cylinder automobile I have ever seen.

My Henderson has attracted considerable attention in this vicinity and a number of my friends are talking of purchasing the Henderson car.

Wishing the Henderson Co. the best of success, I remain
