THE NEBRASKA LIGHTING COMPANY FAILED TO FURNISH LIGHT AS PROMISED

There was some surprise expressed yesterday by the patrons of the Nebraska Lighting Company over the fact that the current was not turned on, as was advertised it would be, and those who had planned to use the current in different ways were disappointed. Mr. Brooks, who had made the arrangements for having the current on during the entire day, was called out of the city, and on account of the clear day and sunshine the persons in charge decided that it would not be necessary to furnish the service and accordingly there was no current put on until the regular hours. While perhaps there was no great demand for the use of the electricity during the day, when the matter had been brought to the attention of the public through the paper, it was only natural for the public to expect that they would be allowed to use the current, and such actions do not tend to make anyone have more confidence in the intentions of the company, and if they expect to have the support of the general public they will have to produce the goods as promised.

BIBLE CLASS BANQUET A GREAT SUCCESS

The toastmaster made a very clever introduction of Rev. F. M. Druliner, who, for the first time, was heard by the public of the city outside of his pulpit, and his eloquent address, while brief, was filled with deep thought and showed a wonderfully clear mind that saw the best things that life could possibly hold. Rev. Druliner had as his subject, "The Strength of Yielding." He remarked he was more than pleased to be present at the banquet, where so many of the young men of the city had assembled, and he was thrilled with the possibilities that lay in such a gathering. He said he had worked in small towns and had studied the question of the man closely and was of the opinion that when this question was solved, that of the boy and girl question would soon be settled. He in following out his subject told of several cases where the persons yielding in the contest had shown greater strength and courage than those who had won, and by their courageous actions, had become stronger in defeat than the victors. He asked for more earnest work for the men in the churches and was glad that the trend of the times was toward this way, as for too long the women had been compelled to carry the burden of supporting the churches, but the awakening spirit of the twentieth century was for a man's church. He pleaded with the young men present to lay their life work along the big things of life and not be content with the little matters and petty things that make up existence. He said each day the demand for clean-cut Christian young men was becoming more pronounced, and everywhere there was a call for men of this kind to take up positions of responsibilities. He closed with a most eloquent plea for better living and purer lives of the people, and his address was one that deeply impressed everyone with its force and feeling.

The Young Men's Glee club was next on the program and gave two very pleasing numbers, the first being "The Sailor's Dream," and in response, they favored the gathering with a comic selection, "The Good Looking Maid," which simply brought down the house, and the young men belonging to the club can well feel proud of the showing that they have made since their organization, and they now possess a very able organization of young vocalists.

The speaker of the evening, J. Dean Ringer, of South Omaha, who is himself a comparatively young man, was introduced in a very pleasing manner by the toastmaster, and after complimenting the ladies for the splendid treat afforded, launched forth into his subject, that of "The Triangle," and he stated that the triangle could be perfect or imperfect with one part longer than another, marring the perfection of the whole, and he took up the triangle, comparing it to the three things entering into the human body, that of body, mind and soul. He called the attention of the banqueters to the fact that it was necessary for a good strong body to make a good strong character, to sustain the other functions of the human system, and he urged the young men to care for their physical health, and not to allow this wonderful piece of machinery to be run down. He then took up the subject of the mind and pointed out that in this organ of the system was the battleground between right and wrong, and that by the cultivation of lofty and pure thinking the mind could cast out all evil and degrading thoughts. He also pointed out the need for direct and positive thought that would enable a person to grasp the problems presented to them and deal with them. It is this that gives the college man an advantage over his fellows, that he has been trained to this direct thought and is enabled to deal with questions as they are presented to him. The speaker also pointed out the needs of the spiritual side of the human being, without which all else is of little avail, and his preceding remarks led up to this, that of the better living and better citizenship of the country, which was of such necessity to make the communities better, and he urged the young men to take hold of the problems and make the community in which they lived better by taking part in public affairs, and exercising their best and purest judgment, not for the dollar, but for principal. To illustrate his plan for action on the part of the young man, he told several stories of the warfare that has been waged in South Omaha to free that city from the conditions that exist there now and have existed there for years, and he stated as long as the men of the community allowed themselves to be corrupted and placed the value of money greater than the needs of their fellow-men, these conditions would continue. The address was delivered in a straightforward way that left no doubt as to where the speaker stood on the questions he discussed, and it is to be regretted that everyone in the city was not given an opportunity to hear this excellent plea for the better things of life.

Following Mr. Ringer, the toastmaster called upon E. H. Westcott for a few remarks, and this gentleman thanked the gathering for having been present as guests of the class on this occasion, and his own appreciation of the kind words the different speakers had given the class.

Rev. D. L. Dunkleberger and Rev. J. H. Steger were called upon for a few remarks, and while they were not on the toast list, they very kindly gave a few minutes to expressing their pleasure at being present and for the spirit shown by all the gathering for the uplifting of themselves and the community. The very enjoyable gathering was closed by a splendid solo by Don C. York, and he responded gracefully to the encore by singing that always beautiful song, "Annie Laurie," being accompanied by E. H. Westcott on the piano. This brought the close to a most inspiring meeting.

THE SUFFRAGISTS OF LIBERTY ORGANIZE AND ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

(Union Ledger.)

A meeting was held in Woodman hall last Saturday afternoon, having for its object the promotion of the cause of "the ballot for women," and the meeting was attended by quite a number who desired to hear the matter discussed by Mrs. F. M. Hall of Lincoln. Miss Jessie Todd of this village presided, and D. W. Foster made a few remarks upon the subject, after which The Ledger editor was called upon to explain the nature of the little election that is being conducted at his office. Mrs. Hall was then introduced, and for about forty minutes she spoke of the conditions that will be changed and improved when women vote, laying some stress upon the fact that giving the ballot to women is only doing them the justice that rightfully belongs to them. Mrs. Hall is a very pleasant speaker, and her arguments were presented in a very fair and courteous manner and presented sound logic from her point of view.

After the speaking those present proceeded to organize a league, the name adopted being, "Union Equal Franchise League," membership cards having been passed around and many signed and placed on file. A constitution was adopted, after which officers were elected as follows:

President—Mrs. Nettie Stanton.
Vice President—J. T. Reynolds.
Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Jessie Todd.
Auditor—D. W. Foster.
